EMBROIDERIES!

HERE WE STRIKE A FAVORITE THEME.

Any effort of the Writer to portray the beauties of this stock, must fall far short of the fact!

In the first place, a description of the patterns is impossible, then again, we cannot convey through the medium of an advertisement an adequate idea of the merits of this class of goods as to durability and price.

They have no Brands!
Their Beauty has much to do with price!
Their Rarity must be considered!

BUT

When you add to all these considerations (as in this case) the fact that the prices are so astoundingly low! Then indeed, WONDER is invoked.

$20,000 Worth

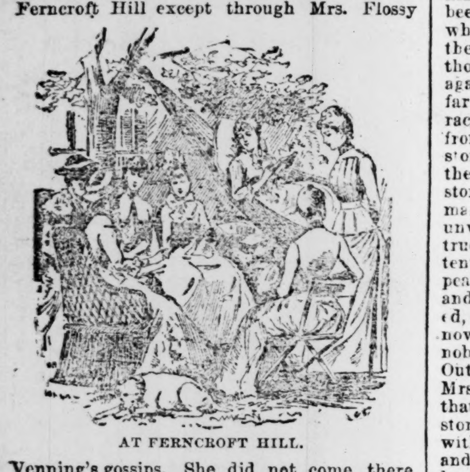
A LITTTE TALK.

A STORY.

By Harriet Prescott Spofford.

[Copyrighted, 1886, by S. S. McClure.]

Such a lovely thing it was, that house on Ferncroft Hill, with its lawns and gardens and groves about it, you could never fancy evil coming near it. Such a lovely atmosphere of peace and beauty was there, such lovely women were sitting in their wicker chairs on the flagged space under the shadow of the lofty group of interlacing elms, surrounded by the brilliant beds and great vases of flowers flaming in the sun beyond! For all the world such innocent ideal life it seemed, this life of theirs, in such a place, as that life pictured on the Watteau fans. But after all, was that Watteau life anything but wolfish guilt and conspiracy masquerading under lamblike fleece with pastoral gambols?



AT FERNCROFT HILL.

Yet, to say truth, there was never woman made with less conspiracy and guilt about her than Mrs. Louie, the responsible life and soul of the place; I doubt if she was ever acquainted with an artifice before that cruel December day; certainly she never was afterward. And surely her paler shadow, Miss Margaret, had less of earth than heaven in her composition; and the breath of reproaah in any sort had never touched the stately Laura, nor the pretty Rose, nor Julia, nor Virginia, nor any of the rest of the sisters and sisters-in-law and cousins who made the place gay and helped live this life of a perpetual pleasure party. So why did I speak of the Watteau life of guilt at all? When Francis and Russell and Herbert came home in the afternoon from the hot and dusty city it seemed to them that they came to a life above the clouds, a course left over after Eden, and they grumbled all the morning at going away, and felt as though there were wings on their feet, hurrying, impatient wings, all the afternoon in thinking of coming back. It was so cool there under the trees, so sweet, so far from turmoil! No thought of trouble there, no loud voices, or bitter words, nothing more noisy than the bees and breezes in the tops of the trees, nothing, at least, till Mrs. Flossy Venning came, and then it was a ripple of laughter and exclamation and question and answer all day long, breaking in on Julia's song, or Rose's guitar, or Laura's slow reading of some verse she loved, or Mrs. Louie's lullabies; and when it was not laughter it was deep, absorbed interest in the last thrilling recital of the strange doings among the people whom Mrs. Flossy Venning knew or heard about, but who, for the most part, seemed to be a sort that never entered into the innocent circle of Ferncroft Hill except through Mrs. Flossy Venning's gossips. She did not come there every year, however, and when she did come she brought such word of the outside world to these gentle people who knew so little of it that she was like the open pages of a fairy book to them. Their own life was so quiet that personal news of those whose names they heard in dull rumor far remote, or read of in the journals, gave a sort of enlarging acquaintance with them, and Mrs. Venning found herself encouraged till word of the great player's domestic meannesses, and of the great novelist's private jealousies, and the great poet's sly love affairs, led on to gossip about any of her acquaintances that had the least piquancy or flavor. If they had known it was gossip, how horrified they would have been! As it was, they considered it only Flossy Venning's little talk. Today it was the story of the way General Tollifer abused his wife and the way that woman held up her head, and called him "Dear," and smiled at people when everybody knew her arms were black and blue, and her spirit, oh! her spirits were black and blue, too! "Ah, how thankful I ought to be," thought Mrs. Louie, "that Francis is the perfect character he is!" And tomorrow it was the story of the way in which Maria Burns smuggled her diamonds through the postoffice, would you believe it? pin after pin, with a diamond in the head of it, just pinned into a letter, the officials thinking nothing of much value would be sent so carelessly. "And when you see Arletta at a cabinet reception, if you ever do see her, Rose,—it's Rose's turn to go somewhere now, isn't it, since Laura went to Florida last year?—when you see her with a perfect choker of diamonds round her throat, you'll know how she came by them!"

"But, I don't see," asked Laura, looking up from her book and her hammock; "are things of that sort so much cheaper abroad?"

"Worlds cheaper! And you get lovely things in the pawn shops. Why, we got a turquoise once in a pawn shop at Munich as big as the end of your thumb, for forty pfennings—just think of it! And then Arletta escaped the duties, too. Oh, yes, there never was so cheap a necklace in this country as Arletta's, except, to be sure, the one that Kirke Outerbridge sold for his sisters, and that, well that was such an outrage on decency! Only imagine it, Louie, Helena's diamonds that had been her great-grandmother's given to the eldest daughter for four generations, and that brother of hers sold them for a song and spent the money on his pleasures!"

"How shocking! Whom did you say he was?"

"Why, I told you—her brother Kirke. And you never could believe it to see him," continued Mrs. Venning. "Superb looking fellow; so tall, and bright-faced—just like one's ideal of a Greek god."

"I never had any ideal of a Greek god," said Mrs. Louie, feeling blindly that the cherishing of such an ideal was like the tacit countenancing of such a person as this man who defrauded his sister, it may be.

"Well, I should be sorry to have my ideal do such a thing as that," said Rose, taking a new needleful of her arrasene, and happy in the consciousness that such people and such things were far outside their sphere.

"Wasn't it dreadful? You know their father left an immense property, enough to make them all very rich—the Outerbridges. He must have left a million dollars' worth of houses and real estate, and Kirke was the executor and manager, and all that. I don't know whether so much as that, all at once, turned his head or not, but he led such a life! You heard of him everywhere, they say; one wild whirl of dissipation; and house after house went, one piece of property after another, and at last there was nothing left of all that fortune but the old homestead mansion in what had become a cheap out-of-the-way street, and their pictures and books and jewelry. He refused to sell that old mansion house, to my certain knowledge, because the buyer insisted upon settling the price upon the girls; and they had to give a mortgage on the house, in order to live, and then to redeem the mortgage in time to prevent foreclosure they decided to pledge the diamonds, and handed them over to Kirke; and instead of pledging them he sold them outright, and that is the last they ever heard of it. I never quite understood about the mortgage and all that, perhaps; but I know the woman who wears the diamonds—at least I've had tqem pointed out to me on her. It wouldn't be so bad, you know, if he hadn't been living a luxurious life himself of riotous days and nights, as they say, till he is completely worn out with his dissipation by this time. Never was anything but what they call a man about town, anyway. I do pity those Outbridge girls!"

"Poor things, its a shame, a wicked shame!" said Mrs. Louie; "can't anything be done to save what they have left and keep that out of his clutches?"

"I don't suppose there can. They adore him, you know, and believe in him, for all. He is just the sort of man some women adore. I despise the sort!"

"And so do I. What a despicable wretch! And such a sacred trust—his own young sisters, his dying father's charge! How could he? Oh, Flossy, it seems to me the world out there is too full of wickedness to continue—something must happen—the way it did to the five cities of the plain. I can't be thankful enough that we are shut in from it here. It makes me tremble to think how superior Franci is to all that kind of men—how good he is never to bring home anything of that corrupt world. Perhaps he never sees anything of it—he never mentions such things, that I remember. I should feel as if the slime of the serpent had soiled us all if such a man slept one night beneath the roof here."

"Well, he isn't likely to come this way," laughed Flossy. "Your life would have no attractions for him. And if he did you would all be captivated with him. He knows how to win the heart out of your body."

"Stop a moment, Flossy," said Laura, who was now sitting up in her hammock, with a white, set face. "I think it right to say to you, to Louie, to all the rest, that I know this gentleman concerning whom such extraordinary statements are made. I know him very well. And there is not a word of truth in all of them. He is the noblest, loftiest—"

"Dear, dear," said Mrs. Flossy. "Didn' I tell you he could win the heart out of your body? Here's a case in point. What was that—oh, my goodness, what was that? Thunder? And there it is again! You don't sit out under these trees in a thundergust and tempt Providence—"

"Tempt Providence to what?" asked Rose, although gathering up her balls.

"To nothing, so far as I am concerned, for I go in," said Mrs. Venning. "I shan't stay out with thunderbolts blowing about these hills. Gracious, what a flash! I should like to live in California or somewhere where there are no thunderstorms; but there you have to have earthquakes, and I don't know what is worse. 'There's nothing true but heaven,'" she sang, rushing after her flying silks and wools, and hurrying away, followed by all the others, save Laura. She sat there till, careless of rain or wind. If the lightning chose to thrust its blade down among the trees and find her out—let it! It would be a good day's work. For what was this story about Kirke Outerbridge that she had just been obliged to hear—Kirke Outerbridge, in whom the love of her life was bound, although neither Rose, nor Louie, nor Virginia, nor Julia, nor Margaret, knew that she had ever met him. How should they, indeed, when it had been settled between the lovers in Florida, whither Laura had journeyed with a friend the year before, that not unless his health was thoroughly regained should love be spoken of again between them—health seeming then a far off thing to Kirke Outerbridge with his racking cough and aching side, his inheritance from his gentle, early-dying mother. The storm came down about poor Laura there; but there was a worse storm in her poor heart—a storm of anger and disgust at the outrage on a man's good name, of half a doubt, a pang of unwhispered horror lest any of it might be true—a storm of indignant protest, of impotent wrath, of self-contempt, of passionate appeal to love. But at last she rose intuitively and went in before she was completely drenched, and except herself, and a vague tremor now and then of Louie's in relation to her, nobody there thought anything more of Kirke Outerbridge or of his sisters. The interest of Mrs. Flossy Venning's next story superseded that in their minds; and at last she and her stories had gone together, and other guests with other characteristics had taken her place; and Mrs. Louie was busy with her pleasant household cares, and her care of other people, and Laura with the poor, in whose sorrows she lost her own—if it really were a sorrow to love and be beloved, although unknown to any. And so summer wore into autumn, and the autumn into winter, as cold and wild a winter as ever made the coming spring seem an impossibility and a miracle.

A very different place from the lovely hillside home was the small city house in the dark, noisy street, where the young girls kept the basement and one floor and rented the rest to lodgers.

That one floor they had certainly made charming with the remnants of an old splendor that had once surrounded them—some beautiful family portraits of clustered children, some old draperies whose very tarnish was a charm, books, screens, bits of china, nothing, indeed, new, but everything suggestive of quiet beauty and of real comfort, although within close and somewhat narrow bounds. "If anyone had told us that we girls could have been so contented on one floor, with screens and sofa-bedsteads, and dear brother in just a hall chamber, we never should have believed it," Anna, one of the girls, was saying to an intimate, in that cozy twilight time which tempts to open expression.

"Well, we should have been, if he hadn't such an inventive mind; we owe the whole of this pretty comfort to him," said Kate. "We should have sold everything at once, and have trusted to luck for mean new things—just fancy—or cheap furnished rooms. But he said they would never bring a fraction of their worth to us, and no matter what happened, we should not be stripped of the things that had always been about us, and that makes even this place seem like home. There never was such a brother! How much he has been to us ever since father died and left things so confused, though brother says if he had lived everything would have worked out well; but one misfortune has followed on another ever since, and I'm sure nobody else in Kirke's health would have had the courage to do all that he has done. He has so many ideas, too. Do you know, he took Helena's old diamond necklace, it was great-grandmother's, and in great, heavy silver settings; she never could have worn it, Helena couldn't, and we don't go anywhere now where any of us could wear diamonds; and he raised enough money on it to buy this house—he wouldn't positively sell it, because he says if his schemes work right he'll have it back again—and he calls the house a gift from our great grandmother, and says how happy it would make her to know she was providing a home for us now; but we call it a gift from our darling brother! He sent us all away for a month at the seaside, and when we came back he brought us here, and here all our pet things; everything moved, everything done, every room in the house rented to respectable people, so that we are sure of a living, he says, let what will come to him. O, we shouldn't care anything about a living if anything ill came to him!"

"And he took the little hall chamber himself," said Helena, "and insists upon paying us rent for that. He is such an amusing boy! He says it is probably the best thing in the world for him, though not for us, that father's estate turned out as it did; for while father gave him plenty of money, and he had no responsibility, he went about leading a gay, careless life that might have degenerated into something worse if he hadn't been brought up with a round turn; and that having to be out in the world, and dealing with rich and gay people, it is fortunate he has such a sense of responsibility, as if their wines and cards and horses, and all that, ever tempted him; the thought of us on his hande would be and has been his saving grace. Isn't that beautiful for him to say when we felt we were really only a burden? O, I don't know what we should do if it wasn't for him—he is brother and father and husband to all three of us. We don't want anybody else as long as we have Kirke."

"He is so kind, so cheering, so helpful, so unselfish, so considerate," chimed in Anna.

"And it's just a pleasure to look at him, he's so beautiful!" cried Helena.

"Well, if this isn't hero worship," exclaimed their crony, "tell me what is?"

"But we're worried to death about his health," continued Anna. "That cough of his tears us every one to pieces—as much as it does him—it seems too bad that it couldn't have come to one of us girls, mother's cough. We all set out last fall that he should go to Florida for it—it took our united effort to carry the day; and it was long first; but Dr. Day said he would not guarantee his life a year if he didn't go, and if he wanted to live for nothing else than to be of use to us girls he must go. And he said—only just think! Kirke said it was of the utmost importance for him to live till the city could be persuaded to take the old Outerbridge place for its new public buildings and run a street through the garden—that is his great scheme, you know, to make all our fortunes—the city will pay such a price for the place, and the lots in the garden will be real riches, comparatively speaking, if he can only manage to have it done, or if he can only do it all by himself; but it takes so much time and talking and influence. I am afraid he will get all worn out in trying, and we urge him to let it all alone, and just live along as we are. But then he says no, he accepted the trust from his father to clear our fortunes out of the estate, and he never will rest till he does it. What do we care about fortunes?"

"They are very pleasant things—fortunes—nevertheless," said their listener.

"The dear heart forgets all about himself," said Kate. "I know he thinks he is doomed. For sometimes," lowering her trembling tones, "he looks at us, and I see tears swim into his eyes, and I know he is thinking who will take care of us, stand between us and the world, after he is gone; and then we all make believe we are so merry, and Helena begins to play a tarantella, and Anna begins to sing and dance it as if she was so gay she couldn't keep still, and I just sit and hold his hand. O! I don't think I can bear it!"

"I don't know if its all for us that sometimes Kirke is so dull," said Helena. "Once in a while I fancy there was somebody in Florida—and you know Kirke is so high-spirited he never would marry if he thought his health did not justify it, if he thought he was not going to live. And then I don't know but he may have reasoned that he ought not to marry with us upon his hands—and, oh, you don't believe," cried Helena, quite breaking down, "that we are really standing in the way of Kirk's happiness, we three great, useless girls? It would break our hearts! And it would be so lovely if he had a beautiful wife to make him as happy as he always made us, and to be one of us, too, even if she had to live in our crowded quarters. We would do everything for her—only it seems as though it should be happiness enough for her just to be Kirk's wife."

"Kirke is so bright and sunny and original," said Kate, taking up the burden.

"I think I am awfully good to listen to you," said their friend, "since I am not in love with him, and since—"

"O, but he is always saying and doing such unexpected things—once he took all our Christmas presents, what they would have cost, you know, and made us send a man dying of consumption out to Texas, and called him our emigrant, and followed his fortunes, and the man's alive now on a ranche and bringing out other consumptives. O, yes, Kirke always comes in cheerful, he always has something to tell, he always has some new pleasures to propose, if its only a night at the theater."

"And he makes you leave off thinking of yourselves by giving you something else to think of. He tells us of people he has found poorer than we are, and he says if we have nothing else to give we can give ourselves; and he goes with us sometimes, and comes for us other times, when we go to sit and read with persons who are bedridden and disabled and have nobody. O, there never was such a man as Kirke. He's too good for this world!"

"Nonsense!" said the friend. "Nobody's too good for this world. But I will admit, having known him all my life, that he's better than anybody else in this world!"

"Well, it makes us cringe sometimes to think how perfect he is, and how miserable he is. It's just in the line of the way things move that we should lose him because he's so invaluable, and so—"

"Things don't move that way," said Helena. "It's wicked to say so. Only, if anything should happen to Kirke, it would happen just the same to all of us, he is so precious to us, and we do so want him to live after all these weary years in which he has had so little ease and happiness of his own. He has been living father's life and ours, not his own ——"

"AND THEN KIRK CAME IN."

And just then the key turned in the latch, and Kirke came in, the tall, bright, knightly fellow, and after the exhaustion of a fit of coughing had subsided, proceeded to show the girls and their friend a new trick of legerdemain, a most interesting trick, which turned a parcel of pennies into a shower of chocolate creams and then he took from his great-coat pocket the last new poem and read a part of it to them; and, after the friend had gone, out came the maps illustrating his business schemes with the old house and land, and he explained anew to the sisters his immediate plans, showing them the advantage of this and the disadvantage of that. "If the city does this, it is ease and competency for us all," he said. "But lately it has seemed to me that if I could possibly do it myself, or with the aid of but one or two others—one or two others I must have—then it is absolute wealth. And I've half the mind to try. Half the mind!" he said. "I mean to try. I know of a good fellow down on Ferncroft Hill, with plenty of ready money. I think he would do anything I ask—I know I would do anything he asked. If I could get him to go into this, I could get Col. Evans, too, and that would make the thing sure. It comes to me like an inspiration—and you should always attend to an inspiration on the spot. If it wasn't so confoundedly cold and raw and getting up for a blustering night I'd be disposed to try it. And I don't know why the weather should stand in the way. I might take the 3 o'clock train tomorrow, if I don't find Ferncroft in town, that gets me down at half past four, do my work there, take the train for Evanston afterward, and be back on the midnight train. No matter if it is Saturday. And if I succeed, then the whole thing's as good as done—my girls are independent, let what will follow—and possibly—possibly—"

And when the girls had gone off behind their screens to their sofa beds, and he had tired himself puzzling over his accounts, where for years few had been the pennies to be recorded as wasted, he still sat there, with the last of the fire throwing its flicker over walls and draperies in all fantastic shadows, lost in a happy dream, the place full of visions all rising from that one word "possibly."

Poor Kirke Outerbridge! Since the years of his early manhood no one had ever tested more fully than he the truth of the words that "man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward." From the day his father died and left on his hands his three sisters and the most curiously involved estate that ever fed lawsuits, he had never known what rest was. Now he saw rest just before him. How fair looked its green vales and purple hills; and in some one of those blessed recesses perhaps health and life with Laura; and, if not health, yet at any rate it might be that Laura would be with him yet a little while before the last, and so life seems already heaven before he left it.

It was an early December twilight on the coldest day of the year, a day that seemed the colder because there was no snow on the hard and frozen ground, when a carriage drove rapidly up Ferncroft Hill, and a visitor was ushered into the great square drawing-room that always seemed in winter like a space of the remaining summer. There were none there at the moment but Francis and Mrs. Louie; and as the light of the fire shot up on all the blue and silver of the room, and laids its ruby glow on the guest's face and lofty bearing, Mrs. Louie found herself thinking that with such a face and bearing the knights of ancient story should have carried themselves—when all the fabric of her too swift fancy was shattered like a pricked bubble by Francis' exclamation, as he cried: "Outerbridge! Kirke Outerbridge! You down here and out in this shocking weather! Louie, this is my friend, Mr. Outerbridge—my wife, Kirke. Why, tell me what this means? I am delighted to see you—but in your state of health—or want of health—this weather—you see it's surprising!"

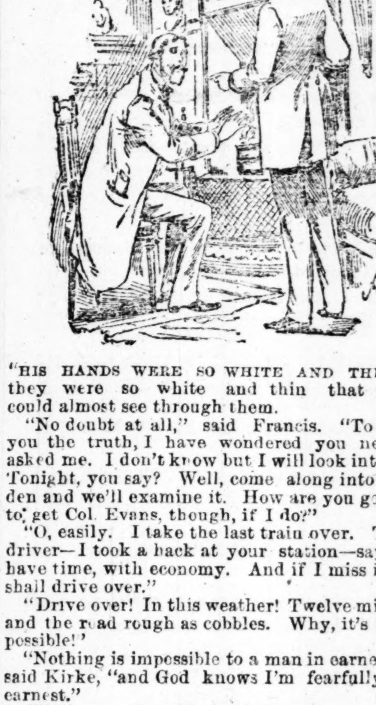
"No wonder," laughed Mr. Outerbridg, after a stately greeting.

"No wonder that I wonder? Here, draw this chair to the blaze. You must be chilled—"

"No, no. The fact is, I had a matter of business that wouldn't wait."

"You mean you wouldn't wait. The same impulsive half-winged mortal that you used to be!"

"And I can't wait now. It has occurred to me, in relation to the affair of which I was once speaking to you, some time ago, that it is quite as feasible to manage that in a private way as through the city, and, if you and colonel Evans care to go in with me on equal terms, it might be worth your while. Only the paper has to be signed to-night, for Monday the city acts, and, if we are before them, as they don't really care, it will be all right. There is no doubt it's a great thing, and one worth doing;" and, as he warmed his cold hands at the blaze,



"HIS HANDS WERE SO WHITE AND THIN. they were so white and thin that you could almost see through them.

"No doubt at all," said Francis. "To tell you the truth, I have wondered you never asked me. I don't know but I will look into it. Tonight, you say? Well, come along into my den and we'll examine it. How are you going to get Col. Evans, though, if I do?"

"O, easily. I take the last train over. The driver—I took a hack at your station—says I have time, with economy. And if I miss it, I shall drive over."

"Drive over! In this weather! Twelve miles, and the road rough as cobbles. Why, it's impossible!"

"Nothing is impossible to a man in earnest," said Kirke, "and God knows I'm fearfully in earnest."

"Well, you mustn't miss it then."

"I won't. Of course, provided I have your signature first. Without that, as you will see, it's of no use to go to Evans; with it, he will sign at once, and my fortune is made, and yours considerably enlarged. I shall leave all the details of future management a good deal in your hands and his—your experience is more than mine in that direction."

"Well, come along. We'll settle the matter pro or con speedily. If you won't stay overnight I wouldn't have you lose that train for twice the money! It would be blood money!"

But as they went their way to the door, Kirke Outerbridge looked about him at the place haunted by one fair presence, seeking perhaps some sign of her. How should he have known that it was upon Laura's open book that quietly and unseen he laid the fresh and dewy bunch of violets he had brought?

At the word "business" Mrs. Louie had swiftly and discreetly withdrawn; and now coming to a fuller comprehension of the event she stood in the adjoining music room, where she would still hear the inarticulate murmur of their voices, quivering with indignation.

Kirke Outerbridge! That wretch, that reprobate, that dissolute, bad man, the swindler of his sisters, the utterly, base and contemptible person, inside her doors! That creature here, speaking familiarly with her husband; possibly, if he missed his train, to stay all night, to sit in the drawing room, to sit at table with her and her sisters, to speak with them? She felt it a contamination! she felt it an insult! she grew more and more angry, and every moment seemed an hour while she waited, and only served to work her into fresh fever. There were some things, she said to herself, that she could not bear. This sort of thing was one of them. She would not bear it. She could endure a great deal, but this was altogether beyond her strength or her willingness. Francis could not ask her to become the companion of men who ought to be convicts; Francis could not possibly know about him; there was no time for her to give warning; she had rather die herself than to see Francis the companion of such a man. Already she felt disgraced in the air; already they were dragged down into the slime and corruption proper to such people, when suddenly Rose ran in saying Francis was calling wildly on the universe to know the exact time for the last train, he having lost his time table.

"HE STRUGGLED FOR THAT LAST BREATH AND WAS GONE."

"Why, what is the matter with you?" she cried. "You look like the statue of a bronze Fate here in the dark!"

Wicked and trembling Mrs. Louie! She knew perfectly well the time of the last train. But she answered directly, as calm as she could take her breath:

"Francis knows that I never had any time table."

"But what time is it now?" cried Francis from the den. "I don't mean, of course, by my watch or by any of these absurd clocks of ours, but by your real old reliable Jurgensen that never fails. Finished writing, Outerbridge? Here's my name then—there's never a decent pen in this house! You see, two minutes will make or mar you. If there are forty-four minutes you can make the train, and if there are only forty it's no use at all trying, and you may as well stay here—you've been in worse places—and be up bright and early on Monday morning for the sunrise train, and accomplish about the same thing."

"It is too much risk of losing all, was the reply, in deeper tones.

"Louie, don't you hear me?" cried Francis.

There was but one idea in Mrs. Louie's head as she listened, hearing everything with fatal distinctness. He had to have forty-four minutes in order to reach his train. If he had only forty he would stay the night, and over Sunday, and that night too. She felt in her infatuation of horror that all the perfumes of Arabia would not sweeten the house after that. Be rid of him she must, be rid of him in any way. Who knew what degradation he might work even upon Francis in that time! Meanwhile Francis had been interviewing the hackman who was thrashing his arms at the door, with sundry subdued objurgations, and had learned that the train left at 6:15 sharp.

"Did you ask me what time it was?" said Mrs. Louie from the distance, in the cold voice that, from some little experience, in spite of general loveliness, Francis ought to have known boded mischief. "Wait a moment. By this watch it is just half-past 5. It is a little slow, may be." Poor Mrs. Louie! She had just quickly put the hands back thirty minutes. She did not see that hardly more degradation could have been wrought on Francis by this injurious companionship than had already been wrought on herself by the effort avoid it.

"Half-past 5!" cried Francis. "Well, then, if you will, you will. Off with you! You can just make it, and catch your breath. And good luck to your fishing." The next minute the wheels were thundering down the hill and into the highway, rougher with its frozen ruts than any corduroy road heaved by the frost could be, and the door had slammed, and the current of icy air had ceased, and Francis was calling her again, and she was drawing a long gasp of delighted relief. "Yes, he can just make it, poor fellow," said Francis. And Louie thought with great content that if he didn't make it he could go to the inn, and there was an end of him so far as the Ferncroft family was concerned. And then she looked 'round to see if Laura had known anything of this precious affair. The poor little woman had a great deal on her hands in looking out for other people's souls. Mr. Outerbridge had really been sent out in the cold by her with exactly fifteen minutes to do that which required forty-four. A blind sense of guilt was just behind Mrs. Louie, and overtaking her. As a natural consequence, all at once she was very cross, the vexation of a moment before coming again to the top.

"How came such a man as that in our house, Francis?" she demanded.

"Such a man as what?" asked Francis, turning in surprise.

"As that creature who has just gone!"

"Outerbridge! What are you talking about? Why, he is a friend of mine."

"A friend of yours!" And her tone spoke not volumes merely, but encyclopedias.

"Yes, a friend of mine! And I should like to know what you mean by your phrase 'that creature!'" and the rising voices bid fair to put all the love-lines of the ideal life of Ferncroft Hill into eclipse.

"And with that out came the whole story, with hot, hurried, indignant breaths and shaking lips. "And I think I have the right to ask how a base, bad, dissolute wretch like that, who robs his own sisters and spends all the money he can lay his hands on in his own pleasures, came to be a friend of yours?" said Mrs. Louie at the finish.

"May I ask where you heard all this precious stuff?" said Francis gently.

"Flossy Venning told us every word of it!"

"I thought so. Well, it is an infamous falsehood. Do you hear me, Louie? An infamous falsehood. That woman has wrought more contamination under this roof in one hour than an army of really bad men could do in a year. Outerbridge has been my friend for twenty years. We were in the same class. We have drifted apart in our varying pursuits, but when we meet we always begin where we left off. I would do a great deal for him; he would do anything for me. I never expected my wife to be the one to blacken his character. It is terrible, Louie. The best and finest fellow I ever met, the purest, the most self-denying, the most high-minded. Louie, you ought to get down on your knees to him for this!"

"I—I will," stammered Mrs. Louie before she thought, in a sudden contrition.

"And don't ask that woman in this house again, Louie."

"Mrs. Louie hung her head; the fire had all gone out of her. "But—oh, Francis—if this is true—"

"True?" roared Francis. "Of course it's true!"

"Then—then—don't—oh, don't you think we'd better send after him? He—he can't catch that train! What was he going to do if he didn't catch it?"

"He declared that he should take a team and drive over to Evanston. But I don't believe he will do such a foolhardy thing. His life is too precious to those girls of his to risk it that way. But—I don't know—he is a wonderfully determined fellow—he always carries out what he undertakes. If he should drive—"

"In that single coat, with no wraps or hot soapstones, and this wicked weather—it's two below zero now! Oh, Francis, let Teddy put the horses right in and overtake him, and at any rate carry him your big cloak and some rugs, and if he must go let him have our close carriage"—all in a breath.

"Its no use now, anything of the sort. He's too far off to be caught. Whoever drives Kirke has to drive like the son of Nimshi. Teddy is off on his holiday, besides; and Patrick's cold is too bad for him to venture it. No, he's a man grown, and must direct himself."

"He had only fifteen minutes," said Mrs. Louie under her voice.

"What!" cried Francis. "What! Then you and Flossy Venning have killed him!"

They had indeed. That night a team that had been jolting and bounding and twisting over the long frozen turnpike for two hours and more stopped at Colonel Evans' door and a man, who had been breathing the bitter blasts of the rasping air for all that time, and coughing and strangling with the prolonged stinging as every frozen inhalation plowed its way through fire, chilled now to the marrow, and covered with the cold sweat of his effort for breath, dragged himself out and went in at the opening door.

How warm was the soft atmosphere of the wealthy house, sweet with its spicy fire and blooming flowers, and dazzling were the lights! Were these women, kind women, these fair shapes about him? Ware these walls about him, or parts of shining and receding space? Was this the end? "I have come," he tried to say, and fell heavily forward into the chair that some one had wheeled to receive him. It was the end, indeed. His mouth was full of blood. He struggled for that last breath, and was gone.

"Flossy Venning killed him," said Francis afterward, "with that reckless tongue of hers, that never stooped to find the truth or falsehood of it all." He never said a word of Louci's share. "Flossy Venning killed him with a little talk just as much as if she had done it with a knife!"

SKIN AND BLOOD

Diseases from Pimples to Scrofula Cured by Cuticura.

Hundreds of letters in our possession, copies of which may be had by return of mail, repeat this story:—I have been a terrible sufferer for years from Diseases of the Skin and Blood; have been obliged to shun public places by reason of my disfiguring humors; have had the best physicians; have spent hundreds of dollars, and got no relief until I used the CUTICURA REMEDIES, which have cured me and left my skin and blood as pure as a child's.

COVERED WITH SALT RHEUM.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are the greatest medicines an earth. Had the worst case of Salt Rheum in this country. My mother had it twenty years, and in fact died from it. I believe CUTICURA would have saved her life. My arms, breast and head were covered for three years, which nothing relieved or cured until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT, internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally.
NEWARK, O. J. W. ADAMS.

HEAD, FACE AND BODY RAW.

I commenced to use your CUTICURA REMEDIES last July. My head and face and some parts of my body were almost raw. My head was covered with scaby and sores, and my suffering was fearful. I had tried everything I had heard of in the east and west. My case was considered a very bad one. I have now not a particle of Skin Humor about me, and my case is considered wonderful.

ALABAMA'S IRON.

ONDERFUL STORES OF WEALTH IN HER MINES.

e Discovery of Iron in 1836—Its Early Stages of Development—The Mining of the Present Day and the Subsequent Manufacture of the Ore—Various Interesting Facts.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April n10.—[Special.]—That piece of ore is the finest I have anazed in this section, and it contains fifty-five nd two-tenths per cent of metalic iron."

The speaker was Mr. Alfred Brainard, the nalytical chemist who has analyzed most of he iron ores of this section of the iron belt of labama. The ore was from the new mines f Smith & Eastman, which re located on Red mountain, two and a half iles distant from the thirteen mile-post of the labama Great Southern railroad, northwest f Birmingham. The railroad company is ow building a branch road to the mines from he main track. These mines ow being developed are the ichest in the state. The outcrop covrs an area of five acres nd is from thirteen to twenty eet thick. Iron ore mining is interesting. he mine is usually located by the outcropings which is the ore from which the soil as been washed, and which can be seen on he side of the mountain. Imagine yourself n a ravine between two high hills, the soil of which is the color of dark red paint. On either ide of the hills standing out in huge boulers in places, is the rich ore of a reddish olor running in strata between layers of late. You see before you a large body of en in leather suits drilling and picking into he hillside "Look out," is yelled, and all ands scatter. A loud report is heard which is followed y a fall of blackened mass. This is an iron re bed, and the miners have made a blast on he out-crop. The out-put from these mines is om one hundred and fifty to one thousand ns daily, which is mined at a cost of fifty nts a ton by the miner. The ore is hauled ay to be used in the furnaces or to be shipd. The thickness of a strata of iron ore is nerally seven to nine feet. The Morris ine, near the city, has a strata of twenty-two et of solid ore, which runs several miles.

IRON FIRST MADE.

The first iron ever made on Red ountain was in 1865. During e fall of 1836 an old settler named arrell while on his way to Huntsville stopped e day at the residence of Mr. Baylis E. race, Sr., and told him he thought the red ubstance to be seen on the mountain was valable. It had up to this time been looked upas a brown dye. Mr. Grace waited until 65, and sent one of his boys with a wagon to ather the ore. He sent it to Smith's furnace, Bibb county, and had it melted and rolled to iron bars. With this iron he made horse hoe nails, which was the first instance of iron eing made from Red mountain.

In the early days of iron making in Alabama, two furnaces were built, and charcoal was sed in smelting. One of hese furnace plants is located t Oxmoor, a distance of seven miles south of he city, and the other is at Irondale, the same istance north. The Oxmoor furnace is now owned by the Eureka company, and has been converted to the use of coke. Of this plant THE CONSTITUTION printed a story sometime since. The furnace at Irondale has been long since deserted, and has an interesting history. The furnace was built in 1864 by the confederate government under the supervision of E. G. Barney and W. S. McElwaine. It was built when money and labor were scarce. The time required for its construction was ight months. The furnace was the first that nade iron during the war, and was in charge f Mr. H. D. Merrill, who is ow connected with the Elyton Land company, of this place. Merrill and McElwaine were connected with an armory at Holly Springs, Mississippi. In June, 1863, orders were received from Jefferson Davis to immediately ship all the o prevent it from falling into the hands f the union soldiers. The machinery was placed in the arsenal at Atlanta and was used for government service during the war. The furnace was destroyed by Wilson's raid during the fall of 1865. During the year 1869 the furnace was rebuilt and operated by A. D. Breed & Co., of Cincinnati, who carried on business until 1872, when the pine forestry gave out. This company sold the plant to McGee, Thomas & Co., who operated it two years with what timber could be picked up. It was abandoned in 1874, and is now standing a grim monmment of what was enterprise in the past. The building of the furnace in 1864 was one of the greatest difficulties. The south and north railroad was only run to the Cahaba river and the heavy machinery and iron was entirely conveyed by wagon. The bed plate of the planer weighed ten tons, and in hauling it ropes were used to get it around the bends in the road. The furnace was built for a ten ton limit, which was considered a big thing in those days in this section. The iron was considered splendid for making cannon, and during the war few were ever known to burst.

The development of iron in this section of Alabama is great compared with the days of war, but is yet in its infancy. Take the late result of the Alice furnace of the Pratt coal and iron company. It had been making an output of 125 tons of iron a day until the company put it in the hands of Mr. Brainard, who has, by scientific principles, made it yield 150 tons per day, and he says the capacity is even greater.

DEVELOPMENT OF IRON.

There are, in this section of the iron district eleven furnaces which are in full blast day and night. They are: The Alice, which is the property of the Pratt coal and iron company, which is operated by a capital of $2,200,000, and has a daily out-put of 225 tons of iron. The Sloss, which is operated with a capital of $500,000, and has an output of 200 tons daily. The Mary Pratt, which is the property of Messrs. H. F. DeBardleben and W. T. Underwood. It has a daily output of eighty tons, and is operated with a capital of $250,000. The Eureka furnace company, operated by a stock company with a capital of $800,009, with an out-put of 180 tons daily, and the Woodward iron company, with a capital of $250,000, and with a daily out-put of 125 tons. Besides these furnaces there are now being built a plant by the Pratt coal and iron company at Pratt mines, in which $300,000 will be invested, which will have an output of seventy-five tons daily, and the new Williamson furnace, nearly completed, which has a capital of $250,000, and will have an output of seventy-five tons daily. Besides these plants the Thomases, of Pennsylvania, contemplate establishing furnaces here this year, and the DeBardleben scheme will be developed, the latter of which will have a capital of $2,000,000.

THE ORE SUPPLY.

These furnaces are supplied by ore from the following mines: The Morris mines with a capital of $100,000, and a total out-put daily of 1,000 tons, supplies the Alice furnace, the Mary Pratt furnace, the furnace at Rising Fawn, Ga., the furnace at South Pittsburg, Tenn., the furnace at Cowan, Tenn., the Citico furnace company at Chattanooga, and the Dayton coal and iron company at Dayton, Tenn. The Eureka company mines its own ore, and uses 225 tons daily. The Sloss company operates its own iron mines, and uses 250 tons daily. The Woodward company has an ore bed which yields 200 tons daily. The amount of labor employed and the monthly wages of these furnaces are: The Alice, 500 men, with a payroll of $10,000; the Sloss 600 men, and a payroll of $11,000; the Mary Pratt 300 men, and a pay-roll of $5,000; the Woodward, with 500 men and a pay-roll of $10 000; the Eureka, 600 men and a $10,000 pay-roll. With the application of at least $4,500,000 cash the product of these combined companies would be a least tripled, perhaps quadrupled, and this would have an important influence upon the iron production of the world. What it costs to make iron in this section is immaterial to the outsider. None but iron men know its cost, and that seems at all times satisfactory to the producers for all practical purposes.

ADOPTING A BABY.

The Difficulties in the Way of Securing a Foundling.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"Is this the place where you have a three-weeks old girl baby you want some one to adopt?" asked a young man at a house on the south side last night.

"Yes," replied a rather stout, oval-faced woman of 50; "walk in." The invitation was accepted, and the visitor was shown into a small, but somewhat neatly furnished room.

"I've called," said the visitor, "to make some inquiry touching the infant you have to place with a family for adoption."

"Yes," returned the woman, "it's a beautiful little thing, with blue eyes and yellow hair, and its mother is a decent, respectable young woman."

"Well, can't I see the child?" asked the visitor.

"I don't know whether you can tonight or not," was the reply. "You see that is a branch of the buiness that my husband attends to entirely, and I never interfere with him."

"But you couldn't expect me to adopt an infant before seeing it, could you?" asked the visitor.

"Well, there's a good deal to be attended to first, you know," was the reply.

"What is to be settled?"

"In the first place the mother has got to be satisfied that the child will be given into good hands, and that it will be well taken care of."

"Where can I see the mother?" was the next question.

"Oh, she's out wet-nursing in a very respectable family, and you could only see her by appointment in this room.

"I'd like to know something about her before making an appointment to meet her. Is the child a legitimate one?"

"Oh, no. Why, bless you, do you suppose the mother would part with it if she had a husband to take care of her?"

"What! You don't find people to adopt illegitimate children, do you?"

"Bless you, we can get rid of all the babies we can get, and it don't make any difference whether the people who want to adopt them know it or not. Some people had rather adopt an illegitimate child than a legitimate one, because if they can get an illegitimate one they think they never will have any trouble about its parents claiming it some time or other."

"But I wouldn't like to adopt an illegitimate child," replied the young man.

"Then I'm afraid you don't want to adopt a child anyway," said the woman.

"Oh, yes I do," persisted the questioner, "and I'd like to see this baby that you want some one to adopt."

"I don't think you can see it before tomorrow," answered the woman, "and my husband would have to go with you."

"Can't I see the mother tonight?"

"No; but if you're anxious to see the child and its mother you will have to come tomorrow. My husband will send for the mother and have the baby brought here."

"Isn't the child with its mother?"

"No, the mother is out wet-nursing, I told you, and the child is being taken care of by a wet-nurse that my husband has employed for the purpose."

"Who is the mother?" was the next question.

"I wouldn't tell you her name, but she's a genteel and respectable young Holland woman about twenty-seven years of age. She's never been married, but she's a decent, nice woman."

"How many people have been to you to make inquiries about this child?" was asked.

"There must have been a dozen, but none of them were satisfactory, and the child isn't disposed of yet."

"What seems to be the trouble with those who have been here?" was asked.

"Some of them seem to be poor people who are scarcely able to take care of themselves, and others couldn't give the necessary references to the mother. The mother won't let anyone have the child unless she's sure it will be properly cared for. When we advertise a baby we often get letters from other cities, and we never have ony trouble in getting people to adopt nice looking babies."

The young man then took his departure, promising to call "tomorrow," when the husband would be at home.

INCIDENTS OF THE HUNT.

Bennie Ingram, of Monroe county, while out bird hunting, accidentally shot a negro in the head, inflicting a painful, though not a serious wound.

From the Blackshear, Ga., Georgian.

Mr. Henry Tatem killed an alligator near the bridge across the Alapaha, last week, measuring eight feet in length. Mr. T. brought one foot of his gatorship and gave it to Mr. Clarke, the railroad agent of this place.

From the Perry, Ga., Journal.

Mr. R. L. Judge went into Big creek swamp early before daybreak for the purpose of fishing. Having previously seen a drove of wild turkeys in the swamp, he carried his gun along. Not long after he arrived at the creek, he heard what he supposed to be a turkey yelping, He located the noise in a clump of bushes, and crept stealthily toward the spot. When within shot-gun range, he distinctly saw what he thought was a large turkey gobler. Mr. Judge fired, the gun being loaded with thirty buckshot, when a nego man leaped to his feet on the spot where the supposed turkey was shot at, five buck-shot having been lodged in the back of his head.

From the Fort Gaines, Ga., Advertiser.

Messrs. P. Kirkland, John West, John Jones, Jack McGugan and Jim McCorkle decided to visit an island in Gunn's field, where it was reported a great number of rabbits had taken refuge from the water. Reaching the field, they found it almost entirely submerged, and a lake 300 yards wide and too deep to wade between them and the island. They had no boat, but took an evaporator from Dr. Gunn's syrup mill, and three of the party, Kirkland, Jones and West, safely crossed. Finding the place literally alive with rabbits, Kirkland and Jones started back for the guns and the remainder of the party. When about half way the evaporator capsized, and the two men had a difficult swim of 150 yards. They finally reached the island, very much exhausted and almost numb with cold. Their friends on shore came to town to find means to relieve them. A boat was started down the river, but capsized, and its occupants had to swim for life. Mr. R. D. Williams then sent a boat in a wagon to the field, and they were rescued about 10 o'clock in the night.

Riddled With Bullets.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 9.—In Union county, three men named Lee, Shaw and Hoge called at the house of a negro named James Goodwin. After warming themselves beside the fire one of them raised a shotgun, which he carried, took aim and fired at Goodwin, shooting him in the arm. The other men, who were armed, also began firing. Goodwin made feeble resistance, finally falling on the floor, riddled with bullets. The murderers all fled, but have been captured, jailed and indicted. No cause for the crime is known.

After the Fall of Troy.

Troy has fallen; and never will be War like the war that was waged for me.
Could I but have those ten years back again,
With the love and the glory, the pleasure like pain,
The clash of arms and the din of the fight,
The feasting and music, the color and light—
Yet, mixed with it all, there sounded to me
Ever a mourn from the far-off sea.

There still remains this for all time to be—
The war or the world was fought for me.
Give them no pity who died for me there;
Men can nevermore die for a face so fair.
And what does it matter that now they lie,
Quiet and silent beneath the sky?
Remember that none evermore can be Back for those years in Troy with me.

As They Cannot Possibly

make a porous plaster having anything like the medicinal qualities of Benson's, the camp followers of the pharmaceutical profession produce tons of worthless plasters, and give them names which resemble in print that of the genuine, and, when, carelessly spoken, sound like it. For example, Cheap John druggists will offer you trash variously styled "Capsicum," "Capsicin," "Capsicine" or "Capucin" plasters, prefaced sometimes with the name "Benton's" or Burton's." We earnestly caution the public against the whole tribe of them. They are absolutely useless as remedies for diseases. To be sure they are cheap, but plain muslin is cheaper and just as efficacious. Ask for Benson's, watch the spelling, and look for the "Three Seals" trademark, and the word "Capcine" which is cut in the center of the genuine.

SALMAGUNDI.

TO LOVE OR NOT TO LOVE AS UNDER MAN'S CONTROL.

Judge Bleckley Appears Before the Salmagundi Club, of Athens, and Discourses Upon the Nature of Love—Professor Mell and Several Others Follow in Divers Veins, Etc., Etc.

ATHENS, Georgia, April 10.—[Special.]—The meeting of the Salmagundi at the residence of Mr. George Dudley Thomas was an event in the history of the club. A brilliant and cultured audience gave strict attention to the essay of the distinguished guest of the evening, Judge Logan E. Bleckley. The subject, as previously announced, was "Law as Rule of Feeling. The Command Thou Shalt Love." The essay was in the judge's own vigorous style, and his treatment of the subject was at once novel and original. Preliminary to his discussion of the main question, he spoke of law in general, classfying it under the two forms of intrinsic and extrinsic, the one inhering in and adhering to its subject, being a part of its existence, and essential to its being; the other positive or mandatory, controlling the subject by some power or will extraneous to it. His illustrations of this difference were striking and powerful. Speaking of the administration of law, as preceptive or as sanctioning, the former obeyed from the nature of the person or thing existing in accordance therewith, dependent entirely upon the individual, the latter enforced by authority, empowered to reward or punish. That the feelings are amenable to the preceptive power of intrinsic law, he asserted as undoubted. But whether the feelings, love, gratitude, charity, could be obedient to extrinsic power or law, threatening punishment for failure to obey, or offering reward for compliance, was the question. Would not compulsion placed upon them of itself and from their very nature destroy them? Is obedience to the command thou shalt love, not tantamount to saying such love is not pure because not voluntary? This led him into a discussion of will volitions and kindred subjects. Where, as some said, they got into the woods, the writer is frank to confess he got into the wilderness. One remark just there struck us with much force—the essayist said that man's will power was without limit, within limits, as if a man the limit of whose step was one yard, within that yard his power of stepping was as unlimited as though his stride could reach the sun, for, could such a creature be imagined, his power to step one yard would perchance be less than the man's ability to step the billionth part of an inch. In conclusion, he said, his remarks as to the command to love could apply only to the state of existence previous to marriage, for at the altar the law steps forward, and thenceforth was in force the imperative, "Thou shalt love."

Dr. Mell followed in an extemporaneous talk of five minutes, and in his own cogent and lucid way discussed the question proposed from the standpoint of mental and moral philosophy.

Professor White then took up the subject in its physical as distinguished from metaphorical bearings. Taking the observed phenomenon of the attraction of two particles of matter for each other, he denied that it resulted from any inherent law, but that it, like all other so-called laws of nature, was but the observation and experience of man. Denying then the existence of intrinsic law, he claimed that the phenomenon of love, while governed by no intrinsic laws, and not obedient to mandatory law, occurs like other natural phenomena, largely influenced by what we call mandatory law, by propinquity, by environment.

Dr. C. W. Lane spoke from the standpoint of the Bible. The natural tendency of the human heart being to evil, to hatred and to passions of like character, there can be no doubt that the feelings may be controlled and compelled too bey the divine command to love, a comand emanating from the law of God's nature, for He is love.

The rest of the discussion was much in the same line, so far as it touched the subject.

One of the pleasantest incidents of the evening, as well as one of the most delicate compliments to the essayist, was the quotation by Professor D. C. Barrow, in the course of his remarks on the theory of love, of some lives of Judge Bleckley's:

"Lady, lady, lady,
As I see you everywhere,
I know you are a phantom,
A creation of the air;
I know you are a phantom,
And yet, I know, to me
You are as manifestly real
As anything can be."

The club, by a rising vote, thanked the distinguished essayist for an evening of rare pleasure, to which he had contributed soably. The next meeting was announced to occur at Dr. C. W. Lane's. Essayist, Professor William Rutherford. Subject, "Astronomy."

"CLARA BELLE" DEAD.

A Noted Correspondent Drops Suddenly Dead in New York City.

New York Special to Minneapolis Tribune.

Mrs. William Thompson, better known as "Clara Belle," died suddenly this afternoon in this city.

She had apparently been shopping down town, and at about a quarter past 5 stopped at the corner of Fourteenth street and Broadway to board a street car. She crossed to the Fifth-avenue hotel side of Fourteenth street, and waited for a Sixty-fourth street car. Some bystanders saw her, as the car came along, raise her left hand, with a small crockodile skin hand-bag in it, to catch the driver's attention. Then she gave a faint scream, dropped the bag, and pressing both hands to her left side, would have fallen had not Officer Murphy caught her in his arms. A crowd at once gathered round, when, with the assistance of a second officer, Murphy raised her and carried her into the office of the Fifth avenue hotel.

Dr. Charles Gale, of San Francisco, happened to be in the office, and at once stepped forward to offer his assistance. But it was too late—she was dead. Meanwhile, the hotel clerk had telephoned to Dr. Fordyce Barker, who arrived a quater of an hour later, and united with Dr Gale in pronouncing the cause of the death to have been heart disease.

So far none of the bystanders knew who the lady was. Her hand-bag was opened, however, and in it were found several letters addressed to "Mrs William Thompson, No. 719 Sixty-eighth street," as also a card-case containing some of her cards, some small packages of ribbons, etc., which she had just purchased, and copies of the Cincinnati Enquirer and the Minneapolis Tribune of the date of Sunday, March 28. While these were being looked at Mr. Franklin File, of the staff of the New York Sun, chanced to come into the hotel. He recognized the deceased at once, and cried: Good God, that is Clara Belle." The bystanders then all knew who it was, and universal sorrow was expressed on all sides.

It will be remembered that Mr. File was the medium of Mrs. Thompson's introduction to the public, and he has often been supposed to be the author of "Clara Belle's" letters. The fact was that Mr. McLean, of the Enquirer, once, in a casual conversation in the Enquirer office, asked Mr. File if he happened to know any New York lady who would be likely to write good fashion correspondence for his paper. Mr. File had seen some work of Mrs. Thompson—though only slightly acquainted with her personally—and at once recommended her. Negotiations were opened, with the result which the public knows.

Mrs. Thompson (a Miss Kenny) was forty-three years of age, of a slight figure, with fair hair. She married Mr. Thompson in 1867, and has lived with him, at the residence on Sixty-eighth street, ever since.

Her husband was at once telephoned for at his office, and later in the evening the body was removed to her late home.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA.

THE LIVER

Secretes the bile and acts like a filter to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile poisons the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, weak eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling, and many other distressing symptoms generally termed liver troubles. These are relieved at once by the use of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA the great blood resolvent.

DR. JOHN BULL.—I have been for a number of years severely afflicted with a mercurial headache and a dull, heavy pain in my liver. Three bottles of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA gave me more relief than all the others combined.
T. H. OWENS, Louisville, Ky.

DR. JOHN BULL.—I have examined the prescription for the preparation of DR. JOHN BULL'S SARSAPARILLA, and believe the combination to be an excellent one, and well calculated to produce an alterative impression on the system. I have used it both in public and private practice, and think it the best article of Sarsaparilla in use.
M. PYLES, M. D., Louisville, Ky.,
Res. Phys. at Lou. Marine Hosp.

DYSPEPSIA

Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, heartburn, wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration. There is no form of disease more prevalent than Dyspepsia, and it can in all cases be traced to an enfeebled or poisoned condition of the blood. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by cleansing and purifying the blood, tones up the digestive organs, and relief is obtained at once.

DR. JOHN BULL.—I have no hesitation in saying that I believe your SARSAPARILLA to be the best medicine manufactured for the cure of Scrofula Syphilis, and many other cutaneous and glandular affections, having used it with entire success in numbers of the above cases.
JAMES MOORE, Louisville, Ky.

DR. JOHN BULL.—I procured one bottle of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA for my eldest son. Among the remedies and various prescriptions that he has tried for weak lungs and chest, this one bottle has been of more benefit to him than all. It has cured me of Dyspepsia as well.
JOHN S. McGEE, Horse Cave, Ky.

THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE.

KIDNEYS

Are the great secretory organs of the body. Into and through the Kidneys flow the waste fluids containing poisonous matter taken from the system. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained and poisons the blood, causing headache, weakness, pain in the small of back and loins, flushes of heat, chills, with disordered stomach and bowels. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA acts as a diuretic on the Kidneys and bowels, and directly on the blood as well, causing the great organs of the body to resume their natural functions, and health is at once restored.

DR. JOHN BULL.—I have used BULL'S SARSAPARILLA for rheumatism and kidney trouble, and my son has taken it for asthma and general debility. It has given us both great relief.
Yours truly,
THOS. H. BENTLEY, Rossville, Ill.

SCROFULA

Is a peculiar morbid condition of the system, caused directly by impurities in the blood or by the lack of sufficent nourishment furnished to the system through the blood, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, blotchy eruptions on the face or neck. Erysipelas is akin to it and is often mistaken for Scrofula as it comes from the same cause, impure blood. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by, purifying the blood and toning up the system forces the impurities from the blood and cleanses the system through the regular channels.

DR. JOHN BULL.—It is my opinion that your preparation of SARSAPARILLA is decidedly superior to any other now in use, and I will take great pleasure in recommending it for the cure of Scrofula and all diseases of the blood and kidneys.

SANDERSVILLE.

A PROSPEROUS CITY SET IN A LAND OF PLENTY.

The Business and Progress of Sandersville Delineated Financial Condition of Washington County—Literary and Social Features of the City—A Happy and Contented People.

SANDERSVILLE, Ga., April 9.—[Special Correspondence.]—This city now is in a most flourishing condition with about 2,200 inhabitants. Its growth in the past two or three years has been great. During "Sherman's march to the sea" the courthouse was burned to the ground, and but a few years ago court was held in Haines's hall. Since then a magnificent courthouse of brick has been erected at a cost of $23,000. This is, probably, with the excetion of those in the cities and one or two larger towns, the most ample and costly building for the purpose in the state. The county jail is a very secure struture, but is too near the business part of town. The last grand jury recommended that a new one be constructed in a more retired part of the city, appointing a committee to attend to the work. The jail contains only three inmates at present.

THE COUNTRY ROUND ABOUT.

Sandersville is situated in the first county in agriculture in the state, in as healthy a district as there is in the south. Aside from being the first county in agriculture, Washington county also affords some as fine geological specimens as are to be found in Georgia. Opal, hornstone, agate, chalcedony and jasper have been found in considerable quantities, all in a few miles of the city. The lime sinks or caves, about a mile from the business portion of the city, are quite a curiosity. They branch off in several directions, one of which, it is maintained by some, was explored to the very heart of the city some years ago. Sea shells and fossil teeth may be found in the caves in great numbers. This locality affords excellent lime, some of which has been recently gotten out by an enterprising gentleman of our city.

The financial condition of the county has been greatly improved under the administration of the present ordinary, Judge Newman. The year previous to his election the county was $4,812 behind, with the taxes at 80 cents on the one hundred dollars. A glance at the neatly kept books of Judge Newman reveals the fact that the present fiscal year was begun with a surplus of $2,922.14 in the treasury, while the taxes last year on $3,162,691, the taxable property of the county, was only 35 cents on the one hundred dollars.

THE ARMORY BUILDING.

The well-stocked armory building is also a very large two-story structure. Above is the hall, used for various purposes, while below are kept, among the other arms, the cannon belonging to Howell's artillery, which company was named in honor of Captain Evan P. Howell, of THE CONSTITUTION. On the corner of Worthen and Haines streets is situated that magnificent brick building, the Masonic hall, which would do credit to a city triple the size of Sandersville. It was built in 1856-7, and is constructed of county material. On the ground floor is the well arranged postoffice, Dr. J. B. Roberts postmaster. Dr. Roberts is a very systematic man, and keeps the office in excellent condition, which fact never fails to elicit complimentary approval from the postoffice inspectors on their occasional visits. The citizens of the town have recently manifested their appreciation of his efficient services by presenting him with a neat gold medal, with his name engraved thereon.

THE OLD FAIR GROUNDS.

In the western part of the city are situated the old fair grounds of the Washington county agricultural society. For many years the people annually gathered here from far and near, bringing their choicest productions in every line of both farm and household articles to the fair. The pigsties and horse stalls, which surround the grounds were well filled, the large buildings crowded with people, and pleasure predominated. But the fairs did not prove a financial success, and they have now been discontinued for several years. The buildings have been torn down, while the old grounds are in cultivation. Now, little except the great arched gateway remains as a reminder of what it has been.

The mammoth mills and gins owned and operated by Hon. C. R. Pringle, are also quite a credit to our city. The building of the former is three and of the latter four stories high. These give employment continually to quite a large number of hands. The gins have a capacity of a bale in every forty minutes, while the four mills, which often run day and night, can turn out with ease two barrels of flour and twelve bushels of meal per hour. The mills are of inestimable value to our county, and represent a vast amount of money. The whole is run by one fifty horse power engine.

SOCIAL ORGANIZATIONS.

There are in the city about ten organizations, including Odd Fellows, Masons, Woman's Christian Temperance union, and literary societies. Among the latter, perhaps the one most deserving special mention is the S. F. literary club. This organization is composed of young men of the city, and is beneficial to the members. A splendidly equipped club room is fitted up in Haines' hall. The library consists of many hundred volumes, including books of every kind which go to make up a complete library.

The market house, which is as useful as it is curious, is of novel construction, being a perfect hexagon in shape. It is divided into two stalls, from which fresh beef is sold daily. The upper story serves for the council chamber.

The two hotels in the city, the Gilmore house and the Sandersville hotel, are unsurpassed by any in the state, except in size, although both are of large dimensions. The tables are set with the best of food procurable.

Sandersville supports two excellent newspapers, the Herald and Georgian, and the Mercury. The Herald is a neat, clean-faced, six-column sheet, well equipped for newspaper and job work, with a large circulation, printed with a large cylinder press. The Mercury is also a splendid eight-column journal, in a flourishing condition. Both papers contribute largely to the welfare of our town.

A look into the immense machine shops of Messrs. Lang & Wiet, with its buzzing machinery, sounding of anvils and rattle of belts, presents a scene of great activity. The shops give employment to a large number of men. These gentlemen are full of business and enterprise, and their shops are a source of much benefit, not only to Washington, but to the surrounding counties. They are at present constructing three new engines, and, when finished, they will have made eight in all.

MEDICINE AND LAW.

There are, in Sandersville, eight physicians and twelve lawyers, which does not, however, suggest ill health and misconduct, but a very large population, for Sandersville is very healthy and quite peaceable, requiring only one marshal. We have also a large operahouse, two stories in height, capable of seating one thousand people easily, owned by Mr. Bryant Watkins. The spacious stores on the first floor are occupied by Mr. H. C. Roughton and Mrs. C. C. Brown.

Our city is in quite a prosperous condition, and among many other enterprises is sadly in need of a bank. A large amount of the stock could be raised here with little effort. The benefits to the bank, as well as to the community, which it would bring, is well known, and it is, therefore, needless to argue this point. A cotton warehouse would also be a paying and convenient institution.

One of Sandersville's important branches of business is the insurance agency of Messrs. W. G. Furse & Co. They are agents for a very large number of companies, including some on the most solid financial basis, on both sides of the Atlantic. That popular benevolent corporation, the Georgia Mutual Aid association, has headquarters in this city, with Mr. Furse as manager. The company is on a firm footing, with a large membership, and is increasing every day.

CATTLE AND HOGS.

This sketch, however, would be incomplete without mention of Mr. M. H. Boyer's East Hill farm. It is situated near the eastern boundaries of Sandersville, in a delightful locality. Mr. Boyer has quite a number of fine blooded hogs, cattle and horses; also, a fine stock of chickens, turkeys, etc., which he raises for sale.

The West End dairy, owned by Mr. Thomas E. Brown, on the opposite extremity of the city, is a profitable employment, and is a very useful adjunct to our city. He owns and milks a large number of cows daily, and, with a few exceptions, supplies the wants of the citizens in that line.

The Sandersville high school deserves mention, as it has contributed very materially to the growth and prosperity of the city. There are near two hundred pupils in attendance. A great many of these are from a distance.

A number of stores and residences are in course of erection, and thus the march of improvement goes on in this pleasant little city.

Parties seeking new homes cannot be better pleased than in old Washington county.

A STORY OF WAR DAYS.

How a Young Lady Saved a Soldier's Life and Won a Loving Husband.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Congressman Stone, of Kentucky, who walks about the house and up and down the avenues on crutches—having lost a leg in the confederate service—is expecting his wife to arrive here shortly from her Kentucky home. The story of Stone's marriage is a strange and interesting one, and proves again that there are as interesting incidents in real life as are told in story books. Stone was a confederate soldier, and at a battle in Cynthiana, Kentucky, was badly wounded. As he fell his hat went one way and his musket another, and he found himself unable to move to regain either. It was a scorching summer day, and he was obliged to lie on that hot hillside exposed to the intense heat of the blazing sun, unable even to protect his face except by throwing his arm across his eyes. His life-blood was rapidly running away, and he became weaker and weaker, and soon was unable to speak or move. The blazing sun which fell on his head and face was adding untold suffering, in his enfeebled condition. After the fight he was left with the dead and dying, for it was supposed he could not live more than a few minutes or hours. After the troops had withdrawn, some of the people living in the vicinity of the battlefield passed over it, relieving the necessities of the wounded so far as possible. As they passed near where Stone lay suffering in the hot sun, unable to speak, a young lady in the party noticed him and the sufferings the sun must produce if he were still conscious. Telling her companions she believed he was still alive, she procured the ramrods from four muskets lying near by, and sticking them in the ground near his head, fastened over the top a scarf from her shoulders, to break the rays of the sun. When the wounded were gathered from the field it was found that Stone was still living, and he was sent to the hospital. There was a long struggle between life and death, but he finally rallied and slowly regained strength, after the amputation of his right leg. The residents of the town and vicinity did all they could for the sufferers in the hospital, sending them food and delicacies and often visiting them. One day, after he had gained sufficient strength to speak and notice those who visited the hospital, he saw among the visitors the young lady who had probably saved his life by her kindness when he lay helpless and speechless on the battlefield. When opportunity offered, he spoke to her of the occurrence and thanked her for her kindness. The acquaintance thus begun ripened into love, and she is now his wife.

Sitting Up in the Ground.

PERRYVILLE, Ark., April 9.—In digging a well a few days since on his plantation at Sevier, J. W. Farmer discovered a human skeleton imbedded in the sand about five feet below the surface. To all appearances the remains were in a crouching or sitting position. A lance or harpoon was sticking through the chest of the skeleton's remains, and shows that the deceased had lost his life in combat. Around the body was a black petrified substance, which from its fibrous appearance is supposed to have been a blanket or other garment. From the spear and the shape of the skull Mr. Farmer judges the skeleton to be that of an Indian. Mr. Farmer will visit Perryville and will bring his find with him. A piece of the petrified blanket, or whatever it is, is now on exhibition.

How Smith Clayton Lost His Satchel.

GALVESTON, Tex., April 9.—A few nights ago Mr. Smith Clayton, whose business it is to empty the street car boxes and start the cars off from their stand, was robbed of his satchel, which contained $47 in cash. The satchel, rifled of its contents, has just been found on a vacant lot and left at the police station. In the place of the money abstracted, it contained a note signed "Night Grabber," thanking Mr. Clayton for the $47, and returning his empty satchel with the hope that he would soon fill it again.

Murdered Over a Game of Cards.

HUNTINGDON, Miss., April 9.—While Henry Scarboro and Webb Edwards were playing a game of cards an altercation arose, when Scarboro shot Edwards dead. The murderer is at large.

An Eel Caught in a Hose,

From the Savannah, Ga., Times.

This morning about twelve o'clock, quite a crowd was congregated about the cigar store of Mr. Gazan, under the Pulaski house, looking at an eel that had passed through the pipes into the hose used in watering the street, where it lodged, as its body was too big to come out of the nozzle. Several advanced the opinion that it was not an eel, but a small moccasin. After considerable trouble the eel was released from its position in the pipe, and placed in a basin of water, where it seemed to be perfectly at home.

Freaks of Nature.

From the Greenesboro, Ga., Herald.

At the Methodist parsonage in this city is growing a large chinaberry tree. In the forks of the tree, about fifteen feet from the ground, a young cedar has sprung up and is growing hardily. The cedar is about twelve inches high, and seems to be in a thriving condition.

From the Gainesville, Ga., Eagle.

Jos. Brown shows us two eggs joined together by a cord, a la Siamese twins. Two perfect eggs so joined as to show they were layed at the same time, evidently the hen that accomplished this feat was determined to prove that she could lay two eggs a day.

Two Pewter Basins.

From the Carrolton, Ga., Register.

W. B. Fuller, of this county, has some cutlery and table crockery, that his mother bought as part of her first outfit when she went to housekeeping, more than sixty years ago. Among the articles of table ware, are two pewter basins and a large dish, which in those days was called a "turkey dish." It is an unusually large dish, and was bought, Mr. Fuller says, to be used as a receptacle for wild turkeys when dressed and brought to the table.

Walnut Farming in Rabun.

From the Athens, Ga., Banner.

J. F. Robinson, of Tallulah, finding the climate and soil adapted to raising walnut trees, has lately bought a farm in Rabun county, and will set out thousands of walnut trees. Walnut lumber is on the rise, and Mr. Robinson expects to reap a rich reward from his venture.

The Truth About It.

"Spring," sang the poet, "budding Spring."
Alas! the boughs were bare;
He was himself the one green thing,
For ice lay everywhere.

"Hail, Spring, with breezes soft and sweet."
The Spring returned his hail;
There came a shower of snow and sleet
Upon a wintry gale.

"Sing, merry birds, in bush and trees."
He read the almanac;
The birds were wiser far than he,
And did not hurry back.

"Spring, gentle"—here he ceased to sing.
Let the sad truth be told:
The while he sang of balmy Spring,
He caught an awful cold.

"It is the NE PLUS ULTRA of Filters."

DOVER STAMPING CO., BOSTON, MASS.

This Cut Shows Ice Chamber.

Water Does Not Touch the Ice—A Boon to Humanity.

These elegant China Filters are made of some hard vitreous material, used by the Union Porcilain works in the manufacture of their celebrated China, and as a work of art they are the Climax of Perfection, and as a filter and purifier of water they are a boon to humanity. They contain no substance that can ACCUMULATE FILTH, CREED VERMIN, and aimalcular and no metal to poison the water. All other filters that we have ever seen or heard of do by accumulating filth, vermin and metallic poisons pollute the water passed through them for purification.

The Gate City Stone Filter is durable, cheap, and the ACME OF SIMPLICITY AND CLEANLINESS. It is no new fangled experiment, but has been trid and proven by years of service to be the simplest, best, and only perfect filter yet discovered.

IT SWEEPS THE FIELD!

At the Cotton Exposition, at the World's Industrial Exposition, at the American Institute; everywhere, all over the world wherever it has been tried it has been recommended and indorsed by sanitary associations, boards of health, physicians and scientists.

THE BATTLE OF ST. LOUIS

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE BLOODY AFFAIR.

Statement of Deputy Sheriff Hewlett—A Message to Jay Gould—Burning of Railroad Property—Death of the Eighth Victim—Scenes of Friday's Conflict—The Outlook.

EAST ST. LOUIS, April 10.—At five o'clock this morning the fires were under control. Fifty freight cars, a scale house, and a lumber yard were completely destroyed by the fire. The round houses and shops were partially saved. No railway officials were around to direct the troops would be they were most needed. The fires, which were all incendiaries, started about nine o'clock last night. Large crowds of strikers and citizens are collected in groups all over the city, and are still determined to have revenge for yesterday's massacre. Public sentiment is running high. Firemen and engineers were sent from St. Louis to help out, but their hose was cut by the men intimidated. They returned without being able to render any assistance.

ALL QUIET ALONG THE LINES.

No disturbances of any character occurred since 5 o'clock this morning. The sheriff dismissed all the deputies, with the exception of three or four men, and is dependent entirely on troops for his protection.

THE DAMAGE BY FIRE.

It is impossible at this hour to more than approximate the damage by the night's fires. They were all confined to railroad property, and officers sent with troops report about twenty to thirty cars destroyed, loaded with merchandise and coal. The greatest damage occurred at the Cario Short-Line yards, about one mile from the Relay depot, where probably fifteen cars were destroyed and the flames for a time threatened the destruction of one or two hundred cars in the immediate vicinity of the yards, which were unprotected by the presence of an active deputy or officer of any kind until company "D," of Champaign, arrived at the scene of fire, and it was permitted to burn at its will. Two members of this company were found who could fire and run locomotives, and a switch engine being placed at their disposal, they succeeded in dragging away from the burning cars fully one hundred box and coal cars. Three companies of troops from Greenville, Paris and Champaign are now stationed at the Louisville and Nashville and the Cairo Short Line yards. The main body of troops, beyond a few sentries stationed at the railroad switches, remain in the vicinity of the Relay depot. No serious opposition of any character has beset the troops.

THE EIGHTH VICTIM.

A man named Andrew Jones, a Knight of Labor, was shot yesterday and is not expected to live through the night. He will make the eighth person killed thus far.

A walk through the business and residence streets gives the impression that it is deserted and dead, except that now and then clusters of sullen men are to be seen at the street intersections watching at a distance the movement of troops. The saloons are closed, and nearly every store is closed with the windows and doors barred. Troops have been distributed in platoons and companies at the principal yards and shops and in the vicinity of the large elevators on the levee along the Mississippi river.

FIVE HUNDRED CARS DOOMED.

The total number of cars burned at the several yards was forty-two, representing a total loss of about $32,000, exclusive of the merchandise. Of the fourteen cars on the Illinois and St. Louis road, all were loaded, and their contents were utterly destroyed. Nine coal cars and nine loaded box cars on the Cairo Short Line roads, near the river, are still burning. More than five hundred cars, by actual count, line the five tracks and are indisputably doomed to destruction.

A MESSAGE TO JAY GOULD.

ST. LOUIS, April 10.—The executive board of the Knights of Labor, when the news of the shooting reached them, proceeded at once to East St. Louis, and there conferred with a number of citizens and got the general opinion as to the affair. After advising every one against violence, the board returned to this side and prepared the following telegram, and sent it out as the expression of the board's opinion of the affair:

ST. LOUIS, April 9, 1886.—To Jay Gould, New York: The following advertisement appeared in many of the leading papers of the seventh instant:

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY OFFICE AGENT, April 6, 1886—Ten good men from here are wanted as deputy marshals at East St. Louis to protect the Louisville and Nashville employes. Five dollars per day and board will be paid. Also a number of platform men can be given employment. Only men who have plenty of grit and mean business need apply, Apply at once.

T. S. GENUNG, Agent."

How well this advertisement has been answered is seen by their work of today in East St. Louis. Six men and one woman were murdered by those who had "plenty of grit, and meant business." By your actions in refusing the peaceful negotiations solicited by the board for arbitration, you, and you alone, must be held responsible, by the world, for the lives of these innocent people.

JOHN W. HAYES,
Per order of the Board.

SHERIFF HEWLETT STATEMENT.

J. G. Hewlett, Charles Kinsler, William Jester, Sam Jones, John Hoge, W. J. Laird, Stewart Martin, George W. Burnett and J. T. Williams, East St. Louis deputy sheriffs, who surrendered themselves to the St. Louis police after doing the shooting at the Louisville and Nashville crossing on the east side yesterday, are still locked up at the Four courts. This morning Chief Harrigan was notified by Mayor Joyce to hold the men as fugitives from justice till requisition papers could be secured for them. They will be held. Hewlett, who is special agent for the Louisville and Nashville railroad, as well as being temporarily deputy sheriff, has made a statement explaining the shooting of yesterday. This is corroborated by other deputies, and is in substance as follows:

"Thursday the strikers captured one of our deputies and held him about an hour and a half. They let him go and told him they intended to visit us again and do us up. About ten o'clock yesterday, a man who recognized Martin as an Odd Fellow, came and told the men to look out for serious trouble. I told T. J. Harrahan, general manager of this division, and he said he had also been notified to look out for trouble. I then wrote two letters to Adjutant-General Vance, explaining the situation to him, and sent them to him a little before twelve o'clock. While writing the letters I was summoned to keep the strikers from coming into our yard at the east end. I went up there with General Manager Harrahahn. There were about three hundred men collected around when I got there. Sheriff Rohrequet was present, and tried to disperse the crowd, but they would not listen to him. They jeered at him, calling him all sorts of names. Seeing he could not disperse the crowd, the sheriff went away. Then I commenced talking to the crowd. I said: 'For God's sake, men, get away and save trouble. Look at this thing rationally. You heard the sheriff read the law to you, and you would not leave.' I then read the law to some twenty or thirty men who were nearest me. When I stopped reading, some one in the crowd said, referring to me: 'This man is right.' Others said, 'Pay no attention to him; we don't care a d——n for the law. He is a scab all that I said had no effect upon the crowd. While some of my men were at dinner, Mr. Sample came to me and said: 'Hewlett, hurry and get some men to help bring on our coal train. There are five hundred strikers at the crossing.' This was about 130: o'clock. Sample came to me again in a few minutes and said, Come on, we have not time to eat now. They have halted our train at the broadway crossing. With six or seven deputies at the crossing to protect the train, and I started with about twelve other deputies to reinforce them. The crowd, when we got there, was massed on the bride over Cabakia creek and on the east side of oua tracks, around the Green tree house and about the Illinois and St. Louis passenger platform. There was a great deal of yelling from the crowd; they jeered at us and called us everything they could think of. This thing lasted quite a while, until the general manager induced the engineer to run the train through the crowd with a rush. While we were waiting there at the crossing to protect the fireman and engineer a striker said to a deputy: 'you will never get out of these yards alive.' I said: 'I will arrest that man. It is my sworn duty to do it.' I took hold of him to arrest him, and he resisted. He swore he would not be arrested and attempted to jerk away from me, but I held on to him. The mob then closed in on me, but with the assistance of one of my deputies, we forced the men out of the crowd. I turned around to the crowd then and said: 'For God's sake, men, disperse, while I am carrying out the law. Don't persist.' Just about that time I heard a pistol shot to my rear. It sounded like the report from a small pistol, and as quick as a flash I saw a stone coming at my head. I dodged and it struck me on the shoulder. I judge the first shot came from the rear windows of a barroom on the west side of the creek. My deputy, Kinsler, says it came from there. After the first shot was fired the shooting became general. We were between two fires and then noticed shots coming from a rear barroom window. Shots were fired at us from the east side of the track, from a little house, and from coal cars on the Indianapolis and St. Louis track. The crowd then started west along the dike to cut us off, by a cross street, from our depot. I saw this movement, and started with my deputies across our trestle on a run for the depot, and got there in advance of the crowd. We halted at the depot and the freight men came and begged for protection, saying the strikers would murder every one of them. I told them to go to the bridge and we would protect them." He then describes the scen on the bridge and the arrival of deputies in this city as previously reported.

THE TROOPS DO GOOD WORK.

Four distinct fires were in progress, at the Louisville and Nashville yards, on a side track of the Illinois and St. Louis, and at two points on the Cairo Short Line. The incendiaries who lighted the fires on the latter road precured from one of the cars several barrels of oil, which were emptied to commence the blaze among the cars. The entire work of vandalism indicated a knowledge and premeditation with no one to lend a staying hand to stop the destruction until a small detachment of troops put in an appearance, and then the fires were confined to comparatively narrow areas. The work of the soldiers, in this respect at least, proved very effective.

The general manager of one of the roads, who witnessed the scene of last nigh, declared that the property of all the railway companies would have been wiped out before morning but for the interposition of the soldiery. The hotels of the city and all the proprietors of shops have been warned not to entertain or harbor any of the soldiers, which is the occasion, in part, for the closing of all hotels, with the exception of the Martell house, which has been taken as headquarters for the officers commanding the troops. This afternoon large crowds assembled on Broadway, and the troops did not in any way cause their dispersion. They have failed to make any demonstration, and there is not deemed any liklihood of a serious collision, alhthugh such a happening is not deemed impossible by local officials. The chief dread is night. To protect the miles of railroad cars from the torch will require, in the opinion of the commanding officers, who have been over the ground, a larger force of troops than is now on the ground, as even now the squads are widely separated, and are in very small detachments.

BOYCOTTING THE NON-STRIKERS.

As an illustration of the predominant feeling the Cairo Short Line company will be compelled to send its yard workmen fifty miles out from the city to escape the boycott with which the hotels and boarding houses are threatened for harboring non-strikers.

THE COAL MINERS GO OUT.

Coal miners along the entire line of the Illinois and St. Louis, four hundred in number, have gone out, carrying out the purpose of the Knights of Labor in carrying the fight in that direction. The sheriff and two of his deputies who were at the scene where the shooting occurred yesterday on Cahokia bridge, state that the crowd was warned three times in succession to disperse, but jeered and threatened the officers. The evidence seems conclusive that the strikers kept throwing missels at the yardmen in the Louisville and Nashville road all the morning, growing bolder all the while, and it is stated on behalf of the deputies that actual firing commenced after a shot had been fired from the crowd or from a house in the rear. The chief firing on the part of the deputies appears to have been done by a character known as the "Cowboy Fireman," who came here from Texas, and remained on an engine as a fireman, while six engineers in succession deserted their machines, owing to the importunity or threats of the strikers. These men would, it appears, surely have met their death had they not made their escape successfully to St. Louis. The firing occurred when three of the deputies were absent at dinner, and as the latter were returning, unarmed, they were beset by a crowd of infuriated people. The deputies fled toward the Ohio and Mississippi yards, being fired at repeatedly by the occupants of houses in their wild flight. One was shot in the hip and overtaken by the pursuers, was beaten and left for dead. He was afterwards rescued and is still alive. It was this deputy who was stated to have been shot and killed, according to earlier dispatches yesterday. The freight trains over the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis, Ohio and Mississippi, Chicago and Alton, and Vandalia roads have arrived this afternoon.

Three coal trains crossed the bridge into East St. Louis.

The Cairo short line road, which proved th sufferer by the fires last night, has not bee enabled to resume operations in its yards thus far today.

WATCHING THE TROOPS.

A few of the stikers approached near th railway depot, in squads throughout the fore noon, and watched the movements of troop Some of these known to the railway official as leaders of the violent section have bee pointed out and placed under arrest. Seven o eight of these men are now under an armed guard near the railway depot. Shortly after 12 o'clock a striker named Alexander Savary was challeed by a sentry named Kent, a private in Company C, Fifth infantry. To an injunction to "move on," he drew a revolver, and remarking, "You are too pretty to shoot," turned to walk away, but turning abruptly, fired at Kent. The latter simply clubbed his musket, knocked away the revolver, and took the man in charge. He was placed among with the others arrested. The affair created no especial excitement, although a shot was fired directly in the line of the troops and civilians about the depot.

MORE TROOPS ORDERED.

The adjutant general to-night by direction of the governor ordered seven additional companies of the Fifth and Eighth regiments to report here at once. This is not owing to fear of an open conflict with the riotious element, but simply as a precaution to insure the guarding of the railroads and other valuable property. The city has very few policemen and has very limited facilities for subduing fires. The railroad yards and grain warehouses extend for a distance of fully six miles along the east bank of the Mississippi river, and the difficulty which is presented of guarding the property, scattered over such an extent of territory requires necessarily a very large body of men. The arrival of an additional force will make seventeen companies of infantry, in addition to the gatling gun detachment. General Reese, commanding the second brigade, assumed command of the force tonight under personal orders from Governor Oglesby, A few small clusters of men have been seen on the streets and in the vicinity of railroad crossings, but thus far they have preserved an utter silence and have displayed no desire to provoke a conflict. The taunting and threatening to which the deputy sheriffs were subjected to has ceased. The troops on their part have conducted themselves quietly.

THE STRIKERS DISCUSS THE AFFAIR.

Unusual quiet prevails today in the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain railroad yards on this side of the river. Strikers around the yards are few in number, preserve perfect order and confine themselves to a calm discussion of yesterday's tragedy in East St. Louis. They all deplore the hasty firing of the deputies, but admit that the strikers were partly at fault. They say that they will profit by the lesson and resort to no violence in any cases. The usual number of five freight trains have been sent out today over both roads without interference.

ALL QUIET AT MIDNIGHT.

Reports from every portion of the city at mid night show that absolute quiet has prevailed up to this hour. The business streets are deserted, and no arrests have occurred of trespassers upon railroad property. The night is stormy, a rain having set in about 9 o'clock, and is still falling steadily

HEAVY LOSS IN LAWRENCE.

A Large Mill Takes Fire—Great Damage Done.

LAWRENCE, Mass., April 10.—Fire broke out in the picker room of the Pemberton mill about 10 o'clock this morning, and gained great headway before the firemen could get to work on it. At 11:40 a general alarm was rung, summoning the whole department. All the operatives were sent out. Eight men were in the room when the fire started, and a large quantity of material was in the building. The structure is situated on the river bank in the rear of the main mill; is three stories high and 400 feet long. The main mill itself is seven stories high. The looms and machinery were at the south end of the mill. The mill next the river was much damaged early during the fire.

At 12:30 the walls of the rear building gave way, burying ten persons, including four firemen, all of whom are probably killed. Engines from North Andover and Methaen arrived at 1 o'clock and joined the Lawrence fire department in fighting the flames.

At 1:30 p. m. the fire began to succumb to the efforts of the united departments and it is probable the main mill will be saved. This is the mill that fell in 1860, when one hundred lives were lost.

At 12:30 p. m. the roof fell, carrying down two floors below, and also fifteen men who were fighting the flames. All but four of these escaped by clambering out of the ruins. Of the four men buried, George McKenzie was soon rescued, but died at 3:30 from the effects of his injuries, George Silva was quickly extricated from the ruins, having sustained severe, but not fatal, cuts; John Miller, fireman of the Washington mills, lay for nearly two hours on the second floor under a heavy beam, the flames blazing near him. Two heroic fireman, Victoria Guigras and Herbert Finn, stood by him, braving the fire and smoke and at 2:30 succeeded in prying the timber off his body and rescuing him from a slow death. Miller's jaw and left leg were fractured, and his right leg was badly burned from the hip to the ankle. He will die. Six others were hurt badly, one will lose both legs.

The burned mill employed 700 hands and was running on full time. It was the only one left standing on January 10th, 1860, when at 5 p. m., without a word of warning, the large mill fell burying between 600 and 700 operatives. The ruins took fire, and 145 persons were killed and 175 were injured.

SHOT THE OLD MAN DEAD

And Then Put an End to the Boy—The Murderer Captured.

FORT SMITH, Ark., April 10.—Lincoln Sprole has been convicted of a double murder committed in Paul's valley, Chickasaw nation, May 30, 1885. His victims were old man Clark and his son Alex Clark. Sprole and the Clarks were tenants on the same farm and did not get along well in their dealings with each other. The murderer concealed himself in a thicket by the roadside, where he knew Clark and his boy would pass in a wagon. As they came along he shot the old man first, when the boy jumped from the wagon and was shot in the knee, falling by the roadside. Sprole approached the prostrate boy and heeding not his appeals for mercy, again shot him, inflicting a fatal wound. Sprole fled, but was captured a few weeks afterwards, and his name added to the list that swells the number of convicted murderers now in jail here to thirteen.

Simpson Jones, a white man, was brutally murdered by Sam Cass, a Choctaw desperado, near Waldron, Saturday. The cause of the deed is unknown.

Forest Fires in North Carolina.

WILMINGTON, N. C., April 9.—A forest fire in Robeson county on the Elizabeth road burnt over a space of several miles in length and one and one-half miles in width. KcKay Rozier, Robert Rozier, Arch. Baker and William Purnell lost nearly all the fences around their farms. William Bryan had 8,000 turpentine boxes destroyed. On the Carthage road the fire burned a crop of boxes on the land above the "old Morrisey mill." A quantity of cross-tie timber belonging to B. Godwin and others was destroyed.

CRUSHED IN THE MACHINERY.

Horrible Fate of a Young Man in an Alabama Sawmill.

COLUMBIANA, Ala., April 10.—[Special.]—A horrible accident occurred at the Pratt & Elen sawmill, about six miles west of Columbiana, Ala., on April 6. Rich Holcomb, a boy about 16 years of age, was working about the mill, when he accidentally stepped back or fell on a large belt, and was instantly hurled into eternity, his head being crushed between the pulley and belt, and his entire body being horibly mangled and torn.

It seems the Holcombs of this vicinity are having a hard time.

Local Option in Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., April 10.—The first elections under the local option law passed by the last legislature, took place today at Floyd courthouse and Wytheville. At the first named place the "dry" movement was defeated by a vote of four to one in favor of granting license to sell liquor, while in the latter place the "dry" men were victorious by a small majority, and consequently no license will be issued in that town.

SHERIDAN COMING SOUTH

THE GENERAL OF THE ARMY ON A TOUR.

He Will Inspect the Site of the Atlanta Barracks and Make Preparations for Construction—The Blair Educational Bill—The Tariff Bill the Next to be Considered—Notes.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—[Special.]—General Sheridan will leave Washington next week for Chicago, and from there will go on a tour of inspection of the department of the south before its command is delivered to General Terry. General Sheridan will probably reach Atlanta within the next ten days, and will spend some time there inspecting the site of the barracks and preparations for its construction. He is in favor of the purchase of additional ground as recommended by the secretary of war in his report to congress. It is probable that no aid to sufferers from the recent floods will be extended by congress. The bill of Mr. Herbert for three hundred thousand dollars to Alabama sufferers was objected to in the house today by Mr. Beach, of New York, and has little chance of passing. Mr. Hammond, of Georgia, attempted to get the appropriations committee to recommend one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for flood-sufferers in Georgia, but the committee declined to do so on the ground that no aid had been asked by the people in the flooded sections of the state.

THE BLAIR BILL.

The friends of the education bill are uneasy at the delay of the committee on labor in taking action on that measure. It was considered yesterday, but nothing occurred on which an estimate of the temper of the committee toward the bill could be ascertained. Two of its members, Messrs. Crain, of Texas, and Lawter, of Illinois, have already declared on the floor of the house their hostility to the mesaure. Well posted advocates of the bill, however, expresses their confidence that the committee will soon report the bill to the house, though it may be without any recommendation whatever. Once before the house they say the bill will surely pass.

THE CHINESE MINISTER.

The common opinion here now is that the reports of indignity to the Chinese minister at the hands of collector and surveyor of the port of San Francisco have been grossly exaggerated. Senator Hearst expresses this opinion and backs it up with telegrams from prominent citizens of San Francisco.

THE TARIFF TO BE CONSIDERED.

Now that the silver questien is disposed of as far as the house is concerned, the tariff is expected to be the next matter to occupy the attention of that body. The bill will probably be reported Monday and a day fixed for its consideration, after which it will be considered until finally disposed of.

SILVER CERTIFICATES.

The committee on banking and currency expects now to have its innings on financial matters. When the committee is next called they will move to suspend the rules to fix a day to consider the bill they have reported to the house providing for the issue of small denomination silver certificates. On Monday they expect to introduce a bill in the house through Mr. Wilkins, one of the committeemen, which will have for its purpose the prevention of the circulation of currency. It will provide that cash deposits to the amount of 70 or 80 per cent—the per cent is not yet settled upon definitely—be made by the national banks to secure their circulation as fast as the government bonds now on deposit are called for payment, and that a small tax be levied on the banks for a sinking fund to secure the difference between the circulation and the deposit in case of a bank's failure. This bill was introduced by Mr. Candler, of Georgia.

Joseph Pulitzer, of the New York World, today resigned his seat as representative in congress from the ninth New York district.

F. H. R.

THE STATE OF WASHINGTON.

The Adission Bill Passes the Senate—Democrats Against It.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—In the senate, at 1:30 o'clock, the Washington territory admission bill was passed without substantial amendment; yeas 30, nays 13.

The negative votes were all democratic, among them being that of Mr. Hearst, whose first vote was cast on this bill. The senate then adjourned until Monday.

COLUMBUS CHRONICLES.

The Freak of a Drunken Man—Resisting Arrest.

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—The ticket office at Union Springs, was entered by burglars last night, but it seems that they made a water haul. This is the second time this office has been burglarized recently.

Grand Master H. F. Everett, of this city, will go to Savannah on the 26th, to officiate at the laying of the corner-stone of the new Odd Fellows hall.

Agnes Harris and Dora Clayton, negro women, were locked up today for stealing articles of merchandise from the Bee Hive.

The protracted meetings at St. Luke's church will be continued another week.

Aaron Ingram, colored, interfered with Baliff Jones, of Brownsville, today, in the discharge of his official duties. A fight ensued, in which Jones shot at Vaughn, but missed him. Vaughn ran, but was arrested and locked up.

The great Chicagos will reach this city next Tuesday or Weknesday.

Holland Harris and Henry Hart, two negroes, wanted in Lee county, Ala., for burglary, were arrested here today and turned over to an officer from that state.

The Hurtsboro amateurs will present the "Lady of Lyons" next Friday night, for the benefit of the churches of that place.

A one-legged white man, named Clayton Scott, went into an upper Broad street store today while intoxicated, and attempted to kiss the hand of the proprietor's wife. He was arrested for assault, but was released on preliminary trial.

A SAVANNAH ASSIGNMENT.

A Naval Stores Firm Fails For a Large Amount.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—The failure of S. P. Shotter & Co., naval stores commission merchants was announced today. It was rumored a month ago that they were embarrassed, but their friends indignantly denied the report. The assignment favors Chess Carley Co., to secure a promissory note for $33,583.59. The firm have a house in Wilmington, N. C., also involved. The total liabilities are $202,006.82. The assets nominally the same, but no market value given.

Cedartown Comment.

CEDARTOWN, April 10.—[Special.]—Today at the convict camp at this place Mr. A. J. Thomas, an inmate from Bartow county and who is under sentence for killing John Alford in the year 1881, was adjudged a lunatic and ordered to be committed to the lunatic asylum of the state.

It is believed by the management of the East and West railroad that their entire line will be repaired and in operation by next Wednesday.

The superintendent of the Rome and Carrollton railroad is here to-day and says that his trains will resume schedule on Saturday next.

Judge Clayton's Resignation.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 10.—[Special.]—Today Judge H. D. Clayton, of the third judicial circuit, tendered his resignation to Governor O'Neal, and announced himself an out and out candidate for governor. John M. Chilton, of Opelika, was appointed judge to fill the unexpired term of Judge Clayton.

POLICE POINTS.

How the Wicked People of the Gate City Conducted Themselves Yesterday.

J. H. Bellman, recently a member of the Charleston baseball team, had a lively experience in Atlanta yesterday.

Bellman struck a Decatur street landlady and flew out to the city prison.

Two weeks ago Bellman was released from the Charleston club, and at once came to Atlanta, thinking that he might secure an engagement in one of the Gulf league team. Like most baseball players, Bellman was not well heeled financially. He had only a few dollars, a pistol and valise, and after hunting around for a boarding house secured accommodations at the Johnson house, No. 50½ Decatur street. He paid his first week's board at the expiration of the time; but day before yesterday, when the second week fell due, he went to the proprietress of the house and told her that he had no money. He then offered her a pistol for the debt. The landlady declined to accept the pistol, and instructed her servant to take Bellman's valise and lock it up. The valise was locked in a closet, but that night when the office was empty Bellman broke open the closet and took out the valise and moved. Yesterday mornidg he purchased a ticket for Chattanooga, but while at the depot waiting for the train to leave he was arrested and taken to the city prison, where he was locked up. The landlady preferred a charge of burglary against Bellman, and in the afternoon Justice Landrum heard the case and discharged the prisoner. Bellman then swore out a warrant charging the landlady with malicious prosecution. Bellman was a neat-looking, strong young man, and took his arrest quite hard. He said:

"That was my first time behind the bars, and I want it to be the last. You see, I was desperate. When my board was due I told the landlady that I would telegraph to friends in Louisville for the money. She would not wait, and seized all the clothes I had in the world. I broke open the closet and took my valise, intending to make my way to Louisville and then send her back the money."

ROBBED AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Dick Wright, a barber who works at No. 18 Marietta street, visited police headquarters yesterday morning and stated that he had been robbed of fifteen dollars at the opera house the night before. Wright says that he was sitting in the front row in the first balcony, and during the play thought that he felt some one put a hand in his pocket, but was too deeply interested in the play to pay much attention to it at the time.

FINED TWENTY DOLLARS AND COST.

Stringer, the patent medicine vender who was removed from the opera house by Captain Moon night before last, was arraigned in police court yesterday morning. The evidence was all against Stringer, and he was fined twenty dollars and cost.

HE RAN AWAY

Lorengo Florence, a small boy, is now wanted by the police and by his mother. The boy stole a purse containing a few dollars from his mother night before last. Yesterday morning she visited police headquarters, and reporting the matter, asked for the boys' arrest.

FAINTED IN THE COURT ROOM.

Lou Dover, the white woman who was arrested night before last for being drunk, created quite a sensation in police court room yesterday morning. When the case against the woman was called she stepped from the prisoners' room into the court room, but just as she faced the judge she fainted and fell to the floor. Several officers carried her from the court room and after face had been liberally watered she came around all right.

ADORING THE FLOWERS.

Lovely Women Spend All Day at the Show, and Men Naturally Go, Too.

From the New York Sun.

All day and every day, and late into the night, men, women, and children have streamed in and out of the Metropolitan House, where Klunder's feast of roses is in progress. They found the walls of entrance and foyer entirely covered with a delicate tracery of green, and two Dutch gardens lay on either side, that on the right enclosed with a thick row of splendid yellow tulips, hedging the little formal beds of purple hyacinths, shading from violet to white; that on the left enclosed with golden daffodills "taking the winds of March with beauty," and belting a field of tulips of every hue.

"Is it any wonder the Dutch fought over them, and gambled for them, and spent their estates for them?" asks a little maid with a Parisian gown and rosy cheeks, gazing at the tulips with shining, rapturous eyes.

On the vast floor of the opera house there are avenues of palms and tree ferns and mounds, fifteen feet high, of roses, azaleas and orchids; the arches where the stage joins the auditorium are wreathed with smilax, and beyond is a background of thick palms and immense mirrors reflecting the whole scene. On the stage is a great fountain throwing up sprays to an electric burner twenty feet above, and letting it fall again upon a bed of tall calla lilies. Beyond them are growing great sheaves of annunciation lines, enclosed by a fence of fine wire, whose every mesh holds a tiny burner, like a gleaming star, and around that again is a bed of mosses and ferns, white violets, lilies of the valley, orchids, and mignonette.

Everywhere is moving a great crowd, slowly circling; the boxes are filled with well-dressed women, and far above Damrosch's orchestra is playing the Swan Song from "Lohengrin."

The specialties of this great show have been the Primroses, English and Chinese, of almost every variety known, and the orchids.

The primroses and primulas were set around the floor between the tables where the hybrid roses were displayed, and in the back part of the stage was a great bed of them in every hue, from clear blue to creamy yellow.

The orchids were constantly surrounded by wondering and admiring crowds. Two great pyramids of them were built up some ten feet or more, and out on every side hung these rare blossoms, quaintly imitating animal forms. There was the Espirtu Santo, with blossoms like white doves descending, and the spider orchid, yellow and red, and fiercely spotted with sprawling, leg-like petals. Particularly fine were the angræcum superbum and the curious amethysteglossa.

The flesh-eating plant had a crowd of horrifiedly delighted women about it curiously regarding it. It looks sanguine, but calm and self-possessed, considering the unflattering comments upon its moral character flying about among the women, who are probably all vegetarians. It has a curved mouth and a deep hollow horn which it fills with fluid, where the flies and gnats of an inquiring turn of mind get drowned and are absorbed. Such small deer are its natural food, but it can be very contented with porter-house steak or Southdown mutton at a pinch, done rare, and without gravy.

It is a relief to turn from this man-eating tiger of the vegetable ring down to the "pretty Puritan pansies" and the heavy-headed stalks of mignonette, the purple perfumed heliotrope that blooms by the acre in the Soudan, and the death sweet odors of the waxen-belled hyacinth.

A very beautiful piece of decorative work is a tall font of white roses and lilies, with a cluster of snow-doves dipping to drink from the brim.

The hybrid roses exhibited are many and handsome, some new, and some old favorites. Those that attract most attention are the Baroness Rothschild, Captain Cristy, Her Majesty, the gold medal rose of the National Rose Society of England; the Mermet, the Wm. Francis Bennet, a new rose; Gloire de Paris, and La France. High above the heads of all these new pretenders to favors are great bowls of the two old veterans in dress uniforms of crimson and gold, General Jacqueminot and Marechal Niel. They hold their heads high and refuse to notice these new hybrid upstarts, who may be very nicely colored and well enough in their way, but have no perfume—and what is a rose without that?

The stream of pretty women in new clothes circles and eddies among the flowers, and adoring male friends buy them dozens of huge roses at $1.50 a piece, which the pretty creatures pin upon their bosoms, and circle again as peripatetic gardens of nodding blossoms, straining their lips to pronounce all the impossible botanical terms under which the orchids labor.

A LOVESICK JAP,

WHO PURSUED A DAUGHTER OF THE LATE VANDERBILT.

He Wildly Imagined that She Was Desperately in Love With Him—The Private Detective Agency by Which the Vanderbils, Astors and Jay Gould Watch Cranks.

NEW YORK, April 10.—[Special.]—The arrest of a Japanese young man, who imagined that a daughter of the late William H. Vanderbilt was in love with him, and wildly sought her, leads to the discovery that the residences of the Vanderbilts, the Astors and Jay Gould are constantly guarded against cranks by private detectives.

Imbotes Goto, the Japanese in the present case, had been a student here for two years. He was rich and cultured. Gentlemen of Japan are under no ban in New York, and he had met some of the Vanderbilts socially, though his acquaintance with them was slight. He was an attendant on religious services and lectures of the Young Men's Christian association, and in that way knew Cornelius Vanderbilt, who is actively interested in that field of philanthropy. There is no unmarried daughter of the late millionaire, and the lady whom he insanely regarded as his sweetheart is the wife of Seward Webb, who has not so much as a nodding knowledge of him. Before his mania rendered him a nuisance in his boarding house, he was three times ejected from the reception room of Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt's mansion, where he went to seek the object of his passion. On each occasion he brought tokens of affection in the shape of rare Japanese ceramics. Twice he sent up his card, and the first time was seen by Webb, who promptly turned him out. On his second call he departed at the bidding of a servant, who had been ordered to do so if he came again, His third effort was frustrated by a detective, who intercepted him at the doorstep, and drove him off.

The private service for the protection of the Vanderbilts, Astors and Gould was organized three years ago, and is ostensibly separate for each family, though the men who defend the Vanderbilts and Astors are provided by the same establishment, and practically work together. Regular patrol duty is done, night and day, and twenty detectives are exclusively employed for the purpose. There are four Astor residences and five belonging to the Vanderbilts, all in or close to Fifth avenue between Thirty-third and Fifty-second streets. The spies are on watch eight hours each per day, and the beats are so arranged that the nine houses cannot be approached unseen by one or more of the guardsmen. William H. Vanderbilt was the originator of this system; and he was incited to it by the large number of cranky letters which he received. He professed to have no fear of rational evil-doers, but was apprehensive that maniacs might attack him or some member of his family. Since his death the mails have been laden with all sorts of appeals, demands and threats directed to his sons.

Jay Gould's self-protection is more secret and characteristic. He does not entrust it to a detective agency, but hires his own body guard. For years he has been always accompanied by a stalwart young fellow. But that is a safe guard against Wall street enemies. Cranks who might cut capers in or around his home are under the view of spies whose quarters are in a room of the Windsor hotel, across the way. That is additional to patrol duty done by a separate set of men. These employes of the millionaire families, whose names are poor people's synonyms for wealth, are kept informed as to every new demonstration by a crank, and they are alert to descry and drive off the monomaniacs who attempt any exploits. During the western strikes Jay Gould has made the trips between his home and office in a cab, instead of elevated car, as formerly; and it is observed that a ring at his bell brings a sauntering watchman to the foot of the steps about as quickly as it does the servant to the top.

One of the defenses in Gould's case is against those who would write antagonistic sentiments with chalk on his sidewalk and steps. Men and boys are frequently caught at it and compelled to desist. A specimen of that class of revolutionists seemed to be a poet, and a wild one, judging by the description of him. His chalk was bright red, and he rapidly wrote:

"The rich may shirk,
The poor must work," before he was collared; and then, as though determined that at least the terminal rhymes of his verse should be emblazoned, he added at what would have been the end of the third line "labor," and right underneath "neighbor." The rest remains unknown.

A MAN WITH ELEVEN WIVES.

He Gives a List of Their Names and When He Married Them.

CAMDEN, Ark., April 10.—Some time ago Dr. W. H. Boyd was incarcerated in the county jail for horse stealing, for which offense the doctor is a much wanted man in several localities in this state and Texas. As a bigamist, also, it will be seen that the doctor is an expert. Thursday he confessed in writing over his own signature to Sheriff Bragg to eleven marriages, or rather bigamous relations. The following is the list with names of victims, dates and places: No. 1, Mar J. Hunter, Staunton, Va., May 6, 1863; No. 2, Hannah M. McGowan, Arrapahoe, Neb., April 21, 1874; No. 3, Melvina Hawk, Tuscumbia, Mo., November 20, 1877; No. 4, Maria Trafton, Huntsville, Ark., October 19, 1878; No. 5, Mary J. Pack, Danville, Ark. April 20, 1879; No. 6, Mary F. Gage, Boydsville, Ark., August 18, 1881; No. 7, Lydia A. Bird, Wittsburg, Ark., May 16, 1882; No. 8, Leany Knowles, Salem, Ark., July 10 1883; No. 6, Margaret Dennis, Lamartine, Ark., November 18, 1883; No. 10. Emma Stark, (Indian), Choctaw nation, April 7, 1884; No. 11, Josephine M. Eals, Clarksville; Texas, July 12, 1885.

He expects, he says, conviction as a horse-thief, but not as a bigamist.

THE MONEY PAID.

The Athens Foundry Pays Eight Thousand Dollars on a Suit.

ATHENS, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—The Athens foundry paid to T. W. Rucker the full amount of the verdict, with interest from last November, in the case of Mrs. Bain against the Athens foundry, amounting to near eight thousand dollars.

Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, April 10.—The weekly statement of the associated banks issued today shows the following changes:

Loans increase	$ 332,100
Specie decrease	976,100
Legal tenders increase	5,132,500
Deposits increase	2,367,700
Circulation decrease	57,300
Reserve increase	35,644.75

The banks now hold $17,351,768 in excess of the 25 per cent rule.

Burned to Death.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—About three miles southwest from this place, at the home of George Foster, colored, his mother, aged about 80 years, fell into the fire and was burned to death.

A Boy's Essay on Columbus.

From the London Standard.

The following story comes from a school in the Midlands. The master told the boys of the third class to write a short essay on Columbus. The following was sent up by an ambitious essayist: "Columbus was a man who could make an egg stand on end without breaking it. The king of Spain said to Columbus, 'Can you discover America?' 'Yes, said Columbus, 'if you will give me a ship.' So he had a ship, and sailed over the sea in a direction where he thought America ought to be found. The sailors quarrelled and said they believed there was no such place. But after many days the pilot came to him and said, 'Columbus, I see land.' 'Then that is America,' said Columbus. When the ship got near, the land was full of black men. Columbus said, 'Is this America?' 'Yes, it is,' said they. Then he said 'I suppose you are the niggers?' 'Yes,' they said, 'we are.' The chief said, 'I suppose you are Columbus.' 'You are right,' said he. Then the chief turned to his men and said, 'There is no help for it; we are discovered at last.'"

TELEGTAPH EREVITIES.

Mr. Trenholm's commission as comptroller of the currenct was signed yesterday.

The socialists of Chicago held a rousing meeting last night, which was characterized by its incendiary utterances.

Auction Sales--Real Estate.

COMBINATION AUCTION SALE, PEACHTREE street property, by J. C. Hendrix & Co. and E. M. Roberts & Co., Monday, April 19, 1886, promises to be the sale of the season. The street car being now extended and making regular trips to and beyond this property, makes it accessible, and as to being desirable the improvements now being made and projected demonstrates that fact better than words. Get a plat at either of our offices and go out to the ground and look at the lots before day of sale, hear the birds sing and catch the inspiration of the spring time amid the grass and flowers that nature surrounds you with. Don't forget the day and miss the opportunity. You may not have another one. We leave the junction of Marietta and Peachtree street at 3 p. m. Go out. It will cost you nothing if you do not buy. E. M. Roberts & Co., 20 North Broad. J. C. Hendrix & Co., 31 S. Broad.

AUCTION SALE OF THE W. B. SMITH ESTATE lands—Messrs. Rice & Wilson, E. M. Roberts & Co. will have plats ready for distribution at their offices next Wednesday. Remember this important sale is to come off 4th May at 1 o'clock p. m., on the premises. These 15 houses and lots will be sold to the highest bidder and no reserve. Please call for a plat and examine the property, and attend the sale. Conveyances always ready to go with parties to examine the property. Rice & Wilson and E. M. Roberts & Co.

Trunks and Valises.

THE ATLANTA STEAM TRUNK FACTORY DEfies all opposition. Our facilities for manufacturing by steam enables us to sell way below our competitors. It enables us to sell a nice and well-finished 36-inch ladies' zinc Saratoga trunk at $5, really worth $8.50. It enables us to sell a ladies' leather full Saratoga trunk for $5, price elsewhere $8. We can sell you a gent's sole leather trunk for $15, others will ask you $22.50 for the same. We still sell for $3.50 a gent's sole leather valise, our former price $5.50. We are turning these out by the thousands; and if low prices will be an inducement, they must go. Seeing is believing. Now is your time. Lieberman, Kaufman & Co., steam trunk factory, 92 Whitehall.

TRUNKS REPAIRED, VALISES REPAIRED.—The old reliable Steam Trunk Factory will repair your trunk or valise and put it in first-class order for a mere nominal sum. No charge for drayage. Lieberman, Kaufman & Co., 92 Whitehall. Telephone 571.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

THE MAN AND THE MAID.

Last Sunday in Oglethorpe county Mr. Peterman and Miss Walls started to Sunday school, but changed their minds on the road, and going to Judge Raines' were married.

The little grand-daughter, aged thirteen years, of James P. Akins, of Pickens county, was stolen by one Hood Pool, who was overtaken last Tuesday night in Gilmer county. Hood escaped. The little girl was carried back to Pickens. Pool is a married man.

A few days since Petersburg, in Gordon county, was thrown into a flutter of excitement by the elopement of Mr. Edgar Taylor, a married man, with Miss Maude Hester. Taylor has a nice wife, who is now in Mississippi with her relatives. He deserted her last fall and sent her home.

Toccoa Society Items.

Rev. B. F. Frazier, G. G. Simmons and wife and Messrs. E. P. Simpson and W. A. Mathison went down to hear Moodey and Sankey while they were in Atlanta.

Miss Annie Bawknight and cousin, of Walhalla, S. C., passed through Toccoa Monday en-route for Hartwell.

Spencer M. Smith went up to Clarksville Tuesday.

Mrs. Ellen Terry, formerly a resident of this place, has been visiting the family of Mrs. M. A. Davis.

Mr. J. C. Alred, our county treasurer, who now resides in Clarksville, was in Toccoa Wednesday.

Mr. Low McConnell, of Carnesville, was here Wednesday.

Mr. Webb, of Hartwell, visited our little city Friday.

Mrs. I. S. Netherland, of this place, left for a short visit to relatives in Greensville, S. C., Friday.

Mrs. E. W. Roberts, of Bowersville, arrived here Thursday night from Atlanta on her way home.

Mr. William Fuller, of Clarkesville, was here Friday.

Mr. A. H. McAllister and his little son, Sidney, returned home Thursday night after a lenghty visit to relatives in Missouri.

DEATHS IN GEORGIA.

Mr. J. M. Burrows, Sr., died at his home, twelve miles below Hawkinsville, on Wednesday last. Mr. Burrows was born in Ohio county, West Virginia, January 3, 1815, and was 71 years old. He moved to Pulaski in 1840, and was a citizen of the county ever since.

Mr. A. A. Cox, who left LaGrange in 1856, died near Vicksburg, Miss., recently. He has many relatives and friends in Troup. He was a son of the late Lewis Cox and a brother of Mr. L. S. Cox, of Marietta.

Judge Simmons to Resign.

From the Barnesville Mail.

Judge Simmons informed us last week that he would soon retire from the bench and take the stump. This is a wise conclusion.

THE HILL MONUMENT.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE UNVEILING CEREMONIES.

Mr. Davis's Visit—The Meeting of the Monument Committee, and What was Done—Hon. J. C. C Black, of Augusta, to Deliver the Memorial Address—Other Features.

Arrangements for the unveiling of the Hill statue are being rapidly effected, and the day will be made a memorable one.

The committee of arrangements met yesterday afternoon pursuant to the call of Chairman Dr. R. D. Spalding. It was announced formally that Mr. Davis would be present, and that the Hon. J. C. C. Black, of Augusta, would deliver the address on Mr. Hill. Mr. H. W. Grady was selected by the committee to act as master of ceremonies. The exercises at the unveiling of the statue will consist of an introductory statement by Mr. Grady, the formal presentation of the statue to the state by Dr. R. D. Spalding, chairman of the committee, and its acceptance by Governor McDaniel. It is probable that these speeches will altogether occupy about a half an hour. Mr. Black will then be introduced and his oration will perhaps take an hour. Mr. Davis will then be introduced and will say what his strength permits. The statue will be unveiled when Dr. Spalding rises to present it to the state. The entire ceremony will not consume more than two hours. The platform on which the speakers and distinguished visitors sit will be covered with an awning, and will hold one hundred persons.

Captain John Milledge was selected as marshal of the day. The escort to the statue will consist of the Governor's Horse Guard, the Gate City Guard; the Bush Zouaves, of St. Louis; the Montgomery Greys, of Montgomery, Ala., and several other military companies who will be en route for Savannah. The names of these latter have not been fully ascertained, but the military display will be an impressive and brilliant one. In the afternoon the Bush Zouaves will give a military drill at Athletic park. This world renowned company is composed of athletes, and their unique drill is simply marvellous.

The procession will form at the capitol at 10 o'clock, and will move at 10:30. The ceremonies at the statue will begin promptly at 11 o'clock. A resolution was passed by the committee requesting the merchants of Atlanta to close their stores from half past ten until half past twelve o'clock in order that the entire people may assemble to do honor to the occasion.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR BRINGING THE CROWD.

Mr. A. J. Orme and Mr. Julius L. Brown were appointed the committee on railroad transportation. Their first duty will be to secure a special car for bringing Mr. Davis and his friends from Montgomery to this city: This car will be in charge of the committee who will go down to Montgomery, take part in the ceremonies there, and accompany Mr. Davis to Atlanta. He will leave Montgomery on the morning of April 30th, make the trip in the day time, and perhaps on a special train. The committee is confident that it can secure a rate of one cent a mile for the round trip on all roads leading into Atlanta. If so, the crowd will be unprecedented. Rooms are already being engaged at the hotels and boarding houses, and sleeping room on the pavement will be in demand on the night of the first of May. It is expected that the different roads will so arrange their schedules as to have special trains leaving Atlanta late in the afternoon, so that those visitors who cannot find accommodations here can go back to their homes.

MR. DAVIS AND HIS RECEPTION.

Mr. Davis will be accompanied by his family, which consists of his wife and daughter. They will be the guests of Mrs. Hill, widow of the late senator, at her Peachtree residence, and a reception will be given Mr. Davis at the Capital City club. Major Livingstone Mims, president of the club, and an old personal friend of Mr. Davis, has been specially requested by the committee to go with them to Montgomery, and will do so. Every consideration will be paid to Mr. Davis's age, and his strength will not be over-taxed.

The following description of Mr. Davis is from a gentleman who has recently visited him at his home,

"I had ample opportunity to observe the decided changes that had been wrought in Mr. Davis's appearance since he posed twenty years ago for a likeness. His dark hair had all given way to white; his chin whiskers were still doing duty, but they too were white, and on his upper lip had grown since the war a crop of short hair. Over the pupil of the left eye appears a film, looking much like a cataract, and the spare face has in the waxing years grown, if possible, even more spare. His tall form, however, stands as erect as it did the proud day when the president of the Southern confederacy was inaugurated at Montgomery."

The Trip of the Busch Zouaves.

The Zouaves, numbering fifty-three men, rank and file, under command of Captain Roemer, will leave St. Louis on the night of April 27, via the L. & N. railroad, and in the special Pullman sleeping-car, the "Busch Zouaves," named after the company. They will arrive in Nashville, Tennessee, the next morning, and will be received at the depot by the famous Hermitage Guards, Burns' Light artillery and Hardin's artillery, and the city will be treated to a grand street parade. In the afternoon there will be a grand exhibition drill by each of the companies, winding up with a dress parade, under command of General Charles Thurman. At night there will be a grand stage drill at the Masonic theater by the Zouaves and Hermitage Guards, a broom drill by the Ladies' Broom brigade, a flag drill by the Ladies' Flag company and a concert by amateur talent of the city.

The Zouaves will leave Nashville for Montgomery, Ala., the next morning, arriving there the same evening. At the latter city they will be met at the depot by the renowned Montgomery Greys, under the command of Captain M. H. Amerine, and headed by a band of music a street parade will follow. In the afternoon there will be a grand exhibition drill by both companies at the Pickety Springs park. From Montgomery the Zouaves come to Atlanta. On their arrival they will be met by the Gate City Guards, under command of Captain Henry Jackson, and, as at Nashville and Montgomery, there will be a street parade and a grand exhibition drill by both companies at the baseball park in the afternoon. Before the drill takes place both commands will march to the depot again and receive the Montgomery Greyo, who will be escorted to the park to view the drill. That night all three companies will take a special train of sleepers and proceed to the Savannah encampment.

PROMINENT PERSONALS.

Colonel C. T. Zachry, of Henry county, is very ill.

Hon. James W. Drury, British consul at Brunswick, is in Thomasville.

Rev. Charles H. Strong occupied a seat on the platform in Savannah during the delivery of Dr. Armstrong's lecture on Ireland.

Rev. C. C. Williams, of Augusta, on being asked if there was any truth in the report that a 'movement existed to call him to St. Phillips, in Atlanta, replied, "None in the least."

The Warrenton Clipper says that as acquaintance with Judge Lumpkin increases, the better he is liked by both bar and people. His disposition to foster economy in the dispensation of the business of the court strikes a popular cord, and every one has something complimentary to say of him.

While in Irwin county last week. Mr. C. H. Peacock, of Eastman, visited the spot where ex-President Jefferson Davis was captured during the closing days of the war between the states, and gathered some violets therefrom. Mr. Peacock gave some of the flowers to the editor of the Eastman Times who forwarded them to Mr. Davis.

The Camilla Clarion states that Hon. Israel Maples went deer hunting one day last week, and killed two fine deer. In his young days he was the champion deer hunter east of the Flint. In one year he killed eighteen hundred, and made on his farm with one horse, six bales of cotton and two hundred bushels of corn. He owns a big-bored rifle, which, in his palmy days, he bought from Mr. Ira Sanbon, of Decatur county. The price was sixty dollars, and was to be paid for in deer skins at twenty-five cents apiece. He killed the deer and paid for it in three months.

Gladstone on Top,

And home rule a certainty now, so don't forget to attend Knapp's sale of the vacant lot adjoining the Chamber of Commerce, at 3:30 p. m., next Monday.

A MANIAC'S FREAK.

He Tries to Carve His Brother-in-Law—Other State News.

AUGUSTA, G., April 10.—[Special.]—An old family feud culminated today in the severe cutting about the head of Mr. L. B. Davis by Mr. L. S. McCook. Mr. Davis is prominently connected with the Augusta factory, and his wounding is regretted by scores of friends. He is not severely hurt, however. It is asserted that McCook is crazy, and the cutting was the work of a maniac, and not prompted by any ill feeling existing at the time. Mr. McCook is locked up tonight, and a commission of lunacy will take his case in hand Monday. The men are brothers-in-law, and the conflict occurred today when Mr. Davis called at McCook's residence to inquire as to the health of the latter. Without warning, McCook, having drawn a large and dangerous knife, commenced slashing right and left, cutting Davis several times about the head and arms. The wounds are not necessarily dangerous.

WET AND DRY.

The Dawson Journal says that the struggle now going on in Georgia between artesian water and red liquor is being narrowed down to a fine point.

From the Cuthbert Appeal it is learned that some lively scenes have been enacted in Calhoun county. Near the edge of Randolph Professor Wike Ivey has a place where the ardent is on tap. On Monday night a party of disguised men visited his place of business sometime after he had closed doors, and with pistols, attempted to perforate the whisky barrels with bullets by shooting through the weatherboarding of the house, against which the rear end of the barrels rested. They were elevated, however, upon a frame, and the party, or parties, miscalculating the height, shot underneath. Their object, evidently, was to empty the contents upon the floor. After amusing themselves in this way for some time, they drew the professor's picture, with a rope around his neck, and a warning written underneath to abandon the business in thirty days.

The Barnesville Democrat is informed that one of the leading prohibitionists of Pike, now quotes Aleck Stephens's speech in opposition to the internal revenue laws, in which he declared that every citizen had a right to convert the product of his labor, his corn or fruit, into whisky or brandy for market: "This gentleman is a large producer of corn and recently some boys, out rabbit hunting on his lands have discovered several places whence a distillery had just been removed. It appears that some illicit distiller had fixed him up a portable outfit and onlyon a ins uru, place during the bright nights of a single moon. A sort of freemasonry is said to be organized among the boys who hunt opossums in that section so that it is very difficult to locate the thing or to tell what it is."

The Greensboro Herald says that the man who originated local option still lives in Warren county, and cannot write his name. He is a man of fine native sense and is an enthusiast on temperance reform. Some years ago he was elected to the legislature from Warren and he gave his whole time and study and effort toward the accomplishment of one end—securing local option for the town of Warrenton. He thought of little else. For this he planned and worked. Like most men of one idea though without influence and lacking the power of oratory, he succeeded in his pet scheme. The bill passed; it became law. Local option thus went into force. This was the origin of what has since overspread states. The author of it is still living to enjoy the fruits of his victory, and is yet a strong temperance advocate. Though wholly uneducated he is well informed and is an effective speaker. Once while addressing an Augusta audience he was asked for the difference between a moderate drinker and a drunkard. Quick as lightning he flashed back, "the same difference there is between a pig and a hog. A pig will be a hog if you give him time. The moderate drinker will be a drunkard if you'll only wait."

Politics on the Bench.

From the Cuthbert Appeal.

If a judge of the superior court is mentioned in connection with the govenorship of his state, is it right that insinuations should be thrown out by the press that, unless he resigns his office, he will employ corrupt means to further his political aspirations? Is honorable ambition to succeed by underhand methods only? Now, in casting about for a governor, each section has its especial pet. This should not warrant an attack upon some other good man, who may be mentioned, simply because he is an officer, and without the semblance of a charge to bring against him, except that he is apt to take advantage of his position to make friends, to the disadvantage of his less favored opponent.

How are we to judge of the conduct or talents of another, except through the position he is called upon to fill? Those who have given the greatest satisfaction in the past are the men who went up step by step, and not those who come from the shades of seclusion. A judge of the superior court, or any other man occupying an office of public trust, will not risk his good name in questionable measures, in the very sight of higher honors being offered by an admiring public. Rather will they be more guarded in speech and act, knowing that every word and action is sure to meet with the severest criticism. To resign is a tacit acknowledgment that to be a candidate for a higher office means trickery, bribery and corruption generally. To remain in the field against such unfounded opposition shows true courage and manhood. The newspaper that believes it can injure the reputation of a good man by advertising him as a judge of the superior court in politics, falls short of its expectations. Already such advertising has redounded to the good of candidates and the mortification of nameless scribes. His case is strengthened, for the masses can see nothing in such a fight but vindictive persecution.

It is the merest folly to resign any office to become a candidate. If a man is pure he will employ only honorable means to secure his success. If he is impure, the public knows too well from past experience to what low and disgraceful acts he will resort to curry public favor, and his aspirations are nipped in the bud. As to selecting between the judge on the bench and the common politician, who will be apt to measure his conduct by the rules of propriety, the man who has a reputation to uphold, in accordance with the dignity of his position, or the one who feels no restraint and waits for the incumbent, whom, perhaps, death may have removed, to be carried from the presence of his associates, ere he hies himself away to elbow the powers that be, in his interest and behalf.

Courtesy, as well as necessity, demands that where a judge is disqualified in his own circuit, some one of his associates shall preside. If it is true that these rounds develop judges into politicians, then there is not a court of equity in the state.

The Governorship.

LaGrange Reporter: The announcement by Governor McDaniel of his intention not to be a candidate for re-election to the office of governor greatly simplifies the gubernatorial situation. There are now only two candidates in the field. There may be any number of "dark horses," who hope, by some hitch in the proceedings of the convention, to be rushed in at the last moment, and bear off the honor which other have toiled and waited for. The announced candidates are Messrs. Bacon and Simmons. To both of them the Reporter feels kindly. Judge Simmons has made a good record on the bench, and is, locally, a popular gentleman. He would, doubtless, fill the red chair with honor to himself and the state. While cheerfully conceding his fitness for the place, our sense of justice inclines us to support Mr. Bacon. There are two things which outweigh all others with us in thus deciding between two prominent and able gentlemen. In the darkest days Georgia has ever known, Gus Bacon labored earnestly for her re-habilitation; fought the carpet-baggers at every step; stood in his place like a salamander, and, by his manful conduct, by his fidelity and ability as a legislator, by his scorn of the state's enemies, and incessant labors for their overthrow, contributed more, perhaps, than any of his contemporaries to the restoration of good local government. As speaker of the house, he has necessarily largely guided and controlled the counsels of the state, and this power he has used wisely, skillfully and for the best ends. So noble minded and able a public servant surely should be rewarded. To these considerations we may add that of his eminent fitness for the position. His knowledge of state affairs, of the public men of Georgia, material resources of the commonwealth and the means of their development, is as accurate and full as that of any statesman of his years. He would grasp the helm with a vigorous hand and hold it firmly in storm and in calm. Our second claim in behalf of Mr Bacon is that he has waited long, patiently and with dignity for this crowning reward of unselfish services to Georgia. Though a formidable candidate before two or three conventions, and though almost within reach of the honor more than once, he has, instantly, when another choice wes made, accepted the verdict of his fellow-citizens and heartily indorsed their action. He has never sulked because of disappointment. With a self-repression that does him infinite honor, he has cheerfully acquiesced in the selection of others for the place he would have adorned, and has labored for their election thereto. We are mistaken in our judgment of the people of Georgia if their sense of fair play does not call for his nomination.

RELIGIOUS REVIVAL.

HOW THE MACON MINISTRY IS LABORING.

Handbills Sown Broadcast—Changing the Track—Street Car Lines—The Sick of Macon—Baseball News—Improvements—A Peace Warrant—Personal Gossip, Etc.

MACON, Ga., April 10—[Special.]—For several days the interest in the revivals of religion in Macon have been gaining ground. Rev. DeWitt Burkhead, of Montgomery, of the Presbyterians, and Revs. J. B. Culpepper, J. M. Austin and others, of various denominations, have been striving to awaken a renewed interest in the good work of soul-saving. Yesterday and today thousands of handbills have been distributed all over the city and suburbs bearing this proclamation.

> "WILL IT PAY?"
> The Scripture asks "If a man should gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"
> We invite the business men of Macon to the gospel meetings held every afternoon at 4 o'clock, and every evening at 7:45, at Mulberry street church during all this week and the next. Business men believe in honesty, and in keeping their promises to their fellow men. Are we all equally honest with God? Have we kept our promises to Him? If not, now is the time to fulfil them.
> We invite the ladies of Macon to these gospel meetings at 4 p. m. and 7:45, at Mulberry street church. The women of Christian lands owe to Christ everything that makes their lives beautiful. Will not tre and tender women requite the Master's love by aiding in the work of woman's greatest need—a wide-spread interest in religion?
> We invite the young people of Macon to these gospel meetings. To form right character is better than to get wrong and have to reform. The way to do about sin is to stop before you begin.
> Plain, practical, pointed preachings by Rev. J. B. Culpepper, M. F. McCook, J. C. Hammond and others. Let everybody come.

The effect of this earnest appeal is made manifest in the increased attendance and interest in these meetings, and it is thought by the end of another week the membership of the various churches will be largely increased. Macon was never better supplied with real, earnest, zealous preachers, in all the churches, than just at this time. And truly the fields are white for the harvest.

Changing the Track.

MACON, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—The landslide near the cemetery has necessitated the moving in of a portion of the East Tennessee railroad track. The work is going bravely on and will soon be completed. This change is only temporary, and while the new track is being used, the old line will be repaired. Flat cars loaded with dirt are being hauled to the place where the landslide occurred, and it is being filled in as rapidly as possible.

The Street Car Line.

MACON, April 10.—[Special.]—For the last three evenings travelers from and to East Macon have been much annoyed by the early stoppage of the cars. The reason for this is that there was a stipulation between the street railroad company and the city that a watchman should be constantly on duty at the East Tennessee railroad crossing. For the last three nights it is alleged that he left his post at an early hour, thus causing the car drivers to stop, as they have orders not to run over the crossing unless a watchman is on duty.

The work of excavating a tunnel under the Central railroad on McIntosh street has begun. The gentleman in charge informed a CONSTITUTION reporter that it would take a force of twenty men at least a month to dig out the cut. It will be 345 feet long, and the present track will have to be supported by temporary trestling while the excavation is being made. Piling for that purpose has been driven, and the work is well under way.

The Sick of Macon.

MACON, Ga., April 10—[Special.]—The fearful epidemic of measles, roseola and pneumonia still rages in Macon. This morning Mrs. Etheridge, wife of Carl Etheridge, of East Macon, succumbed to the dreadful disease. She leaves a husband and several children. Dixon's oldest son is not likely to live.

At the house where Etheridge lives two other deaths have occurred this week. Near Tatnall square two deaths, both children of a family of which the remainder are all down, are reported. There seems to be no chance for an abatement of the epidemic. The statement in these columns yesterday to the effect that there were twenty-five hospitals in East Macon was meant by the physician who said it, of course, to convey an idea of the wide-spread disease. Other portions of the city are suffering in a similar manner. Physicians attribute the fatality of the week to exposure, which has brought on pneumonia while the victims were still convalescing with the measles.

Improvements.

MACON, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—The track for the tests on fireman's parade day is being graded on Mulberry street.

The area in front of the Volunteer's armory is being filled in, and will be beautified and improved by the authorities.

White painted boards have been riveted to the Central railroad guard posts in front of the carshed.

It would be a good idea to utilize the piles of broken stone at the crossing of Poplar street and Fourth.

A Police Warrant.

MACON, Ga. April 10.—[Special.]—Today Rosa Hill applied to Judge Freeman for a warrant to force Margaret Wallace to keep the peace. The warrant was placed in the hands of Bailiff Henderson. It seems that Rosa and Margaret had a cursing bout, and Margaret called Rosa names, and the outcome of the matter was a fisticuff, resulting in a peace warrant.

Big Cotton Sale.

MACON, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—Yesterday W. H. Jones, of East Macon, sold 600 bales of cotton held in his warehouse. The cotton brought 8½ cents per pound all around. At 500 pounds to the bale, this amounts to 300,000 pounds, and this will aggregate $25,000. It is the largest cotton transaction ever made in East Macon.

The Old Guard.

MACON, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—Last evening the Macon survivors of the old Macon Guards assembled in Judge Freeman's office and discussed the propriety and expediency of attending the Chatham Artillery centennial. They adjourned without any final action, but it was unanimously decided to attend and to confer with other members outside the city, looking towards one organized attendance.

While they were in session a gentleman exhibited one of the badges gotten up by the Artillery. It was made in England, and is the handsomest military badge ever seen in this country.

At the Postoffice.

MACON, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—The mails are getting all right again, and the drummers are happy.

Colonel Hardeman now has a set of well trained assistants in the various departments, and the office is conducted in a highly satisfactory manner.

Just now the assistant postmaster and the night clerk are both quite ill, the latter with scarlet fever. This makes the labors of the remaining corps very heavy. Through the kindness of the carriers, a great many business men get their mail delivered at night. Carrier Holly is especially courteous in this respect.

Personal and Social.

MACON, April 10.—[Special.]—Judge Simmons and Solicitor Hardeman have returned from Perry.

Mrs. J. E. Wiley is visiting friends in Eatonton.

The Good Templars will engage in memorial services in honor of John B. Gough, tomorrow.

The Athenæums held an interesting meeting at the residence of Ben C. Smith, last evening.

Mrs. P. W. Baughn after a pleasant visit to Macon, returned to Savannah, yesterday.

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK ON THE SOCIAL SIDE OF LIFE.

A Number of Pleasant Paragraphs About the Happenings in Society Circles—The Meetings of Clubs—Several Weddings Past and in Prospect—Notes of Various Sorts.

On last Wednesday evening, at her residence, 58 Luckie street, Mrs. Dykeman's music class gave the first of a series of concerts to a few friends. The occasion was a brilliant success, and reflected credit on Mrs. Dykeman, as well as on all who participated, and those who were lucky enough to receive invitations were favored with a rare musical treat. Mrs. Dykeman and her scholars were assisted by Prof. Schneider, Mr. Lowenstein, Miss Hannah Shehan and Miss Cleo Prather. The following programme was rendered:

1. Piano Duett—"Lucia oi Lammermoor," Professor Erwin Schneider and Mrs. Dykeman.
2. Soprano Solo—"Si tusavis," Miss Annie Lou Love.
3. Piano Solo—"Bonnie Doone," Miss Clio Prather
4. Soprano Solo—"Queen of the Night," Miss Angelyn Adams.
5. Piano Solo—"Valse de Concert," Professor Schneider.
6. Soprano Solo—"L'Estasi," Miss Louise Prather.
7. Piano and Violin Duett—"Poet and Peasant," Miss Clio Prather and Mr. Lowenstein.
8. Vocal Duett—"Cheerfulness," Misses Louise and Eva Prather.
9. Zithern Solo—Professor Sneider.
10. Soprano Solo—"After," Miss Tessie Deihl.
11. Vocal Quartette—"Moonlight on the Lake," Miss Annie L. Love, Soprano, Miss Hannah Shehan, Alto. Mr. A. Pierce Evans, Tenor; Mr. Manson Wilson, basso.

A more interesting programme could not have been gotten up, and its renditition was simply perfect. Mrs. Dykeman's talent as a vocalist is known and appreciated, while that of Professor Schneider goes without saying. Miss Annie L. Love and Miss Angelyn Adams were allotted very pretty solos which they sang in a charming manner, while Misses Louise and Eva Prather sang a vocal duet "Cheerfulness" very sweetly. Miss Tessie Deihl acquitted herself handsomely in the beautiful soprano solo "After." She has a sweet voice which was never displayed to better advantage, and she received unstinted applause. Miss Clio Prather is really a superb pianist. She became quite a favorite with all who were present on account of her exquisite rendition of several very difficult piano solos, and her talent is remarkably well developed for a little girl of her age. The programme was closed with the beautiful quartette "Moonlight on the Lake" by Mr. A. Pierce Evans as tenor. Mr. Manson Wilson basso, Miss Hannah Shehan alto, and Miss A L. Love soprano.

The occasion was a pleasant one, and it is to be hoped Mrs. Dykeman and her scholars will favor their friends with another before long.

A pleasant meeting was enjoyed Tuesday evening by the young folks of the Chautauqua literary and scientific circle at the Trinity church parsonage. A large number were present, An entertaining programme had been arranged, and it was rendered with splendid effect. The entertainments of this society are among the most interesting ever given in the city.

A large party from Atlanta attended a hop at Stone Mountain Tuesday evening. They report a most enjoyable time.

St. Paul's Dime club gave an entertainment Thursday evening. It was largely attended, and the entertainment was very successful. The programme, which was carefully prepared, was well rendered, and it was with regret that the delighted audience dispersed. The following is the programme:

Song—"Oh, to be Nothing," Mrs. Dunlap, Mrs. Howell and Miss Frizzell.
Reading—(Original) "Mrs. Fitzgoober and Base-ball," Mr. Ed Wood.
Music—"Little Wanderer," Miss May Bradley.
Recitation—"Patchey." Miss Nannie Tuttle.
Music—"Come Back to Erin," Miss Emma Webb.
Dialogue—"Mrs. Green and Mrs. Freshour," Misses Annie Wells and Carrie Frizzell.
Instrumental music—Polly Morton.
Recitation—Mr. Ollie Johnson.
Music—Selections by string band.
Song—"By-by, Baby, By-by," Miss Edna Price.
Recitation—"Papa's Letter," Miss Lula Maddox.
Music—Miss Sallie Frizzell.
Recitation—"Two of Them." Miss Lula Harvill.
Duet—"In the Starlight," Misses Hattie Marbut and Lizzie Wilson.
Recitation—Miss Cora Spinks.
Song—Mrs. Myers.
Instrumental music—Mrs. Dunlap.
Music—"Medley," by string band.

By request, Miss Edna Price repeated the "Crooked Mouth Family," and received great applause.

Most prominent among the successes, were the performances of "Mrs. Green and Mrs. Freshours," "Patchey," by Miss Nannie Tuttle, and "Papa's Letter," by Miss Lula Maddox.

The many friends of Mrs. E. P. Chamberlin and daughter, Miss Eva, will be glad to learn that they have returned to their home in the city after an absence of nearly a year in New York city. Miss Eva is fully recovered in health.

The monthly social and literary meeting at the Third Presbyterian church last Wednesday evening, was quite successful. This organization have a good programme arranged once a month, and so far they have proven attractive and entertaining. The following is the programme:

Song—"My Trundle Bed," by Rev. N Keff Smith.
Recitation—"A Yankee Fool," by Miss Mirtice Phirl.
Recitation—"Mikel Snider's Partner," by Mr. Wiley.
Recitation—"Lady Buyient," by Miss C. Simmons.
Recitation—"Kentucky Belle," by Miss C. Ivie.
Recitation—"William Gore," by Miss J. Harris.
Recitation—"Only a Waif," by Mr. F. Hollingsworth.
Recitation—"Drowned," by T. Zimmons.

A large audience was present, and all were more than pleased with the entertainment.

The West Side club is still enjoying its usual weekly meetings. It is one of the few clubs that seems to have overcome all obstacles and has become a permanent organization. On Thursday evening the club met at Mrs. B. H. Dorster's. A large number of ladies and gentlemen were present, and the evening was one of rare enjoyment. The programme, consisting of music and recitations, was good, and kept the entire audience interested from beginning to end.

Organ and violin duet by Mr. Walter Carlton and Miss Lee Carlton was very good, and was applauded to the echo.

"Watch as Well as Pray," was read in a splendid manner by Mr. Powell.

Mrs. Doster sang "Georgia Girls." It is a splendid song and she sang it with fine effect. Her voice is not too strong, but is full and sweet and is admirably suited to parlor singing.

The feature of the evening was Judge Anderson's address declining to act in the capacity of poet laureate of the club.

A selection from the "Fool's Revenge" was recited by Mr. Scott Thornton, the young tragedian, in a manner at once striking and affective. It was received with great applause.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing three months; Mr. B. H. Doster, president; Miss Miriam Bagby (re-elected), secretary; Mr. Ed. Moncrief, treasurer.

The club is in a prosperous condition, and its membership is increasing weekly.

The Atlanta Musical association is busy at work on a programme for their next concert. The "Stabat Mater" will be rendered with fine solo talent and large chorus. The active membership is increasing, and the association's prospects are fine. In June the association expects to give a festival concert, with 100 chorus singers.

The members want the associate membership number filled up before the next concert, which comes off May 13. Those who desire to see this association succeed should give in their names early for associate or active membership, as their expenses are heavier this year than they will be in the future, from the fact that all their furniture, music, piano, etc., have been purchased, and it consequently draws heavily on their finances.

Mr. Charles T. Bunch gave a delightful dance at his residence, on Nelson street, last Tuesday evening. A large number assembled, and the evening passed most pleasantly. Mr. and Mrs. Bunch were untiring in their efforts to add in every way to the pleasure of their guests, and right well did their efforts succeed.

Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, the well known southern authoress, returned Monday from New York, where she has been for several months past. Mrs. Bryan will remain here only two weeks, during which time she will be with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Byrd, at No. 181 Whitehall street. She will then return to New York, and resume her literary labors. Mrs. Bryan looks well and says the northern climate agrees with her. She seems delighted with her pesition in New York. The lady is better known to southern readers as the author of "Manche," "Kildee," and "Wild Work." Her many friends have extended her a cordial welcome.

The Savannah Times says: "Rev. Dr. James G. Armstrong arrived in the city this morning from Atlanta, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Miriam Amstrong. They were met at the depot by the committee of reception appointed by the Irish Land League, and escorted to the Pulaski house, where the doctor was called on by a number of our Irish fellow-citizens and others. He was taken in charge by the committee, and was driven to Bonaventure and various other of the beautiful resorts adjacent to the city."

TRY THE FRANK SIDDALLS SOAP

A celebrated writer of English literature was paid an enormous price for preparing this article: Children or Grown Persons—wishing to improve themselves in composition or letter writing should carefully read the entire page and note the ingenuity by which so much information has been given in so small a space.

Send for Pamphlet mailed free

An Eminent Divine says:—"The Advancement of the World and the Spread of Civilization and Christianity depends on interchange of thought among people, and their willingness to learn, and that the Man or Woman who opposes the introduction of new improvements, the trial of new ways and the use of new things, Should be condemned as not being good and useful members of Society

Dont forget to send for Pamphlet

Your neighbors will be very much pleased if you invite some of them in and let them see The Frank Siddalls Way of Washing Clothes—let them see the whole operation:—Be sure to let them see the Clothes put in to soak.

It will be quite a curiosity for them to see a wash done without scalding or boiling a single piece no matter how dirty or soiled, and without even using a wash kettle to heat the water in.

Make the blue water VERY soapy.

Husbands ask your Wives,
Wives coax your Husbands,
Sisters persuade your Brothers,
Brothers tell your Sisters,
to try the Frank Siddalls Soap.

AND NOW IF NOT SET IN YOUR OLD WAYS

be sure to try The Frank Siddalls Soap for Toilet—Bath—Shaving—try it for Washing Dishes—for House-cleaning—for Scrubbing—and be sure to try The Frank Siddalls Way of Washing Clothes.

Every subscriber to this paper is specially interested in reading the whole of this page, each line is important to every Man Woman and Child or it would not be published but would be omitted, and so reduce the cost of the Advertisement and Remember there is nothing Stated Here BUT THE SIMPLE TRUTH

Although it seems strange to use for Toilet, Shaving, &c. the same kind of Soap that is recommended for kitchen use, still sensible people know that the world moves, and will be glad to try The Frank Siddalls Soap.

DONT BE A CLAM

Even a person of only ordinary intelligence will know for certain that a Soap that is excellent for the Skin cannot possibly hurt clothes for Cleaning House

for Toilet and Bath

Clams are not a proper model for human beings to copy after for they open their shells to take in their accustomed food, but they shut up very tight when anything new comes along

FOR THEY ARE CLAMS

and dont propose to allow things to penetrate their shells that were unknown to their grandfather clams and to their grandmother clams

A Clam is not a good thing for a Housekeeper to copy after:—
A Clam is not a good thing for a Farmer to copy after:—is not a good thing for a Grocer to copy after:—

A WIDE-AWAKE HOUSEKEEPER will try new ways that are endorsed by leading newspapers
A WIDE-AWAKE FARMER will try a Butter Worker and a Hay Fork
A WIDE-AWAKE GROCER will buy the kind of goods his customers call for A WIDE-AWAKE MAN always wants to try the Soap he sees highly recommended for Toilet, Bath and Shaving.

Of course a woman is NOT expected to try every new thing that is offered her; but when the most reliable papers in the United States emphatically endorse in the strongest manner every claim made for The Frank Siddalls Soap, there is certainly no excuse for not giving it one square, honest trial strictly as directed. Intelligent women are adopting The Frank Siddalls Way of Washing Clothes, and those who have done so are already beginning to look down with pity on persons who are set in their old ways:—SO DONT BE A CLAM

FOR THE TOILET IT IS SIMPLY PERFECTION

All Perfumes are injurious to the Skin; The Frank Siddalls Soap is not perfumed, but has an agreeable odor from its ingredients that is always pleasant, even to an invalid; it never leaves any odor on the skin; the face never has any of the unpleasant gloss that other soaps produce; it should always be used for washing the hands and face of those troubled with chapped skin; a child will not dread having its face washed when this Soap is used as it does not cause the eyes to smart with the dreaded intense sting that even Imported Castile soap often causes; it always leaves the Skin soft and smooth; wash your baby with it.

No tooth-powder or tooth-wash will compare with it.
A little on the tooth-brush makes the mouth, teeth and gums perfectly clean.
It leaves a pleasant, aromatic taste, a sweet breath, and a clean tooth-brush.

It is especially adapted for toilet use with the hard water of the West and in Lake-water

Persons who despise a musty Sponge or Wash-rag will appreciate The Frank Siddalls Soap. Whenever either a Sponge or Wash-rag has a disagreeable smell it is due entirely to the so-called fine toilet soap that is such a favorite with you. It is the place of Soap to keep a Sponge or Wash-rag sweet and clean, and The Frank Siddalls Soap will do it without any occasion to expose it to the air or sun.

Try it for washing your Eye-Glasses and Spectacles

When used for washing the head it is better than Shampooing; plenty of the rich white lather should be left in the hair (not washed out); it entirely does away with the use of Hair Tonic, Bay Rum, Bandoline, Pomade, or any hair dressing. Used this way it removes dandruff, the hair will not collect dust, and there will not be any itching of the scalp: Coat Collars, Hat Linings and Neck-wear will keep clean much longer.

The Frank Siddalls Soap is superior to Benzine or Ammonia for cleaning Coat Collars, and for removing Grease Spots, etc., and is guaranteed not to injure the garment.

ODD USES—QUAINT USES—SPECIAL USES

Eminent Physicians claim that Skin Diseases, such as Ringworm, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Pimples on the face, etc., are caused by soap made from rancid grease:—Use The Frank Siddalls Soap and avoid all such troubles.

Artificial Teeth and Artificial Eyes will retain their original brilliancy unimpaired when kept washed with The Frank Siddalls Soap.

It washes Telescope Lenses and Photographers' Plates without any possibility of scratching them, while it is being used with the most gratifying results in Schools of Design for washing expensive brushes used by the students

For washing Pearls, Coral, Diamonds, Jewelry, Gold and Silver Plate, and for cleaning Watch Crystals, it is considered by Jewelers superior to any powder or other preparation.

Wash your Dog with The Frank Siddalls Soap; leave plenty of the lather in its hair, and you will be surprised at the improvement; a dog washed with this Soap will not have fleas.

Use it for taking grease spots out of fine carpets and for cleaning rag carpets; also for cleaning garments of every description. It is better than benzine or hartshorn for cleaning clothing, and is guaranteed not to injure the fabric.

Use it for wiping off Oil Cloths, Linoleum, etc.—IT KEEPS THE COLORS BRIGHT—and as it does away with scrubbing them, they will of course last much longer.

The hands of those at farm-work, when The Frank Siddalls Soap is used, will not chap from husking corn, driving teams, and other out-door employment, but of course home-made soap, toilet soap, or any other kind, MUST NOT BE USED, (not even Castile Soap)

It is invaluable to Farmers for washing wool before carding it or before selling it.

Milk Pans, Churns, and all Milk Utensils, when washed with The Frank Siddalls Soap, will be as clean and sweet as new, and do NOT require scalding or putting in the sun. It also THOROUGHLY removes the smell from the hands after milking.

FOR LADIES TO READ

ONLY THINK! ONE SOAP FOR ALL USES!

To the Housekeeper and her Help, to the Boarding-house Mistress and her Lady Boarders, to the Farmer's Wife and her Daughters, for the Toilet and Bath of every Lady of Refinement, The Frank Siddalls Soap offers great advantages.

Among the Housekeepers of New England (where thrifty housekeeping is proverbial) it has gained immense favor, and there is no better evidence of the merits of an article than to be able to say that it meets approval in the Homes of New England.

FOR LAUNDRY AND KITCHEN USE

JUST THINK! No Scalding or Boiling! No Smell on Wash-day!
Clothes Clean and Beautifully White, and as Sweet as if never worn!
No Rough, Red Hands! Clothes remain White even if put away for years!
The Soap Positively Guaranteed not to Injure even the Finest Laces!

Where water or fuel is scarce, remember that with The Frank Siddalls Soap much less fuel, is necessary and a few buckets of water is enough for a large wash

JUST THINK! Flannels and Blankets as Soft as when New!
The most delicate Colored Lawns and Prints actually Brightened!
A girl of 12 or 13 can easily do a large wash without even being tired!
And best of all, the wash done in less than half the usual time!

Use The Frank Siddalls Soap for washing Dishes:—it is the only Soap that leaves the dish-rag Sweet and White, and the only Soap that can be depended upon to remove the Smell of Fish, Onions, etc., from Forks and Dishes. When you have a dirty dish-rag, dont blame your servants; it is not their fault; for you have given them soap made of rancid grease, and the result is a foul dish-rag; use The Frank Siddalls Soap, made of Pure Beef Suet, and you will have a clean sweet smelling cloth. So here is the Housekeeper's choice: Common Soap and a foul dish-rag—or—The Frank Siddalls Soap and a dish-rag to be proud of

FOR HOUSE-CLEANING

This is where The Frank Siddalls Soap appeals to the real ladylike Housekeeper. Use it for Scrubbing and Cleaning. Use it for washing Paints, Windows and Mirrors, Wine-glasses, Goblets, and all Glass Vessels; ordinary Soap, as is well known, is not fit for washing glass, while The Frank Siddalls Soap is a most elegant thing for this purpose and does away with the Use of Ammonia.

Use it for washing Marble Door Steps, Bureau Tops, Marble Statuary, Mantlepieces, etc. It is the nicest thing for Marble that can be imagined.

For washing Bed Clothes, and Bedding, even of Patients with Contagious and Infectious Diseases, and for washing Utensils used in the Sick-room, it can be relied on to cleanse and purify without scalding or boiling a single article.

FOR WASHING BABIES AND BABY CLOTHES

Babies will not suffer with Prickly Heat, or be trouble with sores of any kind, when nothing but The Frank Siddalls Soap is used, its ingredients being so Pure and Mild.

Dont use Soda for washing Nursing Bottles or Gum Tubes dont even scald them:—wash them only with this Soap, and they will never get sour, but will always be sweet and clean.

FOR THE SCHOOL TEACHER

It is the best thing for washing blackboards and school slates, leaving them free from grease; the Soap does not even have to be rinsed off. Blackboards that are considered worthless can be restored by washing with The Frank Siddalls Soap.

FOR MEN TO READ

ONLY THINK! ONE SOAP FOR ALL USES!

The Merchant and his Clerk, the Photographer, the Optician, the Artist, the Jeweler, the Printer, the Bather at the Turkish Bath, the Barber, the Hotel, the Stable, the Army and the Navy, will all reap great benefit from the The Frank Siddalls Soap.

FOR SHAVING

Its heavy, lasting lather is so different from that of any Shaving Soap that its superiority is almost incredible; the face never burns or smarts, no matter how dull the razor, how tender the skin, or how closely shaved, and the Sponge and Soap Cup will always be sweet-smelling.

IMPORTANT FOR SHIPBOARD AND ARMY USE

It washes freely in hard water, and be sure to remember, where water is scarce, that The Frank Siddalls Way of Washing only takes a few buckets of water for a large wash.

FOR HORSES, HARNESS, CARRIAGES, etc.

It is vastly superior to Castile Soap for washing a horse's mane and tail, while for washing Sores, Galls, Scratches, etc., it is indispensable. No Stable is complete without it. For Harness it is better than Harness Soap, thoroughly cleansing the leather and rendering it soft and pliable, while for washing Cars and Car Windows, cleaning the running-gear and bodies of fine carriages, it is without a rival; by its use Paint and Varnish will last much longer, and the Windows and Lamps will be as clear as crystal

The Frank Siddalls Soap is elegant for washing Printing Ink from the hands, and from Printers' Rollers, Type and Electrotypes, being much better than Benzine, and safer, as shocking accidents by fire often occur from Benzine; and Parents whose children use Amateur Printing Presses should remember this. Type and Rollers washed with The Frank Siddalls Soap are in splendid condition for immediate use, and will take the ink readily.

SPECIAL FOR PHYSICIANS

To the Physician, the Druggist, the Nurse and the Patient its importance is becoming more and more widely known and appreciated, and it is rapidly superseding Imported Castile and similar soaps for use in the Sick-room, the Nursery and the Hospital.

A CERTAIN CURE—IN CASE OF INGROWING TOE-NAILS—A CERTAIN CURE in place of cotton-wool a little of The Frank Siddalls Soap should be kept pressed between the nail and tender flesh—one trial will prove its superiority over cotton-wool.

AS AN ANTISEPTIC AND DISINFECTANT

For washing Old Running Sores, Bed Sores, Cuts, Wounds and Burns; for washing Chafed Places on Infants and Adults; for use by persons suffering with Tetter, Ringworm, Salt Rheum, Itching Piles, Eruptions on the Face, and for children afflicted with Scaly Incrustations, it is without any of the injurious effects so often experienced when other soap is used; while for washing the Invalid it is a most valuable aid to the Physician, by the thoroughness with which it removes the exhalations from the skin that would otherwise tend to counteract the action of his medicines by closing up the pores, and which cannot be accomplished by any other soap.

Letters from well-known Physicians, describing their experience in their practice with The Frank Siddalls Soap, leave no doubt of the truth of these assertions.

Use it for washing Sores on the Feet, caused by walking or wearing tight shoes. Always leave plenty of the lather on—dont rinse the lather off.

For washing Graduate Measures and Mortars it is better than anything else.

Listen to what Nasby says:—
A man or woman who fights against new improvements or will not try them, is a clam:—so Dont be a clam but try The Frank Siddalls Soap for Shaving and for toilet; try it for every use that soap is put to Petroleum V. Nasby—

And now let every man and woman set aside prejudice and try Frank Siddalls Soap

And now if not set in your ways
try The Frank Siddalls Way of Washing Clothes

kick away the Wash Boiler with Frank Siddalls Soap
Dont spoil the old Boiler Sam

THE CONSTITUTION.
authorizes the statement that a thorough test of The Frank Siddalls Soap for Toilet, Laundry, and General Household Uses in the houses of gentlemen connected with its staff proves it to be everything claimed.

How a Lady can get the Soap to Try

At Places where it is Not Sold at the Stores:

Send the retail price 10 cents in money or postage stamps. Say she saw the advertisement in the "The Constitution." Only send for one cake and make these 2 promises:

Promise No. 1—That the Soap shall be used the first wash-day after receiving it, and that every bit of the family wash shall be done with it.

Promise No. 2—That the person sending will personally see that the printed directions for using the Soap shall be exactly followed.

By return mail a regular 10-cent cake of Soap will be sent, postage prepaid; it will be packed in a neat iron box to make it carry safely, and 15 cents in Postage Stamps will be put on:—

All this is done for 10 cents because it is believed to be a cheaper way to introduce it than to send salesmen to sell it to the stores

If your letter gets no attention, it will be because you have NOT made the promises, or because you have sent for more than one cake. Make the promises very plain, or the Soap will NOT be sent. A Cake will be sent Free of Charge to the Wife of a Grocer, the Wife of a Minister or the Wife of a Physician if the above TWO promises are made, but will NOT be sent if the promises are NOT made.

How to tell a Person of Refinement

A Person of Refinement will be glad to adopt a New, Easy, Clean Way of Washing Clothes, in place of the old, hard sloppy way.

How to tell a Person of Intelligence

A Person of Intelligence will have no difficulty in understanding and following the very easy and sensible directions.

How to tell a Person of Honor

A Person of Honor will scorn to do so mean a thing as to buy the Soap and not follow the directions so strongly urged.

How to tell Sensible Persons

Sensible Persons will not get mad when new and improved ways are brought to their notice, but will feel thankful that their attention has been directed to better methods.

And now dont get the old wash-boiler mended, but next wash-day give one honest trial to The Frank Siddalls Way of Washing Clothes.

Only One Cake must be sent for, but after trying it, dealers will buy it from their wholesale houses to accommodate you, or you can order direct from the Factory.

You must NOT send for more than one cake: If a friend wants to try it, she must send in a separate letter.

Persons who allow articles said to be as good as The Frank Siddalls Soap to be forced on them must expect to be deceived SEE THAT YOU GET WHAT YOU ASK FOR

It is guaranteed that The Frank Siddalls Soap is now sold by Wholesale Grocers in every city in the United States

Will cure Itching Piles so quickly as to seem almost miraculous, giving relief as soon as applied.

Dont ask your wife to try The Frank Siddalls Soap if you are not willing to try it for Shaving and Toilet

Will cure Ingrowing Toe-nails.

The lasting properties of the lather of The Frank Siddalls Soap are very remarkable, and add greatly to its value for Shaving purposes:—without any question, the lather from The Frank Siddalls Soap is far more lasting than that from any other soap—not excepting the most celebrated makes of this country or Europe.

And Now for the Clean, Neat, Easy, Genteel, Ladylike FRANK SIDDALLS WAY OF WASHING CLOTHES

There is nothing intricate about these directions:—any child 10 or 12 years of age—who has common sense—will have no trouble in following them:

A Wash-boiler MUST NOT be used, NOT EVEN TO HEAT THE WASH-WATER, and as the wash-water must only be lukewarm, a small kettle holds enough for a large wash.

A Wash-boiler will have a deposit formed on it from the atmosphere, in spite of the most careful housekeeper, which injures the delicate ingredients that are in this Soap

Be sure to heat the water in the Tea-Kettle the first time, no matter how odd it seems.

Wash the White Flannels with the other White Pieces.

Be sure to always make the last water soapy; the clothes will NOT smell of the Soap, but will be as sweet as if never worn, and stains that have been overlooked in washing will bleach out while drying, and the clothes will iron easier.

Always dissolve a small piece of Soap in the starch; it makes the ironing easier and the clothes handsomer

The Frank Siddalls Soap washes freely in hard water without Soda, Lye, or any washing compound.

Dont use Borax, Ammonia, or any other soap on any of the wash.

FIRST—Dip one of the garments in a tub of lukewarm water; draw it out on a wash-board, and rub the Soap LIGHTLY over it so as not to waste it, being particular not to miss soaping any of the soiled places.

Then ROLL IT IN A TIGHT ROLL, just as a piece is rolled when it is sprinkled for ironing, lay it in the bottom of the tub under the water, and go on the same way until all the pieces have the Soap rubbed on them and are rolled up.

Then go away for 20 minutes to one hour—by the clock—and let The Frank Siddalls Soap do its work.

NEXT—After soaking the FULL time, commence rubbing the clothes LIGHTLY on a wash-board AND THE DIRT WILL DROP OUT; turn the garments inside out to get at the seams, but dont use any more Soap; DONT SCALD OR BOIL A SINGLE PIECE, OR THEY WILL TURN YELLOW; and DONT wash through two suds. If the wash-water gets too dirty, dip some out and add a little clean water; if it gets too cold for the hands, add some hot water out of the tea-kettle.

If a Streak is hard to wash, rub some more Soap on it and throw the piece back into the suds for a few minutes.

NEXT COMES THE RINSING—which is to be done in lukewarm water, AND IS FOR THE PURPOSE OF GETTING THE DIRTY SUDS OUT, and is to be done as follows; Wash each piece LIGHTLY on a wash-board through the rinse-water (without using any more Soap,) AND SEE THAT ALL THE DIRTY SUDS ARE GOT OUT. ANY SMART HOUSEKEEPER WILL KNOW JUST HOW TO DO THIS.

NEXT, the Blue-water, which can be either lukewarm or cold: Use little or no Blueing, for this Soap takes the place of Blueing. STIR A PIECE OF THE SOAP in the Blue-water UNTIL THE WATER GETS DECIDEDLY SOAPY. Put the clothes THROUGH THIS SOAPY BLUE-WATER, wring them, and hang up to dry WITHOUT ANY MORE RINSING and WITHOUT SCALDING or BOILING A SINGLE PIECE.

Afterwards soap the Colored Pieces and Colored Flannels, let them stand 20 minutes to 1 hour, and wash the same way as the white pieces, being sure to make the last rinse-water soapy.

THE MOST DELICATE COLORS WILL NOT FADE WHEN WASHED THIS WAY, BUT WILL BE THE BRIGHTER

Offices of The Frank Siddalls Soap, 1019 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 11, 1886.

RED. BLUE.

Indications for Atlanta and Georgia, taken at 1 o'clock a. m: Increasing cloudiness, followed by local rains; slightly cooler. South Atlantic States: Increasing cloudiness; light local showers; winds generally southerly; slight changes in temperature. East Gulf States: Light local showers; slight changes in temperature; winds generally southerly.

THE bill admitting Washington territory as a state into the union passed the senate yesterday.

SANDERSVILLE is a prosperous city, situated in one of the finest counties in Georgia. It does a superb business; is dotted with schools and churches; abounds in literary and social features; and is, altogether, one of the places in which life is worth living.

EVERYBODY seems to have quieted down in St. Louis. The presence of troops with a Gatling gun has a wonderful effect towards preserving the peace. Too much praise can not be given the cool-headed men who stayed the mob in their mad career. Without their timely advice there would have occurred scenes that would have challenged in madness the frenzy of the commune in France.

THE policy of making governors out of good mayors, so successfully practiced with Governor Cleveland of New York, and Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania, might well be applied to Alabama. Mayor Reese, of Montgomery, is a coming man. His vigorous and able administration has given that city wonderful impetus, and put it on the best boom it has had in twenty years. He is a splendid type of the younger south, dashing, earnest, courageous and capable. A brilliant and useful career is ahead of Montgomery's distinguished mayor. THE CONSTITUTION has his picture—and a very pleasant picture it is, too—framed and set up in its sanctum. It will watch his future with great interest. In the meantime it drops a hint to Alabama—the live mayor of a capital city is mighty apt to be able to handle whatever he undertakes. If a dark horse takes the gubernatorial stakes in the Alabama free for all, look for Reese's colors on the winner.

THE spring freshet struck the advertising columns of THE CONSTITUTION last night. It overloaded the pages usually allotted for Sunday's advertising and covers more than twelve solid pages, making a total of nearly eighty columns. To accommodate this a 20-page CONSTITUTION is printed and more than forty columns of news supplement the immense drift of advertising. This is a record of business and enterprise that no other newspaper in the south will approach on this auspicious spring morning. The superb equipment of THE CONSTITUTION in men and machinery enables it to meet this emergency handily and to look with complacency on any further enlargement that the future may make necessary. In the meantime we wish our friends and contemporaries the top o' the morning!

The Constitution and the New Road.

The attempt to create the impression that THE CONSTITUTION is opposed to the Hawkinsville road is stupid and malicious. THE CONSTITUTION is neither for or against any route. It is for Atlanta. It will advocate the building of that road that promises, after investigation, to do most for Atlanta. To decide hastily in this crisis would be unwise; to make a mistake, fatal.

This is a crisis in Atlanta's history. She now maintains her trade under flagrant discriminations. These must have their effect sooner or later unless remedied, in spite of the energy and ability of her merchants. Added to this constant and insistent menace to her business, competing cities are sending new lines into her territory and flanking her on every side. It is not too much to say that the railroad map of Georgia is being made over. Columbus is going to build to Locust Grove or further. Macon is building to Covington and will go thence to Athens or Buford. Augusta is reaching out for Chattanooga via Gainesville. Savannah is promised a new route to Macon, Americus and Birmingham, and the contracts have been signed for a large part of the work. Rome has started for Carrollton, and a road from Millen to Jesup is spoken of as a certainty. If the reader will fix these lines in his mind's eye, he will see that they cut into Atlanta heavily. They will not only cripple her, but they build up her rivals.

In the midst of this universal activity it will not do for Atlanta to remain idle. Nor will it do for her to presume on the inability of her competitors to do what they are undertaking. She has already lost a great opportunity by this policy. She must be up and doing. She must defend the preeminence she has won. She now makes 41 per cent of the shipments made by all the cities in the pool, as shown by the pool commissioners' table. This is a grand showing—and it is just this enormous business that her competitors are fighting for, and that she must lose if she does not defend.

The people of Atlanta appreciate all this. They are more thoroughly in earnest than we have ever known them. Their courage rises with the emergency. And when the best way out of the impending trouble is shown them, they will go to the end of that way, no matter what it takes or what sacrifices it entails. All the more important is it, therefore, that she should be led into no mistake. What is done must be done by private subscription. Two subscriptions cannot be made. If her energy and capacity is exhausted in an experiment, and it proves unwise, she cannot undertake a new scheme. To summarize: the emergency is serious; our resources are limited; a mistake that exhausts the one without meeting the other, will be irreparable.

In this consideration we give unusual latitude to the discussion as to the best route for the new road which must and will be built. Wide and particular investigation is best. That which seems good today may be proved unwise tomorrow. It is easier to start right than to retrace steps taken in enthusiasm and error. Every suggestion that is printed is eagerly read and carefully weighed. Hundreds of shrewd business men follow on the map every imaginary line that is indicated, and study closely its advantage or disadvantage. Out of all this the true line and the best one will be formulated. Atlanta has put her head to it and the problem will be worked. Whatever is agreed on, whether Hawkinsville, Charleston or elsewhere, THE CONSTITUTION will earnestly support. We have neither interest, favor or prejudice, except our interest in Atlanta. This should be the position of every Atlantian.

Mr. Davis and the Hill Statue.

Some of our northern contemporaries, who were craven in war and are cruel in peace, are objecting to the promised visit of Mr. Jefferson Davis at the unveiling of the Hill statue.

All the same, Mr. Davis will be here. He will receive at the hands of his people, defeated though he was, such a welcome as is seldom given to men who lead conquering armies home. It would be strange if the people of the south did not love Mr. Davis. It would be pitiable if they felt constrained through any consideration, to dissemble their love.

Every man in the south realizes that the cause Mr. Davis led is finally and forever lost. But the blood and the treasure freely given to its maintenance was wasted indeed if it has not invested with lasting love and tenderness, all men, high or humble, who bore honorable part in that struggle. Mr. Davis is the most illustrious representative of that cause; he led it with ability; he served it with devotion, and accepted its overthrow with dignity. He never shrank from its responsibilities or dangers; he never lowered its honor, or shaded by the faintest touch the chivalrous impulse on which it was cast, or the stubborn and unconquerable courage with which it was fought. In all things, from first to last, his record is stainless as the sword that Lee sheathed at Appomatox, and as white as the soul that sought the stars from Johnston's bloody form at Shiloh. Craven is the southern heart that will not warm to its core at the sight of this dauntless gentleman; misdirected, the southern boy that does not grow up to honor his memory and love his name.

Mr. Davis will be here, because we want him to be here; because we love him, and want him to know it; because he loved the man whose immortal features the unveiled statue will disclose, and because that man loved him; because this is a free country and the cranks who skulked when war was raging can't run it when peace is smiling. Mr. Davis will be here.

Atlanta and the Railroads.

The agitation of new railroads for Atlanta has not abated her determination to exhaust every effort to get justice from the roads already built.

We could fill this column with instances of discrimination of the most flagrant character. Let one suffice for the present. We have before us a note from Mr. H. H. Colquitt, of the Furman fertilizer works, in which he shows the discrimination under which his company is forced to work. The railroads charge him $3 a ton for crude phosphate rock from Charleston to Atlanta. They charge him $2 a ton for carrying his product to Selma. It cost him, he says, $5 a ton on materials and products to get his stuff from Charleston to Selma. But the roads carry acid phosphate from Charleston to Selma for $3 a ton. The rate on acid phosphates from Charleston to Atlanta is $3.42. The rate from Charleston to Selma (225 miles further) is $3. So that the roads actually haul acid phosphates, kainit, salts and potash to Selma and Montgomery for 42 cents a hundred less than they haul them to Atlanta, although they go through Atlanta to reach Selma and then go 225 miles further. Mr. Colquitt says the discrimination against Atlanta gets steadily worse. That his company is $1 a ton worse off than last season, the Atlanta rate having been raised an average of 50 cents, and the rate for other points into Atlanta's territory having been decreased about 50 cents.

There is certainly some remedy for such injustice as this. There is some tribunal before which the tariff under which Atlanta suffers can be judged and its errors corrected. And the people of this city will assuredly find the tribunal and the remedy. The railroads may as well understand this.

The Knights of Labor Out West.

Through the action of the western strikers the Knights of Labor are rapidly forfeiting the confidence and sympathy of the general public.

Six months ago it was announced that the first principle of the Knights was peace; that they opposed strikes, and would, under no circumstances, permit violence. The public was assured that the discipline of the Knights was so perfect, their organization so compact, and their oaths so binding, that they could control their forces absolutely. These declarations, made through Mr. Powderly and indorsed by Knights everywhere, arrested public attention. The public agreed that if labor had organized on a platform of reason, and had the power to enforce its reasonable theory, and thus avoid the disorders that secret labor unions had usually brought, it was at least entitled to a patient and sympathetic hearing.

But what is the result? A strike, unauthorized and denounced by the central committee as unjustifiable, was called in the southwest. Under passionate and ill-tempered local leaders, who openly defied Mr. Powderly and his colleagues, it spread until it blocked the commerce of five states—isolated innocent communities almost to the point of starvation; bankrupted hundreds of innocent firms; impoverished thousands of thrifty workmen who knew little and cared less of the causes of the strike, and brought woe and suffering to tens of thousands helpless women and children. Trains were wrecked, bridges were burned, the authorities were defied, terrorism was established and innocent blood spilled. Public sympathy, which had been with the workingmen, swiftly changed. Meetings were held to denounce their course. The governors of four states issued proclamations against them. The state troops were ordered out. Frequent and bloody collisions have taken place and worse are threatened.

All this is deplorable, and if persisted in, can have but one result. It will crystalize public sentiment against the Knights of Labor. It will force reputable and conservative workingmen out of the order, and reduce it to the level of the Mollie Maguires. Its real leaders recognize this. Powderly, prostrated by the strain of this ill-advised strike, is unable to give counsel. Hayes, one of his colleagues, wringing his hands and weeping, walks up and down in front of a bloody mob protesting to God in despair. Turner, the secretary, denounces the strike that has wrought so much evil as without cause or authority. Practically the central committee, the appeal to which involved deliberation, and the decisions of which, removed as it is from local inflammation, would have had weight, has lost its power. The scepter has been struck from the hands of Powderly, and any local demagogue or bully can defy his authority and laugh at his messengers. The enemies of the Knights of Labor have steadily predicted this state of things. They have said that this movement held a devil that would eat at its vitals, and issue uncontrollable and desperate, from its form. They counted for the overthrow of this grand rally of laborers on the feuds in its ranks that its own violence would bring, and on the isolation from all the other elements of society that would be assured by its turbulence.

It looks as if these predictions would prove true. The troubles in the southwest, though the most striking, are not the only evidences of its irresponsibility and disorganization. Mr. Powderly months ago begged his followers to observe their oaths and stand by the principles of their order; adding that while he protested they were right, every hour brought news that they were wrong. The Knights appealed for public confidence by declaring that they organized to prevent strikes. And yet, four months after they became a controlling power in labor, more than 90,000 men have been called out on strikes, often over the protest of the older labor unions. Unless this policy is changed; unless violent methods are denounced and abandoned, the Knights of Labor will lose its power and fall short of its promise. There is one thing against which no organization can stand, and that is the settled and deliberate public sentiment of American communities. That is rapidly forming against the organization of Knights of Labor, and unless its real friends come to its rescue and hold up the hands of its chosen and conservative leaders, its power will be irrevocably gone.

The Rhode Island Election.

The smallest state in the union, but by no means the poorest or the least populous, elected last Wednesday, according to a long standing custom, republican state officers and a republican legislature. The legislature will re-elect Senator Aldrich, who has no opposition in his own party.

The election would scarcely be worth mention were it not for a constitutional amendment to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, and the defeat of the regular republican candidate for attorney general. The regular nominee was an anti-prohibitionist, and he was rejected to such an extent that the nominee of the prohibitionists was elected. Both nominees were republicans. The constitutional amendment received the necessary three-fifths vote. The vote was 14,755 for prohibition, and 9,146 against it. The liquor sellers raised a large fund, and the result was considered in doubt; but the skillful and untiring work of the women of the state carried the measure over all opposition. The struggle was a very bitter one.

The property qualification restriction was removed by constitutional amendment from all soldiers and sailors of foreign birth. The state is drifting slowly towards unrestricted suffrage, but every step, including the one just taken, is opposed by the republican party. The republican state convention expressly opposed the change. The only advocates of popular rights in the state are found in the democratic party.

Some Curious Race Statistics.

Mr. J. H. Beadle, a correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer—a lantern-jawed man with sharp eyes—who spent several months in the south, has written a curious letter on the mixture of races.

He was surprised, to begin with, at "finding so many 'white' black women in the south." He says he can't see the reason for calling a woman with perfectly fair skin, blue eyes and golden hair a black woman. Such women, he claims—without reason, as will be testified—he found not at all rare. In fact, he says he counted one hundred negroes as they came to him at random. Four of them he reports as white as himself, fourteen were black and eighty-two were brown mixed. This experiment he repeated in colored churches, schools and streets, and found the proportion to hold good.

From this series of actual scorings he estimates that of the six million blacks in the south only one million are actually black, and that not less than two hundred and fifty thousand are actually white. This quarter of a million white negroes, who have Caucassian features, fair skin, straight hair—or as he picturesquely puts it, "blue eyes and golden hair"—are negroes only to those who know them to be such, and are classed as negroes only by those who have prejudices on the subject. He then draws his conclusion, which is that thousands of these white negroes are yearly going north, and there mingling unsuspected and unclassified in the ranks of northern society. With nothing in form or feature to stamp them as negroes, and no knowledge on which to base the assertion that they are negroes, he concludes they marry and intermarry with the northerners who do not "suspect the African infusion." Mr. Beadle opens up an interesting field of inquiry and research.

THERE is something gloomy and peculiar in the attitude of Lord Edmunds. He always goes into retirement when taking a toddy.

JOHN LOGAN'S book is out. Logan's enemies will be delighted to hear this.

ROME is inclined to fret a little because Atlanta sympathized with it so heartily. The truth is Atlanta has a heart as big as a Texas county.

MR. GLADSTONE'S programme has caused a good deal of buzzing among the "imperial" insects.

THERE will be no election in Ohio next week, but the campaign goes on all the same.

SPRING again threatens to set in.

THE robin, one of the few birds that wear the bloody shirt, has gone north; probably to Ohio.

THE Savannah News is opposed to the silver dollar with all its heart. If the cotton samplers of that city should refuse to receive it there would be great trouble in the country.

THE whisky ring has a great deal more money than the Pan-Rogers family.

THE New York Graphic has a long editorial on the weather, in which the remark is made that "the ocean is well enough." We are glad to hear this.

The Gate City National Bank.

It is from a sense of duty that we call attention to the interest certificates that are issued by the Gate City National bank of this city, and with great pleasure that we commend this most worthy and rapidly growing institution to our readers. We have watched closely the career of this bank and its management from its very organization, and have been astonished at the indomitable pluck, the steady determination, untiring energy, unwavering confidence, the originality, and withal, the skill, in all that pertains to finance, of the head that directs and controls its affairs. It has conceived, planned and executed, regardless of opposition at their inception, or unfavorable criticism at their execution and with an abiding confidence in their successful termination, and in the ultimate approval of stockholders and the public. We esteem the success of this bank one of the greatest achievements of Atlanta. We think we can state without fear of contradiction that its management has done more to advance the mercantile and manufacturing interests of our city than any other. It was the first to reduce the bank rate of interest from 12 per cent to 8 per cent per annum, and we have always thought that for this step alone it deserved at the hands of our merchants a very large increase of business. We have advocated time and again the organization of savings banks and in the absence of statutory enactments, properly regulating their management, we think it a most fortunate thing that this bank has stepped to the front, and despite the oposition of others, adopted a plan which offers to the depositor every advantage of a savings bank, with the safeguards and security which none but a national bank, capably and honestly managed, can offer. With skill, system and economy in the conduct of this department, it is enabled to pay a rate of interest quite equal to that paid the purchaser of a bond of the city of Atlanta, with the assurance that at any time you can receive the amount deposited, regardless of the state of the market or the usual and periodical fluctuation of prices. To those who have money lying idle, whether it be the thousands of the capitalist, the hard earned accumulations of the laborer, or the mite of the widow; whether held for curent expenses or awaiting some contemplated investment, we say by all means place it with this bank and take one of their interest certificates. Encourage them in their laudable efforts to build up your city, to foster the disposition to accumulate and save, which, if adhered to, will inevitably make you rich and prosperous. Continue to patronize and build up an institution which has always led in every movement that promised advantages to our city or its customers. We predict that it will be but a short time before their deposit account will reach, as it deserves to be, up into the millions. Its managers are young, active, alert, prudent, honest and skillful, and will win the success they deserve.

Theatricals Next Week.

Next week will see a revolution in the prices of admission at the opera house. The management has resolved to try lower prices to induce a larger attendance, and the week will show conclusively if the want of patronage results from a lack of taste for that kind of amusement, or was caused by a scarcity of money. Mr. Daniel E. Bandman, a tragedian well known in this country as well as in Europe, supported by Miss Louise Beaudet and an excellent company, will appear for one week, beginning Monday, in the best plays of Shakespeare and of the standard repertoire. Mr. Bandman is an artist of great merit. Nym Crinkle, the renowned American critic of the New York Times, proclaims Mr. Bandman the greatest Shylock living, and plans him in that manner over Booth and over Irving. As Narcisse in the comedy of same name, Mr. Bandman is also admitted to be unsurpassable. Indeed, he is good in any role he takes, and his methods are bold and original. Mr. Bandman cannot be better introduced to the Atlanta public than by reproducing the following interview, published by the Buffalo Express of November 10th:

"I am a benefactor," said Daniel E. Bandman the tragedian, to an Express reporter yesterday. "I think I may say that I am doing the American people a greater favor than any other actor in the country is doing them, in my present endeavor to popularize the legitimate drama by playing it at low figures."

"Do you realize," he continued, warming to the subject, "that the popular taste is becoming vitiated; that the tendency nowadays of the stage is to degrade rather than to elevate; that the immorality taught by the modern trashy plays is frightful? The effect is heightened by the coarse, vulgar pictures which are posted in advance of play. Nowadays any man will get together a few pretty girls, some scenery, a dog or a donkey, some tinseled costumes and hire some play-tinkerer to write him a play and start out. And the public are to blame. The managers says 'what do I care about the character of my play, so that it draws full houses.'"

"But," said he, "I am too old an actor and have been before the public too long to play to the populace. I try to make them come up to my standard instead of lowering myself to theirs. They may demand the flippant, the fleeting, the coarse and vulgar, but they shall never have it from me. I am playing the best plays at popular prices and have been financially successful so far."

Mr. Bandman conversed for some time most entertainingly on reminiscences of persons and events in his thirty years' career as an actor. His book, entitled "An Actor's Tour in the Orient," which details his dramatic experiences on his circuit of the globe in 1879, is now in its third edition. Mr. Bandman was the purchaser of the one thousand dollar Othello costume at the recent sale of Mr. McCullough's effects for ninety-six dollars. Now that McCullough is dead, it will be all the more highly prized by its present owner.

For the Relief of West Point.

TO THE PEOPLE OF ATLANTA: The committee has received the following letter from Mayor Harrington of West Point.

WEST POINT, GA., April 8, 1886.—Messrs Geo. Hillyer, S. M. Inman and W. A. Hemphill, committee, Atlanta, Ga. Dear sirs: your letter of today has been received and replied to. Your kindness in coming to the assistance of the destitute of our city, places under lasting obligations the people of West Point to "big hearted Atlanta." Again thanking you I am yours truly,
J. M. HARRINGTON, Mayor.

The subscription list for the relief of West Point will be kept open until Monday night. Subscriptions may be left at the CONSTITUTION office or with any member of the committee.

GEO. HILLYER,
W. A. HEMPHILL,
S. M. INMAN.

ECHOES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Colonel Baum and His Wooden Pyramid.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: I have a great respect for Colonel Baum. In his rubber top boots he is a figure calculated to command respect, but that pumping pyramid of his is going to fall if he does not look sharp, and maim and slay some of Atlanta's citizens. A glance at the diminishing supports on which it rests will shew that it is already insecure. I call Colonel Baum's attention to the danger that invests his wooden pyramid.

ANTI-NATIONAL.

A Volume in a Quotation.

L. P., Eatonton, Ga.: Please print the short sentiment on a grain of corn written by Senator Hill just before his death.

We presume the extract to which you allude is the following:

"If a grain of corn will die and then rise again in infinite beauty, why may not I die and then rise again in infinite beauty and life? How is the last a greater mystery than the first? And by so much as I excel the grain of corn in this life, why may I not excel it in the new life? How can we limit the power of Him who makes the grain of corn to die, and then made the same grain again in such wonderful newness of life?"

Easter Eggs.

Subscriber, Murphy, N. C.: Why are colored eggs used at Easter?

Easter eggs symbolize creation, or the re-creation of spring. The custom prevailed among the ancient Persians, Jews, Egyptians and Hindoos. The Christians adopted it to symbolize the resurrection, and colored the eggs red in allusion to the blood of their redemption. There is an old tradition that the world was hatched or created at Easter tide.

CONSTITUTIONALS.

General Gossip and Editorial Short Stops Caught on the Run.

A well known gentleman said yesterday: "I am known as a friend of the Young Men's Christian association, and am a subscriber to the building fund. There is one thing I want to say in all kindness and sympathy."

"What is it?"

"I want to inquire into the necessity of importing from the north all the men to whom we intrust the management of its affairs. As the Savannah Times said the other day: 'The Young Men's Christian association imports everything to Atlanta, except the money it needs.' The state secretary, Mr. Williams, the college secretary, Mr. Wishard, the local secretary, Mr. Helmer, the assistant secretary, Mr. Starke, are the only salaried men here, and each one is brought here from the north. They are all capable men. I think they are eminently so. But is it possible that we cannot find men of our own who are quite as capable?

"I assure you" the gentleman continued, "I have no present or prospective candidate in mind for any of the places. But, the training of our boys is a very important thing. There may be a difference as to what constitutes manliness and duty, if not religion and morals, between New England and Georgia. Is it best then if this be true to put the training of our boys in the hands of those who are brought here temporarily and whose impressions and convictions are formed away from here? We are blamed constantly for going to the north for everything we use, instead of reliantly standing by our own resources. Isn't the importing of the moral and religious educators of our boys about most the unnecessary thing we do!"

"You can hardly imagine," he went on, "the reverse of this being true. What chance would a dozen young Atlantians have if they went north to take charge of associations in New England? The north very properly provides her own secretaries, and does not rely on the south. Why can we not do the same? I appreciate fully the fact that the north is ahead of us in experience in association work. The work is a great one, and especially good in Atlanta. No change, perhaps, ought to be made now. But those in charge of the association's affairs in Georgia should adopt as their policy the putting of the training of our boys in the hands of those who are in full and ingrained sympathy with the environment in which the boys must work out their lives."

Referring to the above, Mr. Watkins, secretary of the international committee, said: "We realize the justice of that complaint. We have long realized that for effective work it is very much better to have a local man. It is impossible for a stranger to adapt himself to local requirements and the work suffers because of this. We are rapidly training southern boys to association work. The New Orleans association is in charge of a Marion, (Ala.) man, and the Charleston association of a young fellow from Murfreesboro, Tenn. When we started the work there was not a single general secretary in the south. Now there are thirty-one. Of these, seventeen come from the north and thirteen from the south. There are now four city and two state associations in the south seeking secretaries. Some of these will be filled by southern men. Many southern boys have gone north and are doing well. The assistant secretary at Washington is from Atlanta. The secretary at Freeport, Ills., is from Richmond. The state secretary of Massachusetts is from West Virginia. The secretary at Detroit is from one of the gulf states. So that there is no sectional feeling in the selection of secretaries. But, as fast as possible we are putting southerners in charge of southern associations, for obvious reasons When a southern town asks for a trained secretary we send the best we can get, and it has often happened he is a northern man. This is rapidly changing, however, and will soon regulate itself."

"I want to say," Mr. Watkins continued, "that Atlanta's work in raising her building fund still stands unequalled. Her record last week in subscribing $1,000 of the $2,000 needed for the state work is quite as exceptional."

"It is doubtful," said the Rev. W. F. Cook, "if any village in this country has produced so many distinguished men as Culloden, in this state. Ex-Governor Smith, ex-United States Senator Norwood, Judge Trippe, Congressman Hammond, Dr. E. W. Speer and Judge Speer, are among the most notable. To these may be added a long list of men, and not less useful, though hardly so illustrious."

"Is there any special reason for this?"

"Yes. From the day the village was founded it has never had a barroom. Liquor selling was prohibited in its charter, and it has produced statesmen rather than drunkards."

Colonel John R. Towers says: "You cannot conceive of the damage done by the water in the flooded towns. When the water receded from a store it left a sediment of mud a foot or so deep on the floor. Into this the current would deposit the goods from the counters and shelves, literally ruining them. Safes were invaded by the water and books and money ruined. Furniture fell to pieces the glue dissolving in the water, for the joint swelling and bursting. Libraries became pulp Eight room houses were lifted bodily and stranded miles away. I saw one firm empty two hundred sacks of damaged coffee in the street. A merchant surveying a hundred and fifty stores that had been flooded said it would have been better had the whole street been burned. The insurance would have started things over. The loss by water is a dead loss."

"Chattanooga suffered by the flood," said a by stander, "more than all the other cities combined. She has been wise enough to lay low. For eight days she was without mail or trains. Eight hundred houses were under water. Ten thousand people were homeless. The entire fifth ward, the manufacturing district, was submerged. Three thousand workmen were idle. Business was absolutely suspended. The situation was appalling. In spite of all this, the people are plucky and cheerful, refuse aid from outsiders, and declare that they will take care of themselves. The damage will be very large, but Chattanooga will pull through without a bobble."

"A navigable river," said a reflective Atlantian "is a good thing to have around, as long as it let you navigate it; but when it takes a notion to navigate you, the hill country acquires sudden charms."

Charley Hoewll's colored drayman said, the other morning: "Boss, is you heered dese Mr. Moodle and Sankles what's preaching down yere at the compress?" "No. Are they having a big meeting?" "De biggest you ever seed. The compress is des bilin over wid folks." "What are they trying to do?" "I ain't been down dar yet, but I hears it talked aroun', dat dey is gwine to do away now wid terbaccer!"

Mr. Erwin, formerly of Toledo, says: "Noting the allusion in a late CONSTITUTION to the heavy profits of the Herald and World, of New York, on their Sunday editions, I recall the profits made by Nasby in the Toledo Blade. His net income every year for the Weekly Blade ranges from $125,000 to $200,000. His circulation is from 90,000 to 120,000."

Touching the pay of Messrs. Moody and Sankey for their visit to Atlanta, one of the committee says: "The committee did give Mr. Moody only $100 above expenses, which he divided with Mr Sankey. It was distinctly understood that this would be supplemented by a generous donation as it will be. The several churches in the city have the matter in hand, and a suitable purse will be forwarded to the evangelists this week.

One man has been heard from who obeyed the law passed by the legislature to limit the use of oleomargerine. The law provides that every boarding house or hotel keeper who uses it, shall put up a placard to that effect in his dining room. Mr. P. A. Summey, who keeps the student's hall at the state university, promptly put up the sign. He says he is not sure he uses oleomargerine, and in fact hopes he does not. But, as he cannot be sure of his butter, he puts up the sign to be on the safe side of the law.

The recent floods washed away a part of the great Indian mound in Bartow county, near Cartersville. This mound has been a wonder ever since Georgia was settled. It is on the north side of the Etowah river, on the Tumlin place, and its history is unknown. The mound is 1,114 feet around the base, and is seventy-five feet high. When it was first found by white people trees were growing on it that were four feet through. The Indians that lived about it could give no account of it. The sides of the mound are quite steep, but can be climbed by a man. On one side only can a wagon be carried up. The top is flat. The mound is now in cultivation and produces well White's "Statistics of Georgia," printed nearly forty years ago, states that at this mound large quantities of pottery and other remains of antiquity have been found, differing very much from those commonly found in other mounds. A year ago a representative of the Smithsonian institute came down from Washington and spent five hundred dollars digging in the old mound. He carried away a number of relics. It seems that he left the mounds an easy prey for the floods, and when the recent heavy rains came a big hole was washed out. A lot of things were unearthed; among others some pots and like utensils. A jawbone of a man was found so large that it could be slipped up and down over the face of the largest man in Bartow county. A thigh-bone of a man was found so large that it is estimated that the man it served must have been seventeen feet high. It seems there were "giants in those days."

Mr. Andy Stewart said yesterday:

"Every week an old colored man comes into my store and buys a lot of tin. The tin is used by him in making traps for catching muskrats. He sets the traps in the sewers, and it is said he catches a great many of the queer little animals. The skins are sold by him. I believe he told me he was paid 15 cents for each skin. He says there are great numbers of muskrats in the sewers of Atlanta."

Yesterday Dr. E. L. Connally received from Senator Brown three of the cotton seed, four thousand years old, recently unearthed in Egypt and forwarded to the senator by Hon. S. S. Cox. The seeds were little black things, a trifle wrinkled with bits of cotton still clinging on the outside. The doctor was anxious to bite one open and see if the kernel was sound, but was able to overcome his curiosity. He will plant each seed in a separate pot and will endeavor to raise cotton "in the pot, tra-la."

Mr. A. B. Linderman, president of the Savannah, Dublin and Macon railroad, was in the wreck of the "Oregon." He lost all his baggage and lacked a hat of having a full suit of clothes when he stepped off the sinking vessel. Mr. Linderman has crossed the ocean forty-two times and has been in three wrecks. He says the wreck of the Oregon put him nearer death's door than he has ever been been before, and he doesn't want any more of it. He was asleep when the vessel was struck.

A GOLD-BEARING PEN.

A Talk With Mrs. Mary E. Bryan About New York—Interesting Gossip.

Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, who has scored a brilliant success in the literary circles of New York, is in Atlanta visiting her friends and relatives.

She is looking exceedingly well and is greatly enjoying the two weeks vacation granted her by Mr. George Munro, by whom she is engaged.

Mrs. Bryan is making $6,000 per annum by her pen, and her fame is rapidly extending. Every week Mr. Munro walks into her room and places on her desk an envelope containing $80. That is her regular salary, and she receives extra pay for all the stories she writes, thus running her income to $125 per week.

It is needless to say that very few American women make that amount, and there are thousands of men who cannot approach it. Mr. Munro is an elderly gentlemen of quiet manners, and Mrs. Bryan says he is just as pleasant as a man can be. Although she is taking vacation, her pay goes on without interruption. She will be in Atlanta until Wednesday.

ABOUT SAM ECHOLS.

"Mr. Sam Echols is in New York," said Mrs. Bryan, yesterday, "and he is doing quite well there. He is editor of 'Metropolitan,' and receives five thousand dollars per annum. He has many friends there. He has one of the handsomest offices in New York, and has twenty-five young lady clerks. His magazine claims an enormous circulation."

"There were rumors here that he would marry soon."

"I think they were unfounded," said Mrs. Bryan

JOAQUIN MILLER AS AN EXILE.

"They say," was remarked, "that Mr. Pulitzer, of the Morning Journal, will soon wed Mrs. Frank Leslie."

"I am sure that is a mistake," said Mrs. Bryan.

"I can say this," she added, "Mrs. Leslie has received a letter from Joaquin Miller, in which he says he will never return from Mexico to the United States. He says his daughter Maud has disgraced him so that he will go into voluntary exile."

"Then the cabin in Washington will be for rent?"

"Yes, the cabin will be for rent."

MRS. JAMES BROWN POTTER.

"Have you seen Mrs. James Brown Potter yet?"

"Yes, I have been introduced to her."

"Is she pretty?"

"Well, I don't think she is as pretty as she has been pictured, nor is she as good an elocutionist."

A LIVELY CRANK.

Mrs. Bryan has had a lively experience with cranks. Her refusal to prosecute a young woman who robbed her of $125 attracted the attention of all the mental light weights of New York, and she had numerous callers and countless correspondents as soon as her thrilling experience with the thief was reported in the papers. A harmless sort of a youth who was connected with the telegraph office took it into his head to become the guardian angel of the brilliant, but tender hearted southerner. One of the peculiarities of this citizen, is to never carry an umbrella. In rain or sleet or snow he would patiently wait just outside Munro's publishing house and nothing short of a policeman could convince him that it was not necessary for him to escort Mrs. Bryan home. One day to her family in Atlanta, asking about one of the children, who was sick. In a few moments she received a telegram from the young crank in the telegraph office announcing that he had sent seven telegrams to Atlanta for runners to see how "Fritz" was, "and," he added, "I have the names of seventy people who will be telegraphed at once!" This able citizen writes every day to Mr. Bryan, who is in Atlanta, and some of his epistles reach forty pages in length. Mrs. Bryan has retained a lawyer to have the fellow sent up as a lunatic if he troubles her any more.

MRS. BRYAN TELEGRAPHED

PLEASED WITH NEW YORK.

"Are you pleased with New York?" was asked Mrs. Bryan.

"Yes," she replied, "I am greatly pleased. I am situated most pleasantly, and am as well satisfied as I could possibly be."

During her stay in the city Mrs. Bryan has been entertained by many of her friends and admirers.

Don't be a Clam.

This phrase has been made famous by Frank Siddalls, of Philadelphia, the proprietor of Frank Siddalls's soap. He has paid fully $100,000 for the printing of this one line in the past five years. The inference is that the man who does not buy Frank Siddalls's soap, when it is unquestionably the best and the cheapest, giving less trouble, with less damage and better results, is a "clam." The clam is accepted as the primeval type of stupidity, and the invitation "don't be a clam," means don't be stupid; and, of course, not being stupid, you must buy Frank Siddalls's soap, because it is stupid not to get the best of anything when it costs less than an inferior article. So much for the philosophy of this famous phrase. Now for personal application: Frank Siddalls is not a clam. There is less of the clam about him than most any man you meet. He is a clean-cut, clear-headed, resolute, progressive American citizen, "all wool and a yard wide." When he gets left it is apt to be bad for people that took the train.

The Macon and Dublin.

The first annual meeting of the stockholders of the Macon and Dublin has been held. The stockholders met at Allentown. Two-thirds of the stock was represented and the meeting was organized. The president read his report, including the reports of the treasurer and the chief engineer. The reports were very satisfactory to the stockholders, showing the road to be in a flourishing condition and the work of grading progressing rapidly and being done at a very low cost. The roadbed will be completed to Jeffersonville within three weeks. The following directors were elected to serve for the next twelve months: D. M. Hughes, Hardy Smith, Jno. F. Burke, Jno. M. Stubbs, D. G. Hughes, Arthur Pou, J. G. Gates and Joshua Walker. A meeting of the directors was then held and the following officers chosen: D. M. Hughes, president, Hardy Smith, treasurer, and Iverson L. Hunter, secretary.

THE TWO ROUTES

ON WHICH THE EYES OF ATLANTA NOW REST.

Interesting Points from Along the Lines of Both Routes, by Which it is Proposed that Atlanta Shall Find an Outlet to the Sea—Propositions from Along the Two Lines.

We print below a number of opinions and suggestions about the new route from Atlanta to the ocean, to which we invite the attention of our readers.

It will be seen that the people along both routes are awake to the importance of securing direct connection with Atlanta, and reassuring promises are being made. A meeting has been called for next Tuesday at 11 o'clock at which delegations from each route will be present. The matter is still a leading topic in Atlanta. Our business men are carefully considering every suggestion, and looking impartially for the best route. On one point all are agreed—Atlanta must control the road. This once settled there is no preference for one route or the other.

Fort Valley Has a Word.

FORT VALLEY, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—An enthusiastic mass meeting was held here yesterday in regard to the predicted railroad from Atlanta to Hawkinsville via Zebulon, Knoxville and Fort Valley. Committees are now at work, and reports will be sent in as soon as completed. Fort Valley and Houston county will furnish one hundred thousand dollars. Crawford and Knoxville will do the same. Fort Valley plainly sees the necessity of this road and must have it. That Atlanta needs an outlet to water is true, but it is equally true that she needs more territory in which to sell her goods. The Hawkinsville route will do this; it will not only furnish a direct line to the sea, but it will open up and pour into Atlanta's lap the trade of a new territory.

Atlanta can plainly see the advantages the Hawkinsville route offers: First, a direct line to sea water; second, a continuous flow of trade from Hawkinsville along the line of road to Atlanta; third, that the road will be self-sustaining.

Sparta Enthusiastic.

SPARTA, April 10.—[Special.]—The people here are enthusiastic over the suggested railroad from Atlanta to the Savannah river. A meeting to take action in the matter will be held in Sparta on Monday next. It is safe to say that Hancock county will do her best to help Atlanta reach the ocean. In backing the irrepressible gate city she will be helping herself. The road in question would deal a death blow to the outrageous discrimination under which Sparta, as well as Atlanta, labors. Hirshman's pool will swallow up the railroad pool. A committee from Hancock will attend the Atlanta meeting on Tuesday.

Some Mighty Interesting Railroad History.

The following card was received yesterday from one of the most prominent citizens of Putnam county, who now controls the charter and the franchise referred to. He is well known in the state, but desires his name witheld for special reasons:

EATONTON, Ga., April 10.—Editors Constitution: I see from your paper the citizens of Atlanta are agitating the building of a railroad either to Hawkinsville or some point on the Savannah river. If they decide to select the latter point, and the road should pass through Eatonton, I desire to say the people of Putnam county will subscribe liberally to the enterprise.

Eatonton will ship this year 17,000 bales of cotton, and for this and her extensive trade, She has but one outlet—the M. & E. R. R. Besides, we desire closer connection with Atlanta.

In 1871 and '72, eighty thousand dollarg were subscribed between the Alcova river and Milledgeville to the Atlanta and Savannah railroad. That enterprise failed because the Central railroad succeeded in getting Savannah to withdraw her $500,000 subscription, after President Wadley secured the lease of the Macon and Western railroad. Atlanta also subscribed $250.000 to this road when she was much poorer than she is now.

The charter of the Atlanta and Savannah road is still in force and could be utilized in building the new road your city desires. Rest assured we are ready to do our part down this way in building the road through our section.
PUTNAM.

The Voice of Burke.

WAYNESBORO, Ga., April 10.—[Special.]—The contemplated new railroad from Atlanta via our little city to some point on the Savannah river, to-wit: "Hirshman's Lake," has created considerable enthusiasm here. So great was the interest manifested that a meeting of our prominent citizens and merchants was called to discuss the matter. A large and enthusiastic meeting was had, and every gentleman present urged that an appeal be made to Atlanta to have the route come this way to the sea. It was the opinion of the meeting that at least fifty thousand, and probably seventy-five thousand dollars worth of stock to this new railroad could be raised in Waynesboro and Burke county.

Major W. A. Wilkins said: "You can say to Atlanta that I think at least fifty thousand dollars can be easily raised in our county to aid in building the road contemplated. Our people want the road and are in earnest about the matter.

"Our citizens have already been for some time discussing the building of a new railroad through that portion of our county that this new line will traverse; hence they are heartily willing to respond with their money to complete this splendid enterprise, whenever it is needed to break dirt.

"Waynesboro and Burke county want the route to come this way, and they want it badly. We pay at this point on the Central railroad annually about one hundred thousand dollars for freights, and our merchants and citizens are tired of this heavy tax upon their pockets. It is thought that the new route will greatly aid our town in this respect."

MAJOR WILKINS SAYS BURKE WILL GO $50,000.

WAYNESBORO, April 10.—Editors Constitution: We had a meeting of a few leading citizens last night, to see what could be done towards helping in the railroad from Atlanta. You may count on Burke county for $50,000 of the stock. As things warm up we can increase this considerably, and all landowners will give the right of way.
W. A. WILKINS.

Milledgeville Wants to Take a Hand.

Messrs. W. F. Conner, president, and T. E. White, secretary of the Business union of Milledgeville, write that Milledgeville will co-operate heartily with Atlanta, and will subscribe a large amount. Committees are already at work getting up information and statistics, and seeing what can be done in the way of subscriptions.

Atlanta and Hawkinsville.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: The projectors of the narrow gauge road from Atlanta to Hawkinsville, beg, through you, to ask every citizen of Atlanta to consider himself a projector, and that the enterprise is his as much as it is that of any other citizen. It is Atlanta's opportunity. Through its construction we shall regulate our freights to our entire satisfaction and of this we can satisfy any one, we think, as soon as we can see you who are most interested face to face. The navigability of the Ocmulgee and Altamaha is no longer to be doubted or questioned. That the country through which this road is to pass is the most desirable for Atlanta trade to seek, we submit, cannot be doubted. This road we can build and not feel the cost, and hold the control of the same in spite of all corporations or pools. Hawkinsville, Fort Valley, Knoxville, Zebulon and Fayetteville have responded to Atlanta's call. How long shall we wait? How long can we afford to wait?
ATLANTA.

Mr. Dunn Says Hawkinsville is Aroused.

Mr. John N. Dunn has returned from Hawkinsville, and says that little city is good for $60,000; that Fort Valley will subscribe $25,000, and that the road can certainly be built if Atlanta will do even a small part. He says on undoubted authority that the river is open every day in the year, and will prove as good a waterway as Atlanta could desire.

A System of Narrow Gauge Road.

Colonel R. F. Maddox chairman of the railroad committee said: "I am much impressed with the usefulness of the narrow gauge road for bringing local trade to a city. Of course our most pressing need is a road that will make us independent in freights, but it is also important to cultivate our local trade. The road to Hawkinsville is in my opinion the best opportunity Atlanta ever had to add to her trade at small cost. It penetrates the very richest section of Georgia, and will pour into Atlantas lap the trade of twenty counties that now seek other markets. A narrow gauge from Atlanta to the south could easily connect with the Marietta and North Georgia narrow gauge which is now being finished to Murphy, N. C., and a narrow gauge is being built beyond Murphy to connect with it there. This would give Atlanta a narrow gauge system of over three hundred miles.

"You would not let the narrow gauge idea interfere with beating down freight discriminations?"

"Not at all. It would not do so. The narrow gauge is cheap. I have a letter from Mr. Hawkins, of Americus, in which he says the Americus and Lumpkin narrow gauge was built and equipped for less than $5,500 a mile. At this cost we could build to Hawkinsville and equip the road for less than a million dollars. A subscription of $250,000 would give us a basis on which we could easily put bonds. Hawkinsville has subscribed fifty thousand dollars of this amount, and the towns between here and Hawkinsville would give one hundred and fifty thousand, and Atlanta could raise the balance. The Waynesboro road, I have no doubt, could be built as cheaply, and that the towns along the route would contribute as largely. These two roads built narrow gauge, and controlled by Atlanta, would add enormously to our trade, and would not take very much money from Atlanta to build."

"Is the narrow-gauge proving successful?"

"Of course it is. In Florida they are building narrow-gauge roads almost exclusively. In the west they are the best paying roads. I believe that a company formed here could build a narrow gauge road to Hawkinsville, and to Eatonton or Waynesboro in the next two years, and without drawing too heavily on our resources."

Then Atlanta Will Be Fixed.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION—Atlanta will be fixed when she builds a road to the sea, and secures the lease of the Western and Atlantic railroad. With one arm reaching to the Atlantic ocean and the other to Chattanooga, she can hold her own agains the world.
VERBUM SAP.

An Important Call.

Those gentlemen who are interested in the building of a new route from Atlanta to the ocean, are earnestly requested to meet at THE CONSTITUTION office at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. It is probable that the committees on the two proposed routes will have information to lay before the meeting. Delegations from other cities will certainly be here to confer with the citizens of Atlanta.

A full and prompt meeting is requested,
R. F. MADDOX, Chairman.

MAY DAY CELEBRATION.

Meeting of the Fulton County Sunday-School Association.

Yesterday morning at ten o'clock, a meeting of the Fulton county Sunday-school association, was held at Trinity church.

There was a large attendance, and much interest was manifested.

After transacting a small amount of association business, the election of officers was held, resulting as follows:

President—John M. Green.
Vice-Presidents—Rev. A. S. Smith, Thomas Moore, H. Van Epps, W. A. Hemphill, T. J. Buchanan, W. H. Bell, George McGaughey, A. C. Bruce, R. W. Jones, W. Lowe.
Secretary—F. B. Sheppard; assistant, J. M. Johnson.
Treasurer—A. A. DeLoach.
Chorister—Rev. N. Keff Smith.
Marshal—Colonel R. L. Barry.
Executive Committee—J. C. Kimball, A. P. Stewart, A. C. Briscoe, J. S. Panchen, L. B. Nelson.

The question of literature for destitute schools was discussed at some length, and a committee consisting of J. C. Courtney, A. C. Briscoe, J. C. Kimball, J. C. Hendrix and T. A. Trussell were appointed to look after this feature, a most important one in the work of the association.

The executive committee were instructed to look after the arrangements for the May day celebration. The committee will appoint the delegates to the Georgia Sunday School association.

The May day celebration promises to be one of the largest and most interesting ever held by the association.

"OUR COUNTRY COUSINS."

Miss Ellen Dortch has greatly improved her paper, the Carnesville Register. She puts to shame many a laggard brother in the excellence of her work.

The Cuthbert Appeal is kind enough to say that "THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, both daily and weekly, is the finest paper published in the south. Its brilliant editorials and sparkling news columns are simply unapproachable."

Mr. A. T. Simmons has assumed the business management of the Rome Courier.

The Dalton Citizen rashly "stops the press to announce that no spring poetry has been received at this office yet. The poets are doubtless victims to the vengeance of the flood."

McIntosh, of the Albany News, turns a point neatly when he says: "It is said that Grant, unlike Washington, never swore. And it may also be said that Washington, unlike Grant, never lied."

The Dawson Journal has found out that "the fish are beginning to bite, and the festive redling is in all his glory."

The Ellijay Courier returns thanks to Mr. Nicholas Osborne for some fine apples.

Female Pedestrians.

The danger to the public health from the indiscriminate use of the many lime and alum baking powders of commerce has been so fully exposed that everybody desires to avoid them. As "forewarned is forearmed," housekeepers will thank us for apprising them of the special efforts at present being made to dispose of such powders in this vicinity.

The proprietors of some of the worst of these powders are now going from house to house, trying by means of a trick, or so-called test, with heat and water, to show that their article is as good as the Royal Baking Powder, making the comparison with this brand because everybody recognizes it to be absolutely pure and wholesome, the object, of course, being to supply their own goods in place of the Royal, which housekeepers have for so many years relied upon to puff up the morning biscuit, and to make the light, palatable, and wholesome roll, cake, and pastry for which it is famous.

The housekeeper will do well to be on her guard against these baking power tramps. Every intelligent person knows that any goods peddled from house to house in this manner, or that are given away in samples, or sought to be introduced by secretly traducing the character of other goods well known to be pure and reliable, have no merits of their own, and have failed to find purchasers thruugh legitimate means.

We are informed, as a matter of fact, that one of these tramps is trying to introduce a powder that has been found by the government chemist to be 11.85 per cent lime, while the other peddles a powder that is 20 per cent alum—one a powerful caustic, the other a corrosive poison.

No such tricks or jugglery will be apt to deceive any intelligent person. The housekeeper who has used her Royal Baking Powder ever since she discarded cream of tartar and soda, knows more about its qualities than all the tramps in the country can teach her. The crucial test to which she has put the Royal Baking Powder—the test of actual and successful work in the preparation of pure and wholesome food, under which it has never failed—is entirely satisfactory to her. She has always had "good luck," with it in making light, sweet, and delicious bread, biscuit and cake, and has placed it, to say, at the head of her housekeeping favorites. She knows that it has been officially approved by the government chemists as the best, and we imagine that the baking powder tramp who attempts to supplant its place in her confidence will find this a bad year for his business.

Galveston, Texas, March 2, 1886.—Smith, Pirkle & Co: We have been using the W. Jay McDonald Combined Fire and Water Proof Cement Roof Paint that you represent for a long time, and as you requested have submitted it to every test you claim for it, and we are pleased that its fire and water proof qualities are marvelous. We have kept shingles as well as tin in salt water for months, and does not [illegible] them like other paints we have tested. We have tested it by fire, by water, by cold, by heat and on wood, on metal, on cloth and on paper, side by side with much dearer paints and it excels any. If we are any judges, which we think we are, it is the best, most durable and cheapest paint known to the civilized world. Our tests on boats have been quite satisfactory, and we have no doubt that it will be universally adopted. We would like to purchase this territory. Respectfully,

The New Outlet to the Sea

Will very much increase values in Atlanta so don't fail to secure that lot Knapp will sell at 3:30 p.m., Monday next. It adjoins the Chamber of Commerce.

THAT WONDERFUL TREADLE.

A Short Talk with Mr. Jarvis About His Opinion of the Invention.

"Hello, friend Jarvis; got back to the city?" Such was the ejaculation of a CONSTITUTION scribe while on his rounds on Peachtree, as he looked into the genial face of J. S. Jarvis. "Still traveling for the 'New Home?'"

"No, sir."

"Going to remain in the city?"

"Yes; I have taken the management of the Dyar treadle."

"What is your opinion of that treadle?"

"Well, sir, I have watched it from its infancy. I must confess, at first I was skeptical, as there have been so many strenuous efforts put forward by the mercantile and inventive genius of all parts of the world to overcome the defective operation and the injurious results to the health of our ladies. The extent of which is only too plainly written in the faces of those who earn their bread, and many of those who only do their domestic sewing, and all arising from using the old rocking treadle. The fact that all past efforts had failed made me skeptical. After a trial of many months, in my own family, the grand mechanical features that the treadle possessed were shown. It has positively no dead center. The operator never has to put his hand to the wheel to stop or start the machine. So great is the power over the machine given by this treadle that the operator controls the machine at will, and best of all is, the movement is only one inch and a half, and that is truly a walking and altogether a natural movement. This fact makes it entirely harmless to the operator. In fact, upon investigation, I find it has worked very beneficial results upon the health of many of the ladies who have been using it for any length of time."

"Then you are satisfied it is a good thing?"

"Yes, sir; putting all the grand effects together, I have come to the conclusion that it is one of the greatest and best inventions of the age. That is not only my opinion, formed after the most careful examination, but it is the unanimous opinion of those who have investigated the subject. Before I took the general management of this business I got a distinguished physician to look into the matter for me, and this is what he writes to me:

"'I have examined your double acting walking treadle, and am fully satisfied that it overcomes all former objections raised to delicate females operating the sewing machine. In fact, I would heartily recommend it to the great majority of delicate females as healthful exercise, for it revolutionizes the old treadle from a back-breaking machine to a health-giving by imparting a natural, or walking, motion to the body while operating it. For those who are constantly employed at the sewing machine no greater boon could have been offered. From its peculiar construction the weight of the limbs are almost sufficient of themselves, requiring but little additional effort to propel a machine much faster than by the old treadle, and with no detriment whatever.'

"Well, the fact that you have had long years of experience in the sewing machine business, and the high position you have held in some of the leading sewing machine companies, is proof positive to my mind that the Dyar treadle is a great invention."

J. T. White, the leading wall paper and shade dealer, will make a specialty of shades this week. Shades complete at 40c., at 50.c, at 60c., at 70c., very handsome at $1.00.

Major Livingstone Mims.

We reprint with pleasure the following sketch of Major Livingstone Mims, of this city, from the Vindicator, a prominent southern insurance journal. It will be read with interest by his thousands of friends throughout the south.

> —"Nature made but one such man,
> And broke the die—in moulding Sheridan."
> —Byron.

In all her unique creations, Nature repeats not her work. The portrait that adorns our present number will be readily recognized by the numerous friends and admirers of one of the most conspicuous figures in the field of southern insurance; for few men can be named who in splendid characteristics of person, mind and heart, have been stamped with an individuality so pronounced—one that never fails to arrest the attention of the most careless observer.

Born among the salubrious sand hills of the Palmetto state, Livingston Mims in his early and tender years was transferred to the great cotton state of Mississippi, where, almost within sound of the "Father of Waters," he spent his youth, and under the tuition of Dr. Waddell and others, ripened into the cultivated gentleman, beaming with all those shining qualities.

"By which man masters men."

A few years occupied in public offices of his adopted state, and a few years in the whirl and shifting scenes of the great civil contest that terminated in the upheaval of the southern social fabric, and we find Major Mims, still in the flush of brilliant young manhood, experimenting in pursuits suggested by the exigencies of the times, soon followed by his connection with the great and growing business of insurance, life and fire. His association with one of leading confederate favorites, in the creation of southern management of insurance, led to his removal to Georgia, first to the city of Savannah, then to Atlanta; and no firm of underwriters has been longer, more widely or favorably known south of the Potomac than J. E. Johnston & Co. as general agents of the great New York Life, and as managers of the southern department of that magnificent corporation, the Home Fire of New York. General Johnston having accepted office under the present Federal administration, his connection with the Home has ceased and Livingston Mims continues as sole manager, the firm name remaining unchangad as to the New York Life. Indeed, the active work of the partnership, during all its long existence, has fallen upon his more youthful shoulders, and the southern department of the Home, embracing at one time nine states, in a well organized system of agencies, numbering three hundred—has been distinguished by its hightoned dealing with the public, and the unflagging zeal of the management in the service of this honored American company, now in its fourth decade. In this connection, it may be remarked, Major Mims displays his peculiar magnetic forces in marshalling hosts of friends, binding them by magic bands not only to himself, but harmonizing them with each other, for, with none of the bearing of the autocrat, no one has a more potent sway over the agents of his creation, nor greater charm in subordinating the discordant elements of organization to homogenious tranquility. His sympathy, fidelity and attachments are characterized by all the ardor of boyhood, and the energy of knight-errantry. The many conventions in the interests of Southern underwriting, and the meetings of the Tariff association, have always found him an important factor in the programme of business, and, under the spell of his personal gifts, his social humor, and his fluent oratory—now flashing with the wit of Sheridan, anon, pointed with the satire of Horace, or, rushing on in a mighty torrent of invective, but all terminating in a glorious burst of rollicking sunshine—unanimous good fellowship sets the seal of cohesion upon the most dissimilar natures. Eminently æsthetic in all that constitutes his mental and moral attributes, he fails not to carry with him, into whatever paths the rugged duties of life may direct his course, the varied stores of fancy illumined by the gilded light of illusion, and

"Bright with the hues of Promethean heat."

He takes the muses in his train—Æneas-like, ever mindful of his household gods,

"Illium in Italiam portans."

As may be readily supposed, Major Mims, so liberally endowed with social qualities, and marked by intellectual tastes, that naturally and by long habit enter into all the features which distinguish his daily life, is conspicuous in the prodigal hospitality of his home. Whether enthroned under his own vine and fig tree, surrounded by sloping landscapes and his beloved flowers, which effect him with almost girlish tenderness—or, at the festive board—or, regaling his fancy in the varied forms of divine art in all its capricious moods, he is an acknowledged authority in the realm of taste.

Still in the vigor of well-preserved manhood, his resources show no symptoms of decline, and the grand old Home, whose banner he has so long carried with honor over almost every hill and vale in the south, and the colossal New York Life, identified with his name and that of his cherished partner for nearly two decades, and latterly gathering renewed energy and popularity in the southern department, may reasonably anticipate many years yet of service from his zeal and devotion.

Rather Startling.

J. T. White, the leading wall paper and shade dealer, at 46 Marietta street, hardly thinks it necessary to advertise his wall paper, for from the rush of orders this week everybody seems to know he has the most complete line of fresh wall papers in the state, and the most artistic men to hang it, but he wants the public to know that he carries more window shades, and cheaper by 50 per cent, than any house in the state. Think of a shade at 40 cents, made and hung!

READY TO BEGIN,

BUT FIRST THE OLD ATLANTAS TACKLE THE NEW ATLANTAS.

Everything in Readiness for the Second Season of the Southern League—Atlanta Begins the Fight in Charleston—The Games Tomorrow and Tuesday with Nashville—Dots.

The championship season will open on next Thursday with the following schedule:

Atlanta in Charleston, four games.
Nashville at Augusta, four games.
Memphis in Macon, four games.
Chattanooga in Savannah, four games.

There is much speculation as to the four clubs that will be first day winners. The general impression is that the following four will draw the first blood: Atlanta, Savannah, Nashville and Memphis. The first day winners may not count for much, but the clubs that lead in next Sunday's summary will have won some consideration. Atlanta expects to get three out of four with Charleston. Chattanooga declares that Savannah shall not have more than two. Nashville and Augusta are pretty well balanced, and Macon will do well if she evens up Memphis. The league umpirers are McQuaid, Brennan, Green and Burns. Visiting clubs take sixty-five dollars per game without option, and four games are played in each series. President Proudfit has decided that each umpire shall take eight games without change. Each club has put up $500 forfeit into the league treasury so that the season opens auspiciously.

An informal test of the strength of four of the teams will be made tomorrow, and Tuesday. Nashville playing Atlanta on those days, and Augusta playing Charleston.

The league teams are very much stronger than they were last year. No northern club, except the Chicago's, left the south without being beaten, and some of them lost as many games as they won. The salary list of each club averages over two thousand dollars per month, which is an advance of twenty-five per cent on last year. The clubs are more evenly matched than they were in the beginning of last season, and Atlanta need not expect to walk away with her rivals. She will have to fight every inch of her way from pennant to pennant. Next Sunday's reports will afford some basis for prediction.

BALL IN ATLANTA THIS WEEK.

Tomorrow's game at Athletic park will be the sensation of the season. Nashville crosses bats with Atlanta. Manager Goldsby brings down his team. Dunden and McVey will be the battery, and Bittman will hold second. Atlanta stands by her colors, but it will test local pride very severely to cheer for the home team when she sees Dunden in the box and Bittman whirling around to support second, Goldsby running for a fly in left field, and McVey hitting a long ball to the center field fence. These men are good fellows, and good players, and they have hundreds of friends in Atlanta who will give them the courteseys of the day. Atlanta must beat them and doubtles will beat them, but all the same we will feel like we have an interest in them. The outlook is that the park will have the biggest crowd that ever passed in its gates on a single day, on Monday to see the two crack teams cross bats.

More Baseball News.

MACON, April 10.—[Special.]—Macon has signed Geise as second baseman. He was with the Nashvilles last season, and is said to be an excellent player.

Manager Peltz is up again, and ready for business. He will be fully equipped for the opening of the league games, and will acquit himself in his usual clear headed manner.

Miller gains favor as a pitcher every day.

Another man will be signed by the Macons at an early day, and he is said to be a very capable player.

Diamond Dust.

Charleston defeated Augusta Friday, 4 to 2.

Augusta has released John Darrah and John Dwyer.

It will look like old times to see Bittman playing second base in Atlanta next Monday with Goldsby in left field.

Sam Kimber pitched last season for the Virginias and while with that club did excellent work.

Chattanooga, it is said, has signed another pitcher who will prove very puzzling to the southern league batters.

It is thought that Purcell, Lynch, Moore, Cline, Stricker and Lyons will be at the top in the batting list of the Southern league.

Nashville will play two games in Atlanta this week, Monday and Tuesday and some of the prettiest playing of the season will be witnessed. The grounds will be packed if the weather is at all favorable.

The Atlanta club was out for practice yesterday afternoon, and indicated that they were in excellent condition.

In Monday and Tuesday's games Purcell, Cline, McDonald and Lyons will do the coaching for the Atlantas.

The boys will leave for Charleston Wednesday morning.

Dundon will have a busy time shaking hands with his friends in Atlanta.

Wonder if Goldsby will have the heart to kick in his old eloquent style against Atlanta as he used to kick for her.

A colored baseball league is being organized with headquarters at Jacksonville, Fla.

The baseball directors have been considerably annoyed and disappointed in the work of Mitchell, one of their pitchers, who seems disposed to play that old worn out racket of last season, "sore arm." It is about time for Mr. Mitchell to give that up, as the directors are aware of the little scheme, and will not have it worked, and no doubt will make it rather warm for him should he still persist. This committee is composed of strictly business men, and are fully up in baseball, and will stand no foolishness.

The Great Nine Coming.

The score of a series of games played in Boston by the coming champion baseball nine of the world, is the most wonderful on record. It is remarkable, but nevertheless true, that they did not make a single error. Many have conceived an idea that this nine is in a coming ministrel show. On the contrary it is a bona fide baseball nine, which justly claims the title of the world's champions on account of laurels won by hard hits over many other prominent nines throughout the country.

Amateurs at the Park.

A match game of base ball was played at Athletic park yesterday evening between the Crescents and the Juniors. The latter won by a score of 15 to 9. The features of the game were the speedy work of Leighton in the box for the Crescents, and the heavy batting of Murphy, of the Juniors. Lee, the Crescent catcher, had his finger broken in the sixth inning. The Crescents defeated the Juniors last Saturday by a score of 16 to 11.

A POINT

Worth knowing, is the fact that

J. P. STEVENS,

the leading Atlanta dealer in Bric-a-Brac and Fine Art Goods, has just received another invoice of the new and beautiful

BURMESE WARE

Which during the past two weeks has attracted universal attention to his windows at 47 WHITEHALL ST.

An unsurpassed collection of DIAMONDS, WATCHES and SILVERWARE also exhibited, and offered at such reasonable prices that will tempt economical buyers.

Do not forget, this is

A POINT

THE PRETTIEST IN THE CITY.

So the Ladies Say of John Ryan's Imported Novelty Dress Goods.

"Nothing like them." "The prettiest I ever saw," "Perfectly beautiful." "Divinely lovely." "Excruciatingly sweet." Hearing such remarks from various ladies on the street, the cause was hunted up, and it was found they were talking of John Ryan's novelty dress goods, with trimmings, buttons and parasols to match. Mr. Ryan says his run on these goods has been great, and from what all the ladies say, it is correct. He has now on his counters hundreds of pieces of elegant novelty dress goods. Remember these goods were manufactured for Mr. Ryan and imported by him, and are no shoddy goods, but the best quality that is made.

On another counter Mr. Ryan has a perfect line of parasols. These are lovely, and here the most fastidious may suit their tastes. If it is possible to overstock anyone, Mr. Ryan will be overstocked, for he has immeuse lines of all these goods. In trimmings and buttons he has the latest styles. They are neat and nobby, and are bound to take. If you want to buy a dress, Ryan can suit you, and give you trimmings, buttons and an elegant parasol to match.

The real beauty, however, of Ryan's emporium is, that the goods are offered at "live and let live" prices. If you need, or if you want to see, any of these kind of goods, call on Ryan before purchasing, and he will show you something fine, and something pretty. Give him a trial and be satisfied of the fact.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly Cleanse the Blood, which is THE GREAT FOUNTAIN OF HEALTH, by using DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and Good Digestion, Buoyant Spirits, and Bodily Health and Vigor WILL BE ESTABLISHED.

SEASONABLE ADVICE.

ESPECIALLY IS GREAT BENEFIT TO BE DERIVED FROM TAKING THIS UNEQUALED BLOOD PURIFIER AT THIS SEASON OF THE YEAR, for it counteracts the enervating and depressing effects of the Spring-time Changes in Climate and promptly dispells those languid, "tired feelings" so generally experienced "about these days." PRICE $1.00 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.00, by all Druggists throughout the world.

LIVER DISEASE.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

For Torpor of the Liver, Biliousnessand "Liver Complaints" generally, is a sovereign remedy. It does not debilitate the liver by overstimulation, nor irritate the stomachand bowels by disturbing the delicate processes of digestion, neither does it act with severity upon the blood; but it operates so gently, insensibly, and yet with so much certainty that it excites the surprise and admiration of all who use it.

If the bowels are unusually sluggish (chronic constipation) it is advisable, in conjunction with the Discovery, to use which are powerfully alterative, besides being mild, gentle and unirritating in their operation. They are the natural allies—remedial assistants—of the Discovery, and the two work harmoniously together. They should be taken in small doses, and their use perseveringly followed until the bowels are properly regulated.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PURGATIVE PELLETS,

BILIOUS ATTACKS AND HEADACHE.

People who are habitually subject to "bilious" attacks, sick headache, bilious headache and loss of appetite are pleased to find that a course of the Discovery and Pellets furnishes immunity from such onsets, and prevents their usual recurrence. A Treatise on Diseases of the Liver and Digestive Organs sent to any address for ten cents in stamps.

Liver Disease. Malaria

G. W. Lotz, Trudhomme, La., writes: "For four years I suffered from liver complaint and attacks of bilious fever, loss of appetite, nausea, constipation, sometimes diarrhea, pain in the back of the head, right side and under the shoulder blades, fullness after eating, general debility, restless nights, tongue coated, etc. After taking four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets, I find that I am as well as I ever was."

A Bad Case.

Samantha Gaines, Lockport, N. Y., writes: "For six or eight years previous to 1880, I had been troubled with a severe pain in the small of my back, also across my shoulder blades, with considerable bloating of the stomach from wind; was so nervous at times I could hardly sleep; also troubled with dizziness and hard breathing spells, I was induced by my step-daughter, Mrs. Warner, of Olean, N. Y., to try the Golden Medical Discovery. The effects were marvelous. After taking three bottles I was entirely cured."

General Debility.

S. L. Fisher, Sidney Plains, N. Y., writes: "Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Dear Sir—My wife suffered for several years from general debility. She had become a confirmed invalid. The physicians who attended her failed to help her, and it seemed as if she must die. On reading one of your memorandum books, it occurred to me that your Golden Medical Discovery might help her. I procured a bottle, and after its use, a change for the better was noticeable, and after using five bottles, she was a well woman. I have recommended it to several, and in every case it has produced good results. I can never feel too grateful to you for the saving of my wife's life."

Given Up to Die.

Merrit Street, Esq., Druggist, of Bluff Springs, Ala., writes: "Miss Eliza Glenn, of this place, had been sick for more than a year with a severe affection of the liver, but when she was at the lowest, she bought three bottles of Golden Medical Discovery from me, and, although before using the medicine she was given up to die by all the attending physicians, her father assures me that she has now fully recovered."

Diarrhea and Cough.

Mrs. Curtis Bogue, West Enosburg, Vermont, writes: "Two bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery cured my cough and chronic diarrhea. It has worked like a charm in my case. It is truly wonderful. I walked over a mile last week to recommend your medicines."

Chronic Diarrhea.

Mrs. A. V. Parrish, of Bumpass, Virginia, writes as follows: "My bowels have been regular since I took the Golden Medical Discovery."

Fever.

Mrs. Caroline Simmonds, Medina, N. Y., writes: "I have been troubled with symptoms of malaria, with fever, for three years, but after using three bottlesof your Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets, I am happy to say that I am entirely cured, and today I am perfectly well and able to do my own work."

Dyspepsia Cured.

Lucy A. Wood, Taylor's Store, Va., writes: "After many years of great suffering from the evils of dyspepsia; I was induced to try your Golden Medical Discovery, and I cannot express the gratitude I feel for the great good it has done me. I do not suffer any pain from eating, and I enjoy life as well as anybody can wish."

Too Poorto Be Always Taking Medicine.

M. Lizzie Vineyard, of Houston, Delaware, describes her case as follows: "I had been sick over three years. The doctors here only helped me while taking medicine, and I am too poor to always be taking medicine. I had soreness in my left side, near the stomach; sometimes I had this in both sides, and pain in the head; was always constipated, dark circles around the eyes; I spit a great deal of phlegm, had a cough, was often sick at the stomach and restless at night. My health has improved so much I cannot express my thanks. You advised me to take the Golden Medical Discovery. I did so, and I began to improve right away. I now weigh ten and a half pounds more than I did then. I am sorry that I did not know of its merits before I spent so much with other doctors. I only took three bottles. My friends told me it might benefit me while taking it, but the good effects did not stop there, as you will see from the above."

BLOOD DISEASES.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch or eruption, to the worst Scrofula or blood poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing salt-rheum or tetter, fever sores, hip joint disease, scrofulous sores and swellings, enlarged glands, and eating ulcers. A treatise on skin diseases will be sent to any address on receit of ten cents in stamps. We have also a treatise on scrofulous diseases which we will send post paid for ten cents.

Abscess of Liver.

Isaac Gibson, Kenwood, Pa., writes: "My wife is getting well fast. When she began to use your Golden Medical Discovery our best doctors in Indiana county said she would die. They said your medicine would do her no good; that she had an ulcer on her liver as large as half a loaf of bread. Well, sir, to our surprise, when she began using your Golden Medical Discovery she commenced spitting up phlegm for some two weeks, and then commenced spitting up corruption and blood (it looked like what comes out of a blood boil) for some ten days. She now has been well for weeks."

Boils and Carbuncles.

J. Adams, Esq., Toledo, Ohio, writes: "I have used nine bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery, and the result is I am today free from boils and carbuncles for the first time in many years."

Constipation and Ulcers.

Mrs. A. D. Johnson, Georgetown, Ky., writes: "The Golden Medical Discovery relieved me at once. I had a very bad sore on the back of my left hand for five months, and it cured that, as well as constipation and indigestion, from which I was suffering very much."

Scrofulous Sores.

Mrs. A. L. Cory, Hadley, Crawford county, Kan., writes: "My son, aged fifteen years, was taken down last January with swelings on his right shoulder, left hip and knee. He lay helpless for five months, when great abscesses formed, four of which continued to discharge at the time he commenced using your Golden Medical Discovery under your advice. Now, after having used four bottles of the Discovery, he is almost well and walks three-fourths of a mile to school every day. A scrofulous sore on his arm, which ran constantly for two years, has healed completely under the influence of the remedy named."

"Fever Sores."

Mrs. A. H. Crawford, Linn Grove, Buena Vista county, Iowa, writes: "I am the person who wrote to you two years ago for advice respecting fever sores on my leg. I took six bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery and was cured."

Scrofulous Tumor and Sore Eyes.

Mrs. S. E. Graydon, of Greenwood, S. C., writes: "My daughter has been entirely cured of scrofulous sore eyes and a large tumor on her neck, by the use of your Golden Medical Discovery. I have great faith in all of your medicines."

Salt-Rheum Cured.

Mrs. L. Dunkle, of Bartgestown, Kans., writes: "My daughter has been cured of salt-rheum by the use of Golden Medical Discovery."

Erysipelas and Ulcer Cured.

Mr. E. B. Wilcox, of Clatskanie, Columbia county, Oregon, by an accident, broke his leg, erysipelas set in at the ankle and an ulcer followed. After frequent trials of physicians and proprietary medicines, he determined to use the Golden Medical discovery, of which he took over two dozen bottles. He writes:

"Since writing you in the spring of 1884, I continued using the Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets until they made a perfect cure of my leg. It healed up thirteen months ago, and there is no sign of return of the disease. I have been able to work every day this summer, the first I have worked for four years, for which I thank you most gratefully."

Throws Away Crutches.

Mrs. Mary Wolf, Milan, Sullivan county, Mo. writes: "Nearly three years ago our little boy hurt his ankle. We doctored this as a sprain for some time, but the case steadily grew worse instead of better. We then applied to a succession of doctors, one of whom would treat it for a misplaced joint, another for bone disease, another for something else, and so on. Amputation of the affected limb was even suggested. Last April, at which time the child had not had his foot on the floor since the previous December, we placed him under the influence of your Golden Medical Discovery, and the improvement was immediate, and in a short time he was able to walk with the aid of crutches. Formerly his ankle would swell and pain him and was so very weak that a high fever would result; but since commencing the use of your Discovery he has not had a single one of these spells. In four months from the time he commenced the use of the Discovery he threw his crutches aside, for he was well."

Chronic Sores Cured.

Isaac D. Fraser, of Troyville, La., says: "I wrote you some months ago concerning my son. Under your advice I obtained two bottles of Golden Medical Discovery for him. By the time he finished his second bottle he was a sound boy. It has now been some months since he has had any sores break out on him."

Consumption, Weak Lungs, Etc.

Golden Medical Discovery cures consumption (which is scrofula of the lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating and nutritive properties. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, bronchitis, severe coughs, asthma and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

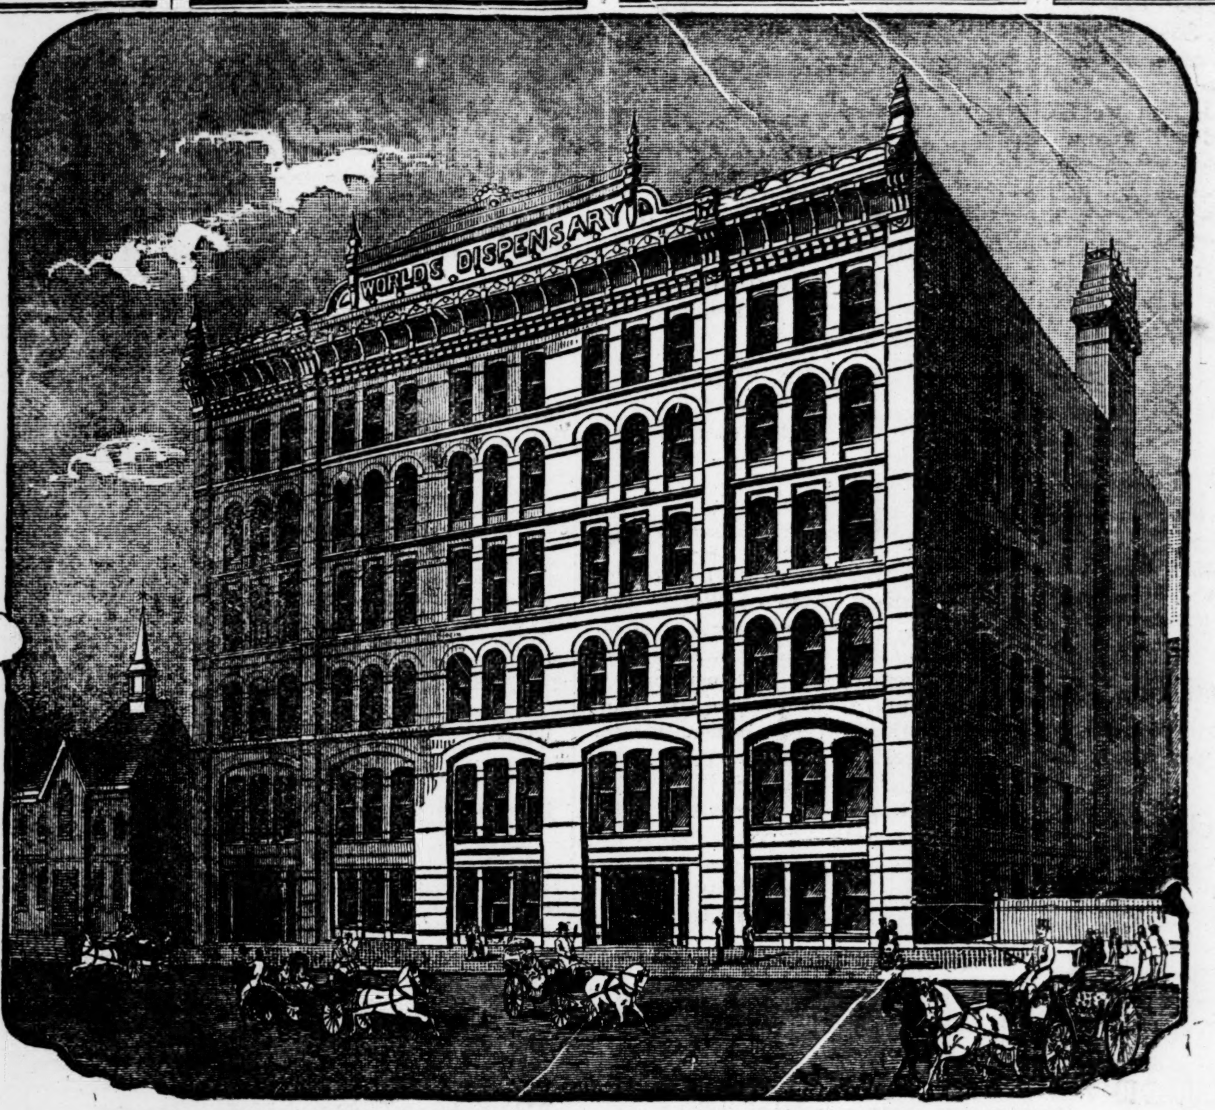
The nutritive properties of cod-liver oil are trifling when compared with those possessed by Golden Medical Discovery. It rapidly builds up the system, and increases the flesh and weight of those reduced below the usual standard of health by "wasting diseases." A large pamphlet treatise on consumption and kindred diseases will pe sent to any address on receipt of ten cents in stamps.

A Wonderful Cure.

Daniel Fletcher, Esq., Gloucester, Mass, writes: "Nearly five years ago I was taken sick with a disease regarding which the three physicians who attended me were unable to agree. One of the foremost physicians in Boston called it a tumor of the stomach, and treated me for that, nearly killing me with physic; another, a homæpathic physician, thought I had consumption. When taken sick I weighed 157 pounds. I suffered from a heavy cough, night sweats, kidney troubles, etc., and was reduced so rapidly that my physicians gave me up. They were unable to help me in the least. At that time I weighed but ninety pounds, and had not been able to lie down, but had to sit up in order to breathe. I had been confined to my room for six months, expecting to die. I was so bad at times that I could not allow any one to come into my room, as I could not talk, nor was I able to walk. I picked up one of your memorandum books on the floor of the hotel where I was boarding, and after reading it I began taking your Golden Medical Discovery, and the first bottle brought me around so that I could walk around the room all day. I soon began to build up and gain so rapidly that it astonished me. I have taken no other medicine since then, and have used perhaps twenty bottles in all of this medicine. I stopped taking it in August, one year ago. I feel that it has saved my life. I now weigh about 160 pounds, and I think, and my friends with me, that this medicine saved my life. It certainly is worth its weight in gold, and I consider it a wonderful remedy from its effect in curing all my ailments."

Threatened With Consumption.

Hon. J. E. Bishop, of Victoria, Coffee county, Ala., reports: "I have put on flesh and gained strength, and my cough is better. Since taking the last prescription I improved so much that I consented to run for and was elected representative from my county to the general assembly of Alabama. While there, I contracted a cold, and upon inquiry, I found your Golden Medical Discovery and commenced its use. I continued it through the winter and spring, and consider it did me more good than anything I had used. I used some 18 bottles and am as hearty as I ever was in my life and am able to look after my business."



WORLD'S DISPENSARY,—LABORATORY BUILDING.

The above Illustration represents the immense six-story building occupied exclusively for the manufacture of Dr. PIERCE'S STANDARD MEDICINES, and known as the WORLD'S DISPENSARY. Within its walls are manufactured medicines of such exceeding merit that they have acquired a world-wide reputation and sale.

Quick Consumption Cured.

Eli Ross, Ida Grove, Iowa, writes: "Dr. R. V. Pierce, Dear Sir—About nine years ago my wife was taken with a severe cough which the doctor said was running into quick consumption. He thought it would be a very short time before it would take her away from me. This I thought was hard, and I did not know what to do, as the doctor was my own brother. After he went out I told her what the doctor said. She said:—'I believe if I had some of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery it would help me.' So I went and got six bottles of it. By the time three bottles were used she was much better. Six bottles made her sound and well. Since then we have not been without it in the house. We use it for coughs and colds of all kinds. We could not keep house without it. My wife took another bad cold about a month ago, but with the use of two bottles she is now well again."

Consumption Cured.

W. J. Hartley, Vera Cruz, Ala., writes: "I met with an old friend of mine not long since, and he told me of the very low state of health he had been in, and he applied to our best doctor, but gradually grew worse under his treatment; was reduced to a skeleton, had a fearful cough, and was thought to have consumption. While in this low state he made a visit to see his relations, and while in a distant town he purchased a bottle of medicine called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and took it, and by the time it was used he was as well as he ever had been. When I saw him he looked to be in the bloom of health. His statement caused a great deal of inquiry, as he is a man of high standing."

Bleeding from Lungs.

Joseph F. McFarland, Athens, La., writes: "My wife had frequent bleeding from the lungs before she commenced using your Golden Medical Discovery. She has not had any since its use. For some six months she has been feeling so well that she has discontinued it."

Consumption Cured.

J. Anthony Swink, Dongola, Ills., writes: "For five years I suffered very much from a terrible cough and debility. More than a year since I commenced to take your Golden Medical Discovery, and it has completely cured me. I thank you for the splendid health I have since enjoyed."

Bronchitis Cured.

M. M. Rogers, of Schulenburg, Texas. A teacher twenty-nine years of age, who suffered from pains in the chest, short breath, and bronchitis, writes: "I have used two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I feel entirely cured."

Bronchitis and Weak Lungs,

J. W. McClure, Pineville, N. C., writes: "I am using your Golden Medical Discovery and your Pleasant Purgative Pellets for chronic bronchitis and weak lungs. I have used two bottles and it has done me more good than all the medicine I have before taken, and I have used thirty-five bottles of one proprietary medicine, sixteen bottles of another, and twelve bottles of a certain 'Lung Balsam,' all of which I pronounce of no account."

Consumption Averted.

Hannah Barnes, Bartonia, Randolph county, Indiana, writes: "Dr. R. V. Pierce—Dear Sir: Four years ago I was suffering fearfully from the depressing effects of nursing a child. I could scarcely walk. We thought that I was going down with consumption. After suffering two years my husband procured one bottle of your Favorite Prescription, and by the time I had taken half of it, I began to feel much better. I then procured three more bottles, and have regained strength so as to do my work with ease.

Consumption. Gained 15 lbs.

Mrs. Thos. Van Sicklen, Brighton, Ont., says: "I have long felt it my duty to acknowledge to you what your Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets have done for me. These medicines cannot be too highly praised. They almost raised me from the grave. I had three brothers and one sister die of consumption, and I was speedily following after them. I had severe cough, pain, copious expectoration, and other alarming symptoms, and my friends all thought I had but a few months to live. At this time I was persuaded to try your Discovery, and the first bottle acted like magic. Of course I continued on with the medicine, and as a result I gained rapidly in strength. My friends were astonished. When I commenced the use of your medicine, six years ago, I weighed but 120 and was sinking rapidly. I now weigh 135 and my health continues perfect. I have a copy of 'The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser,' and neither money nor friends could ever induce me to part with it."

Consumption, "Liver Complaint," Heart Disease.

Thomas Ruland, Esq., East Benton, Lackawanna county, Pa., writes: "Three years ago I was a dreadful sufferer from consumption and liver complaint. I exhausted the skill of several physicians and was quite discouraged. Doctors and friends alike thought I must die. I had a dreadful cough and raised a considerable amount of blood and matter; besides I was very thin and so weak that I could scarcely walk around the house. At this time I read in the New York Weekly of the wonderful cures performed by your Golden Medical Discovery. I procured the medicine named and began using it in connection with the Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Under their influence I recovered my health completely. I would also say that your Discovery cured my grandchild of heart disease."

For Spitting of Blood and Weak Lungs, Golden Medical Discovery Surpassses All Other Medicines.

W. M. Morris, Esq., 35 Center street, Indianapolis, Ind., says: "Some time ago my brother, Mr. L. C. Morris, had hemorrhage of the lungs and catarrh, and your Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy completely cured him."

Bleeding From Lungs.

Lindley Farmer, of Stauffers, Pa., a school teacher; had hemmorrhage from the lungs, due to close confinement in impure air; physicians suspected consumption. He writes:

"I possess a copy of Dr. Pierce's 'Medical Adviser' and have been using Golden Medical Discovery; I have recovered my health so that the doctors tell me I am a sound man again; I used but three bottles of Discovery."

Consumption Cured.

Mrs. E. A. Rivington, 830 Seventh street, N. E., Washington, D. C., writes: "I hope you will pardon my delay in not writing you of the arrival of your priceless Golden Medical Discovery. I am now on the last bottle you sent me. May Heaven bless you for your kindness in sending it when you did. My cough has ceased, and I feel like a new woman in every way."

A Lingering Cough Cured.

Mrs. M. H. Rozell, of Oak Hill, Texas writes: "I am happy to say that one bottle of your Golden Medical Discovery completely cured my cough. I had coughed for a year or more without receiving any relief."

Golden Medical Discovery is Sold by Druggists,

Price $1 Per Bottle, or Six Bottles For $5.00.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, PROPRIETORS,

No. 663 MAIN STREET, BUFFALO, NEW YORK.

A BOON TO WOMEN.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfils a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful general, as well as uterine tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength the whole system.

It promptly cures nausea and weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating eructations of gas, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex.

OVER-WORKED WOMEN

For "worn-out," "run down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, dressmakers, general housekeepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of al restorative tonics.

CURED OF WEAKNESS Peculiar To HER SEX.

Eliza P. Richardson, Alvarado, Johnson county Texas, writes: "World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.: Gentlemen—I feel a deep sense of gratitude in my heart to you for the great benefit received. Had it not been for your treatment I would have been buried long since. I have induced many of my friends to take your medicines and with good results. I am using your Favorite Prescription and Pellets as you directed, and have been cured of a weakness peculiar to my sex, and of a severe dyspepsia. That success may crown your every effort to relieve the afflicted, is the sincere wish of your grateful patient."

General Debility.

Daniel Beauchamp, Marine City, Mich., writes 'World's Dispensary Medical Association: Gentlemen—I will say that I never have seen a cure effected in so short a time of such a severe case as that of my wife. I had begun to despair of her ever getting better; and now after taking five bottles of Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription she is feeling so well that she hardly knows herself. She thinks your medicine a national blessing, and I agree with her."

It Surprises Them All.

Hilda Danielson, Gowrie, Webster county, Iowa writes: "Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., Dear Sir—I should have written you long ago, and thanked you for the great relief I have obtained from your Favorite Prescription. To my surprise, it was all the medicine that I required. I have advised many to give it a trial, and they have all found it satifactory."

"Best Thing in the World for Female Sufferers."

Mrs. Mary L. Evard, of New Haven, Ind., writes' I am very thankful you gave me such good advice, and I have been taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I really think it is the best thing in he world for all female sufferers. We have your Discovery and Extract of Smart-weed in the house and their use has always given good satisfaction.'

They Work Like Magic.

Benjamin Franklin Pratt, East Dover, Piscataquis county, Me., writes: "Dr. R. V. Pierce, Dear Sir—My wife has been taking your blessed and valuable medicine. She was so she could not walk across the room. After taking two bottles of your Favorite Prescription bought of our druggist, she s so she can do our housework. Your medicines are saving a great many lives here. They are selling extensively, and work like magic."

A Women's Gratitude.

Mrs. F. Oats, of Shumway, Ill., writes: "When I had used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription one week, I could walk all over the door-yard, and I could get into a wagon and ride two miles to see my neighbors I had not been able to walk out in the door-yard for six months. After using the Favorite Prescription two weeks, I rode in a wagon ten miles; my neighbors were all surprised to see me up and going about and helping to do my house work, after doctoring with thirteen of the best physicians we could get—and the last one told my husband that I would never be able to do my housework any more. I am thankful that I wrote to you, for I had suffered Organic Weakness until I had almost given up in despair.

Terrible Pain.

Mrs. F. E. Wilcox, Friendship, N. Y., writes: "For five or six years I had been badly troubled with Organic Weakness and terrible pains across the small of my back and pit of the stomach. Three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription acted like a charm, and cured me completely, to my great joy."

Marvelous Benefits.

Rev. Sidney C. Davis, Galien, Michigan, writes: "I wish in this letter to express my gratitude for Mrs. Davis and myself for the great good which has been accomplished in her case by the use of your proprietary medicines. When she began to take them, in January last, she could not endure the least jar, could walk but a very few steps at a time, and could stay up only about thirty minutes at a time. Now she not only sits up almost the entire day, but can walk, call on her neighbors two or three blocks away, and not feel any injurious effects at all. When we consider that she had kept her bed the greater part of he time for fourteen months, and would lose repeatedly the advance she had made, her progress now seems marvelous. We had almost lost confidence in medical practitioners and advertised remedies, but have found in your Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Pellets the properties needed, and which we believe will bring about a complete and final recovery."

Treating The Wrong Disease.

Many times women call upon their family physicians, one with dyspepsia, another with palpitation, another with backache, or nervousness, another with pain here and there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all symptoms caused by some uterine disorder. While the physician is ignorant of the cause of suffering, he encourages his practice until large bills are made, when the suffering patient is no better, but probably worse for the delay, treatment, and other complicacions made. A proper medicine directed to the cause would perhaps have entirely removed the disease, thereby instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

Doctors Failed.

"Organic Weakness" Cured.—Mrs. Sarah A. Lovely, Greenfield, Adair county, Iowa, writes: "R. V. Pierce, M. D. Dear Sir—Having been ill a number of years, and having tried in vain almost every advertised remedy, as well as having paid nearly a hundred dollars to our local physicians, without benefit, I was finally induced to consult you. You advised me to send for your medicines. I accordingly sent for your 'Medical Adviser,' six bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery, six of your Favorite Prescription, and six vials of your Pleasant Purgative Pellets. When I first began using these, I could not stand on my feet. In ninety days I could walk a mile and do light housework, whilst in six months I was completely cured, and my health has remained perfect ever since. I recommend you and your medicines wherever I go, and loan your 'Adviser' to my friends. Two of our most prominent physicians who have read your great work, 'The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser,' pronounce it the best family doctor book they have ever seen."

A Thousand Thanks.

Mrs. Caroline Byers, corner Duke and Argyle streets, Halifax, N. S., writes: "Dr. R. V. Pierce, I thank God, and thank you a thousand times, for the relief that your valuable medicines, the Favorite Prescription and Pellets have given me. I am perfectly cured of a chronic sickness that had troubled me for years. How my heart is overflowed with joy and gratitude towards you, my tongue can never express."

"All Run Down."

Mrs. V. H. Peterson, of Lockport, N.Y., had suffered for three years from "Organic Weakness," was greatly emaciated and "all run down," as she expressed it, and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery promptly cured her, as they have thousands of similar cases.

"Do Likewise."

Mrs. E. F. Morgan, of Newcastle, Lincoln county, Maine, says: "Five years ago I was a dreadful sufferer. Having exhausted the skill of three physicians, I was completely discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room alone. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and using the local treatment recommended in his "Common Sense Medical Adviser.' I commenced to improve at once. In three months I was perfectly cured, and have had no trouble since I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my health had been restored, and offering to send full particulars to any one writing we for them, and enclosing a stamped envelope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters. In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and have earnestly advised them to 'do likewise.' From a great many I have received second letter of thanks, stating that they had commenced the use of Favorite Prescription, had sent the $1.50 required for the Medical Adviser, and had applied the local treatment so fully and plainly laid down therein, and were much better already."

A Doctor's Mistake.

Mrs. Henry Patterson, of New York City, writes: "I had been under an eminent physician's care for eight months, for what he called 'spinal disease.' I became worse during all this time, when, chancing to see a copy of Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser at the residence of a friend. I read that part devoted to 'Woman and her Diseases.' I soon became convinced that my disease was an affection, which, as you say, caused sympathetic backache, inward fever, nervousness and general debility. I commenced the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and Golden Medical Discovery, applying also the local treatment which he recommends in the Adviser, and in three months I was well and strong.

DRESSMAKING.

Our motto in this department is perfect fits, late styles and perfect elegance.

In every department of our business we claim to surpass any southern retail firm, and at no time since we commenced have we had the facilities that we now enjoy. We import direct, which places us nearer to the customer by far ahead of other southern firms and equal to any northern house. In plain terms, we defy competition in Dry Goods, Millinery, Carpets and Shoes. We keep nothing common, nothing second-hand, nothing shoddy, nothing bought because it is cheap, nothing from auction, nothing from bankrupt stocks. We send to the auction house old goods, and sell new ones.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

Bonds, Stocks and Money.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE,
ATLANTA, April 10, 1886.

Floods and paper railroads have shaken securities of that class a little bit. Georgia Pacific bonds tumbled down a couple of points on the apprehension that the road was badly damaged by water, but the injury does not appear great—certainly not sufficient to jeopardize payment of interest on first mortgage, and they will doubtless soon recover lost ground. All the roads centering here suffered more or less, but the Richmond and Danville and Georgia Central kept their schedules up, and were only slightly damaged. The others are in apple-pie order again, and the flood will soon be forgotten.

The danger now to two of the old lines—the Georgia Central and Georgia railroad and banking company—is in a probability of competition from new roads. If Atlanta determines to build a road to Port Royal or some Savannah river point, it will be a direct competitor with the Georgia railroad and banking company, and may some way affect the earnings of the road so as to make a continuation of the lease undesirable, and the lessees would then rig up some plan of giving the property up. On the other hand, if Atlanta builds a line to Hawkinsville it will hurt Georgia Central, as well as East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia. Again, the Savannah, Dublin and Western road, which seems to be a certainty, will knock a hole in the income of both the last named companies, and the situation for them now, as in the past, looks at least a trifle doubtful. It may hurt the feelings of Georgia railroad stockholders and lessees to say so, but if Atlanta can build a railroad, at all she can build a standard gauge, and that is the only sensible thing to do. In the opinion of the reporter, Port Royal is the place to make for, and he hopes to see that route adopted. We all admit that only a starter in the way of money can be raised by home people, and outside capital must be relied on to supply about two-thirds of the means required. The money can be had from outsiders only on a first mortgage, and for a broad guage road at that. Our information is that 15,000 per mile can be floated on a broad guage road easier than 5,000 per mile on a narrow guage. This is a broad guage town, and we don't want to reduce our size.

The closing of Georgia railroad transfer books or something else has made the stock dull and weak. Sales just prior to April 1 were made at 191, but today, ex-dividend, the stock sold at 183, making a decline of 5½ points within ten days. It is at a giddy figure yet. Central stock is steady, but will not hold present prices if anything definite in the way of new competition is done.

Money easy.

NEW YORK STOCKS.

Stocks as Reported at the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Although yesterday's stock market was the dullest seen during the past six months, today's business fell short of that of yesterday by 22,800 shares. There was the same absence of interest in the entire list noticed yesterday, but early news this morning indicating a possibility of further trouble with strikers led to a rather weak opening. The market was dull but firm until towards midday, when there was a small decline, followed by renewed strength that continued to the close, but the extreme fluctuations were generally under 1 per cent, and in some of the old active stocks not over ½ per cent. Closing prices are generally ⅛ per cent higher, but some of the unusually inactive stocks show greater changes. Sales, 165,000 shares.

Exchange 486¼. Money 1½@2. Sub-treasury balances: Coin, $128,085,000; currency $10,626,000. Governments dull; 4s 126⅛; 3s 100¾ bid. State bonds dull but strong.

NEW YORK, April 10—C. L. Green & Co., in their report on cotton futures today, say: Scarcely enough doing to make a market until late in the day, when a small demand to cover a few short deals gave an advance of 2@3 points, and closed the position nominally steady. The remarkable absence of speculative interest continues, and all class of operators appear to stand off through positive perplexity.

NEW YORK, April 10—The total visible supply of cotton for the world is 2,670,306 bales, of which 2,176,266 bales are American, against 2,634,995 bales and 2,071,898 respectively last year. Receipts at all interior towns 27,661 bales. Receipts from plantations 25,473. Crop in sight 6,137,528 bales.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Produce.

Special to The Constitution.

CHICAGO, April 10—Wheat opened at the lowest point of the session today and sold steadily up to the highest—an advance of 1½c. Trading all day was on a moderate scale, and all agreed that the demand was of a local character. The fact that twenty-eight boat loads were taken for shipment at New York yesterday, and continued talk of export purchases today inspired a very general attempt at short covering. The last hour of trading was slow and heavy values declining on the bearish conditions shown by the government report.

At times the provision pit was deserted, though at no time was the market weak, on the basis of opening prices, though it ranged rather under yesterday's latest figures. May pork ranged generally between $9 30 and $9.35.

Corn was purely a local deal, May selling moderately at 37½@37¾c, the inside and outside prices for the day.

Flour was a little more active with prices 5@10c lower than those current before wheat started on the recent decline.

GOTHAM GOSSIP,

GATHERED BY A CORPS OF BRIGHT CORRESPONDENTS.

Various Talks on Many Topics—Theatrical, Social, Commercial and Other Gossip Presented by Those Who are in a Position to Know of What They Write—Other News.

NEW YORK, April 9.—[Special Correspondence.]—The public loveliness of Lillian Russell is always fretted with private ugliness. She always seems to be having some kind of trouble with her "old man." Her present old man is Mr. Solomon, the imposer of "Pepita." He is one of the cleverest musical imposers we have.

Did you ever regard a domestic broil in an opera company? It's quite unique. When the parties are both singers the opportunities for little mutual spites smothered in smiles are numerous. If they have to kiss each other, ten to one the beaming wife will bite a little piece out of his ear while her face is wreathed in serene amiability, or the husband in "parting, dearest, but for a day," will crack the forefinger of her right hand in shaking it.

But when the husband is the conductor he has an awful bulge on the better half. He can pursue her with brass and strangle her with strings and tease her with tempo, and all she can do is to pat her little foot and keep on smiling helplessly.

When there is a coolness between the orchestra and the prima donna the prima donna has to walk.

What the present "ruction" is with Lillian nobody can find out. But everybody talks about it. The husband and wife pass scornful notes to each other on the stage in silence, with the bitter knowledge that the wife's notes will be read to all the female chorus and the husband's notes to all the male chorus before they get into Mr. J. M. Hill's pocket.

Whenever a petted prima donna has a tiff with her old man the newspapers fan it. One day last week a telephone rumor came to the great dailies that Solomon had spoken to his wife with some degree of coolness. I believe a general police alarm was sent out. At all events battalions of reporters began to move on to Union square theatre. The illustrated papers (all papers are illustrated now) set their artists to sketch the coolness, and the thing began to grow.

Why the public should care a rap about Lillian Russell's little tiffs I cannot understand, but such is the present construction of society that if a genius did something in iron or steel that would affect the entire commercial interests of the world the papers would make a paragraph about it. But if a comic singer with a pretty face has the hysterics they will devote columns to it.

But what I wanted to say was this, that there is always in a community like New York about one third of the population who are secretly and sweetly mashed on any pretty women who is exhibiting herself. These young and old noodles are content to love the actress from the parquet, and hide their adoration in bouquets or pour it out on photographs up to the point where she has a row with her old man, and then they begin to send poems of condolence and sympathy to the theater.

I believe Mr. Hill intends to get up a souvenir of sympathy on the five hundredth night of "Pepita," and print these offerings.

There must be five hundred hearts that bleed every time Lillian Russell is annoyed by her old man: Public opinion then asserts itself and the voice of veal is heard in the land.

Here is one of the condoling poems that was sent to the theater:

Queen of all that's fair and bright,
Lustrous star of noon and night,
Sorrow comes and sorrow goes,
Wipe, O wipe away your woes!
Art thou crushed with many sorrows?
Think of all the bright tomorrows,
When from husband once more free,
Thou shalt live in liberty.

Here's another:

We feel for thee, fair one of the lustrous scene,
Beauteous queen!
One manly Hart would share with thee the grief
Of thine sad burden. In brief,
Consider that in all the scenes that rue
One patient soul is leal and true.

These are fair samples of the whole basket. The story that Solomon gets up these tiffs with his wife to excite poetical sympathy and thus accumulate material for a new opera libretto may have some foundation, for it must be said there is a strange resemblance in these rhymlets to the work in "Polly" and "Pepita."

II.

Fashionable society has been completely aroused the past week over the production of a little comedy played by amateurs. Now, there is nothing particularly astouishing in the fact, but only in subsequent developments. The title of the play was "Boutonniere, or War of the Roses." It has been greatly discussed who were the authoresses. Two summers ago a party of young people were together at Far Rockaway, and to while away time dramatized a short story written by the "Duchess." The authors were Mrs. Kate Ward Moore, a great belle, whose father, Matthew Ward, was well known throughout the south, and whose aunt is Sallie Ward, the famous beauty, who has been the wife of several husbands. The other young lady was Miss Cornelia Van Auken, a grand daughter of the late Commodore Garrison and an unusually clever girl. Together they wrote their little play, but when at the end of the visit it was still unfinished, Miss VanAuken took it to her city home, where it was eventually completed by her.

As a Lenten diversion it was decided to produce the comedy, and Mrs. Bessie Ward Doremus, at whose house it was written, and who is a sister of Mrs. Moore, put her own name as collaberateur, for two reasons. She had written the play of "Larks," which Lotta has produced this season, and Mrs. Moore, her sister, did not wish her own name used, as just now she is passing through a domestic trial. As one sister did not desire the authorship, it seemed natural the other should take the "honor thrust upon her," or leave Miss Van Auken sole representative of authorship.

Miss Van Auken carefully prepared her cast, which contained among other names that of young Fairfax Harrison, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton N. Harrison. Mr. Harrison is well known as secretary to Jefferson Davis, and Mrs. Harrison is prominent in the social and literary world.

Others in the play were Mr. Edward Fales Coward, who is considered the best amateur in New York, Miss Caroline Duer and Miss Ruth Lawrence, daughter of Judge Lawrence.

Mrs. Harrison, who had been south with Mrs. Whitney, wife of Secretary Whitney, arrived in New York just before the production of the play, and being at variance with Mrs. Doremus, insisted on drawing her son Fairfax from the cast. Then followed explanations. Mrs. Doremus was not part author, but her sister was; young Harrison played his role, and so it came about that there were two productions of the piece instead of one, for Mrs. Van Auken produced it in Mrs. Eliot Johnston's parlors, with those already mentioned, and Mrs. Doremus produced it with herself, Miss Coffey, a rising beauty, Mr. Syket and Mr. Coward, at the University Club Theater.

The play, which is clever, resembles Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," for in both a young lady of position becomes a waitress and thereby wins her lover.

The authors may congratulate themselves on the brightness of the dialogue, and we shall look for more from Miss Van Auken's pen. She has already been approached by a well-known firm to publish the play. Now you know the true history of "The War of the Roses."

Mrs. James Brown Potter gave a tea party to Mme. Nevada on Monday, which was the leading event of the week. The fair hostess wore a dark green satin dinner dress with brocaded velvet basque, the raised velvet figure being a three-leaf clover. A green satin vest front was fastened by the diamond studs.

Miss Georgia Urquhart, her sister, who has just returned from New Orleans, wore a brown raw silk dress, with white crape loose vest. It was very striking. The celebrated guest of the occasion, who was accompanied by her husband, Dr. Palmer, wore a black velvet costume with pink satin vest, and the beautiful pearl and diamond ornaments given her by Mrs. John Mackey at the time of her debut.

Other guests were Mr. George Henry Warren, Mr. Ward McAllister, Mr. Henry Eglest on, Mr. Musgrave and Senator Ingalls and wife.

Although Wall street is a quandary as to which side to take in the present fight between capital and labor, even the most socialistic brokers could not repress a smile over the manifesto of the Knights of Labor against Gould. Of course capital is all powerful in the street, but stock brokers are no fools, and know that it is of no use without the constant aid of labor. Gould, again, is no favorite in Wall street, but when he is described in abstract meaningless terms, such as a crazy French communist might have used, Wall street smiles and calls attention to the day when Major Selover took the "giant fiend" by the coat collar and dropped him down an area. Wall street, together with the country at large, wants some concrete accusation against a man, not abstract statements. If anything of a stock jobbing nature could be proved in Gould's attitude towards the Knights of Labor it would be of some use; but as the case stands at present there is no reason for supposing that Mr. Gould, any more than Mr. McDowell, is using the strikes for speculative purposes.

The manifesto of the executive committee was a very poorly conceived and still more poorly written document, and the general verdict is that, if the Knights of Labor have nothing more business-like or sensible to say, they will do better if they shut up and go on with their fight, leaving the talking to facts. Bombastic platitudes do not take in a practical country like this, although they have occasionally taken during exciting times among the dreamy, theoretical and superstitious population of the continent of Europe. It is idiotic to talk in this country of "chain being already forged" and "our children becoming slaves." There is no land on the face of the globe where public opinion is more just and equitable in all the conflicts between poor and rich, weak and strong. Be it in a street fight, in the courts of law or in a contest of any kind, the public cry is invariably "fair play" and the spontaneous expression of public sympathy is invariably with the weaker and the poorer. Of course success is, after whisky, the great intoxicating drink of America. But the public gets tipsy on it only after it has become convinced that it is a ligitimate article. Every lawful step forward on the part of the Knights of Labor would be applauded by the whole continent, but stupid manifestoes will do them almost as much harm as acts of violence. If the latter revolt public opinion the former annoy it. To talk now about "infamy and outrages" by which the immense wealth of the "giant fiend" has been accumulated is sheer humbug. Why did the law of the country permit him to do so, and why is not legal investigation ettablished now to find out and punish his wrong doings? By merely howling that this "monster of perfidy" must be overthrown the Knights of Labor will not achieve more than if they had published a complaint about Jay Gould eating every day strawberries and peaches from his greenhouses, while they could never manage to have anything better for dinner than pork and beans.

No one can tell when and how this lamentable contest will come to an end, but all earnest and thoughtful citizens feel uneasy about it. The very expression of the faces of men one meets in business circles seems to have changed. They don't joke and don't laugh as much as before, even over a sociable dinner, and wherever one goes one hardly hears anything but the question of strikes discussed. This is quite an uncomfortable state of affairs for a newspaper correspondent, for he does not get anything to write about.

A well known New York character has just departed, in the person of Edward A. Bedloe, formerly a merchant in this city and an intimate friend of the late Lorenzo Delmonico. Many years ago, Mr. Bedloe lost nearly all his money, and since then lived on an annuity of $1,000. During Lorenzo Delmonico's lifetime he might be seen day and night at his restaurant with two old cronies, the three gray-haired friends being known as the Three Graces. Mr. Bedloe was familiarly known as "Prince Salad" and the "Pie Detective," the latter sobriquet having been acquired in Delmonico's house in Beaver street where he used to watch the brokers and clerks eating cakes and report them if they forgot to pay at the desk as they went out. Bedloe's Island, on which the statute of liberty is being erected, is named after one of Mr. Bedloe's ancestors, and his death brings up a host of reminiscences of old New York. Among other things for which Mr. Bedloe was famous was the introduction into sporting circles of Berry Wall, the king of the dudes. Before "plunging,' upon any race Berry used to consult his ancient friend, and no doubt gained experience, if not money, by these transactions.

RIGOLO.

IV.

Miss Rose Cleveland's letter to Miss Elizabeth Cady Stanton on low-necked dresses excited considerable comment among local politicians. The kid glove element of both parties denounce the letter, while the short hairs praise it. In other words, George Bliss, O. B. Potter, Dorman B. Eaton and Levi P. Morton favor the extreme decollete fashion, and Jacob Hess, Tim Campbell, John Scannell and Francis B. Spinola denounce it. Apropos of the whole business a politician of note thirty years ago tells an amusing story. He came from Tompkins county. The incident occurred when Mrs. Stanton herself wore low-necked dresses to the admiration of all who knew her. It was in 1847, when her husband had gone from Boston to live at Seneca Falls. She was then 31 years old, and she had as handsome a bust, shoulders and arms as could be found west of the Hudson river. Since her letter to Miss Cleveland some of her lady friends in Cayuga county take malicious pleasure in exhibiting old daguerreotypes in which the great dress mugwumpess is pictured in the fashionable costume of the period, with costume cut several inches below the shoulders, exposing an exhubertant bust and showing most lovely white arms.

For many years Mr. Stanton collected small engravings of the heads of famous Europeans and Americans. They were framed and arrayed in groups on the walls of the rooms of his house from basement to attic. Statesmen, warriors, scientists, divines, historians, poets, dramatists and other eminent men were put in congenial clusters. Here hung pictures of Walpole, Pitt, Fox, Canning, Peel and statesmen of similar stamp. In another group were engravings of Madison, Clinton, Clay, Webster and Tom Corwin. Near it were the portraits of Jackson, Tom Benton, Van Buren, Silas Wright and others.

In the campaign of 1854 or thereabouts William H. Seward went to Seneca Falls to address a political meeting. As usual he enjoyed the hospitality of Judge Garry Sackett, The judge proposed a visit to Mrs. Stanton and after dinner they drove over to her residence. Mr. Seward's attention was soon attracted by the groups of heads on the walls. The variety was bewildering, but he studied each face carefully. Nowhere, however, could he discover his own picture. Mrs. Stanton was at his side arrayed in an exquisite low necked dress. Turning to her with stately courtesy the senator said:

"Oh, that I were a New York barn burner! Then I might hope to appear among your household gods."

"Ah, sir," she responded with a bewitching smile, "I do not class you with these ordinary politicians, but among the great reformers. Will you and Judge Sackett oblige me by stepping into the library?"

The senator bowed, and the lady led the way to the library.

"Here," she resumed, pointing to a pictorial group of radicals, including Gerrit Smith, Birney, Lamartine, Garrison and Wendell Phillips—"here is your appropriate place, Governor Seward."

The statesman's eyes were not on the engravings. He seemed like a man in a trance. Mrs. Stanton was about to continue, when Judge Sackett interrupted her. "Alas, madam," said he, "Governor Seward is not now looking for a fac simile of his homely countenance. He is lost in contemplation of your lovely arms."

Seward blushed and did not regain his equilibrium for some time.

In local politics noting startling is brewing The Tammany men have the county domocracy on the hip in the excise commission. By some oversight the law did not give the mayor absolute power in the appointment of police justices and excise commissioners. They must be confirmed by the board of aldermen, and the board will confirm no men of Mayor Grace's selection. Nor will the legislature change the law. If it did, it is doubtful whether the governor would sign it. The truth is, Tammany is locally too much for the county democracy. She is extending her arms nationally also. She initiated six southern and western congressmen at her late regular meeting. The newspapers contained accounts of the initiation and banquet that followed, but failed to say that the speeches after the banquet were, with one exception, flavored with the bitterest feeling toward President Cleveland.

A NEW INVENTION AND RECENT DISCOVERY.

That Delicious Article and Food Product, Butter, to be Lowered in Price so that the People Generally Can Enjoy Its Benefits—A Wonderful Discovery.

THE CONSTITUTION learning that such an invention had been recently discovered, sought Mr. W. S. Saul, who controls Georgia in this wonderful invention, to learn more of the particulars and its workings. We found Mr. Saul very busy answering correspondents and explaining its workings, and said in answer to our first interrogatory: "Yes; myself and another party, after thoroughly investigating the patent, quality of butter, its keeping qualities, and everything connected with the invention, decided to invest, and that they had bought the right for the state of Georgia, paying a considerable sum of money therefor, and what we claim for the product is simply this: We take, say any quantity of milk or cream, and without the use of any chemicals whatever, by churning in any kind of a churn, say four to five minutes, increase the quantity of butter over the old process from 400 to 500 per cent., giving as the result as pure, sweet, fresh butter as can be desired; thereby, greatly reducing the price of the product, and enabling those who only have one cow to make sufficient butter for their own use, or even purchase milk and make the butter by our process, costing 100 to 200 per cent less than the former price of butter.

"Mr. Saul, when was this wonderful invention discovered, by whom, and has it become generally known yet?"

"It was patented on the 19th day of January, 1886, to Mr. Lyman Guinnip, of Chicago, who is now engaged in making butter by this process, supplying that market; and the demand is so great that with a capacity of two churns, one-half ton each, kept in constant motion, he cannot supply the demand. It is also being operated in Baltimore by Mr. T. H. Wilson with like results. Being such a recent invention, it has not as yet become generally known, but will be in a very short time. As you well know, when a food product that is so generally used as butter, when the people become to know that it is pure and sweet—that there is nothing used whatever but milk and its products—they will eagerly seek after it, and cease using oleomargerine, butterine and bogus butter."

"Can you give the public any idea how you accomplish so wonderful a thing in so short a time, and how you propose to introduce it to the people so they can learn its art and derive its benefits?"

No, I cannot I don't know myself, neither does the pattentee. All we can say is, we take, say any given quantity of milk, and from it derive, say 400 to 600 per cent more butter than by the the old process, the butter is as good, fresh, sweet and pure as our mothers' made years ago We propose to sell county rights to agents, and establish manufactories in the large towns of Georgia, and by these means get it before the people.

"How much will a family right cost, say for an ordinary sized family?"

"I propose to lease to any family for the term of five years, for one cow $5, two cows $10, and so on, up to $100, for dairies making butter for the market. Hotels and restaurants will cost in proportion to the business done."

"Mr. Saul, have you demonstrated this process to any person as yet? and are the people satisfied as far as they have seen the test?"

"Yes, sir. I never saw people so earnest and anxious in all my life. I have not yet shown to any person but at once they want a right which I am sorry I can't supply, as I will sell only county rights, and let agents supply family rights. Several gentlemen here who I can refer to have tried the butter and pronounced it equal, and in some instances better, than ordinary butter, As by this process we combine all the elements of milk, viz., caseine, sugar, oter oil and earthy salts into the butter, which we claim makes a more healthful product. We have certificates from eminent chemists certifying to its purity and healthfulness.

"Have you sold any county rights yet, and how are the agents succeeding who have purchased?"

"Yes, I have sold several counties, and those who have gone to work report to me they are selling to every family where they show the process. As you well know, people will take hold readily on any product so universally used, as it cheapens that product to the extent above stated."

"Have you made any arrangements as yet to have the butter put upon the market in Atlanta as you know our people have to purchase all kinds of butter here, never getting anything pure, unless from our creameries near by and they can't begin to supply one tenth of the demand?"

"No, not as yet. Several are investigating with a view of establishing a factory, such as is in Chicago and Baltimore; and when that is done it will be good-bye oleomargerine, butterine and bogus butter. As you know these goods are sold under a cloud any way, and in directed violation of the laws of our state. Butter made by our process should not retail at over 20c. per pound, while under the old process, it sells from 35 to 50c. per pound.

This reporter after interviewing Mr. Saul sometime, took his leave, as he was so busy with customers looking after county rights, and not wishing longer to intrude on his time, but while there learned a good deal of this wonderful discovery, and fully made up his mind that as soon as he could purchase a family right for his family he would do so, and stop using butterine and olemargarine in his family any longer. Mr. Sal ucertainly has a big thing before him, and we don't know of any one we wish more success than him.

John Keely, the Leader of Low Prices,

Presents our readers of today with a full page advertisement on our first page. He has just marked off an immense stock of goods, and offers very great inducements in the way of bargains, novelies, etc. After all has been said and done, the man who buys the heaviest is the one who gets the best prices made to him in the purchase, and consequently is the one who can make the lowest prices to you. Our friend, the captain, is too well known to this community to need any indorsement at our hands; but it must be said that never has he been so well prepared to treat his patrons well as this season, for he has lovely goods and the prices are low.

Be sure you look at his milinery this week. The display will be lovely—the styles tempting in the extreme. You will be sure to read his notice on our first page; you owe it to yourself to do so.

LADIES!

Do you study the value of money? Do you study your personal appearance? If so go to Regenstein's grand millinery opening Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and then be convinced that for less money than anywhere in town can you purchase real stylish millinery, elegant in quality, rich in design, and becoming to you particularly.

Our Only Park.

Hundreds of our people will doubtless visit the L. B. Grant park to-day, for the first time.

The park looks like a daisy in its new spring dress, and presents a refreshing spectacle to eyes that have seen nothing but brick walls all the winter. The cars will run to suit everybody's convenience today, and the drives are in first-class condition.

A glance at the map of the park shows that it has plenty of attractions. Aside from its picturesque features, the famous sulphur spring alone is worth a daily trip to the park. This spring is a veritable fountain of health, and those who fail to utilize it will miss a good thing.

ncil Paragraphs Caught on the Fly by the Constitution Reporters.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.—Yesterday com-issions were forwarded from the executive partment to the following notaries public: E. Norton, of the 753 district, of Thomas, d O. B. Brown, of the 77 district, of Jeffer-n.

FENCE OR NO FENCE.—At an erly day Or-nary Calhoun will order an election on this estion for Fulton county. Little interest s been taken in it, and many people do not ow that a petition for the election had been ed.

DEATH OF A CHILD.—The little six-months- baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Smythe d yesterday morning at 9 o'clock after an ness of only a few hours. It was a sweet by, and his death is a sad bereavement to the her and mother, who idolized him.

THE VALUE OF ADVERTISING.—J. T. White, r leading wall paper and shade dealer, re-ived this week an order from Buffalo Gap, xas, for wall paper. Appended to the order s this statement: "I saw your advertise-ent in THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION."

THE LOST BOY.—Fred McMasters, the nine ar old boy who left his home on Luckie eet Tuesday night, has not been found yet. e boy who was detained in Marietta Friday cause he was supposed to be McMasters' oved to be some one else. The missing boy's rents are deeply distressed over the strange sence of their son.

MEMORIAL DAY.—The committee of ar-gement of the Ladies' Memorial association perfecting arrangements for the 26th, and e day promises to be an interesting one. lonel W. D. Ellis has been selected as orator the day. Colonel Ellis is a fluent and en-taining speaker, and will deliver a model dress. The Rev. C. W. Beckwith has been osen as chaplain.

AN INSANE CONVICT.—A short time ago A. Thomas, a convict from Bartow county, orking at West's iron furnace, in Cedartown, owed signs of insanity. These signs increas-, until a few days since Thoma was tried by jury and adjudged insane. Yesterday Gov-nor McDaniel issued an order requiring the moval of the convict from Cedartown to the ate asylum, at Milledgeville.

DEATH OF MR. FRANK NASH.—Yesterday orning at five o'clock Mr. Frank Nash's soul ok its flight to the spirit land. He had en sick for more than a week with pneumo-ia and measles, and the best medical skill uld not give him relief. He bore his suffer-gs with Christian fortitude, and when the eath angel called he passed quietly and calm- to the other shore. His remains will be rried to Stone Mountain this morning for terment.

MR. SMALL IN THE PULPIT TODAY.—Mr. m Small will occupy the pulpit of the Sixth ethodist church on Merritts avenue near eachtree street, this morning at 11 o'clock, d in the evening at 7:30 he will preach at rinity church. No doubt he will be greeted y large congregations at both services, in iew of the fact that the people have just eard Mr. Moody and are anxious to see how r. Small compares with him after his long la-ors in the west.

SHOT THROUGH THE HAND.—James Cur-an, a young butcher, shot himself through e left hand night before last. Curran was 203 Rhodes street. Night before last after ing his supper Curran went to his room. rran's roommate had just purchased a pis-l, which he handed to Curran to examine. examining the pistol Curran held the muz-e against the palm of the left hand. By some eans the pistol went off and the ball passed ntirely through the hand, crushing the bone s it went. The wound proved quite painful nd will keep Curran from work for some ime to come.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS—Mr. Byron M. Winn nd bride are in the city, the guests of Mr. Tappan. Mr. Winn was married on Wednes-day last at White Plains, Ga., to Miss Julia Tappan. The wedding occurred at the resi-dence of Mr. Alex. Tappan the bride's father, nd was witnessed by a large number of riends of the contracting parties. Mr. Winn s a tobacco manufacturer, and is a gentleman well known through Georgia. He is popular nd clever. His bride is a lady of rare mental nd social accomplishments, and has been a decided belle.

TO LECTURE IN CHAUTAUQUA.—Rev. J. W. Lee, pastor of Trinity church, has been invited by Dr. J. H. Vincent, chancellor of the Chautauqua university, to deliver a lecture at Chautauqua August 13. It will be remembered that Rev. J. W. Lee spoke twice from the Chautauqua platform two years ago. A part of his first speech was quoted in THE CONSTITUTION and pronounced a model address. These speeches made him a host of acquaintances and friends all over the north. The attention of the general public was first called to Mr. Lee by these Chautauqua addresses. They were copied in northern papers and largely commented on. From Chautauqua Mr. Lee goes to New York city, where he preaches Sunday, August 15th, in Dr. Deems's Church of the Strangers. From thence he goes to Asbury Park, New Jersey, where he delivers a lecture before the institute of Christian philosophy on "The conservation of spiritual energy."

HE IS IMPROVING.—Mr. S. Dewald, the old gentleman who was knocked down by W. R. Phillips's runaway horse day before yesterday, was much better last night, and Dr. Barchiem, the attending physician, is now sanguine of an early recovery. Mr. Dewald's improved condition was gratifying news to his many friends yesterday. Mr. Phillips was arraigned in police court yesterday morning, charged with careless driving. The evidence showed that Mr. Phillips was not driving at all, but had left the horse in the street unhitched. There is an ordinance that requires all drivers of licensed vehicles to hitch their teams, and if this ordinance is violated, a criminal prosecution may follow if any person is injured by the team running away. This did not cover Mr. Phillips' case, however, and he was discharged. The recorder was of the opinion that the ordinance should be made broader, and all persons be included.

Fine Painting.

M. M. Mauck has just finished painting the residence of Mr. W. A. Hemphill, on Peachthree street It is done, as Mauck always does work, in a highly artistic and splendid manner, and will redound to the benefit of Mr. Mauck. Mr. Mauck is now doing a great deal of fine painting in the city, and his work is the equal of any.

To Take the Road.

Mr. Talmage Richards is to take the road for de-lec-ta-lave, and will push the merits of that remarkable invention of Dr. Brockett. Mr. Richards has good address, is as full of energy as an egg is of meat, and de-lec-ta-lave will not come up missing in his territory.

Professor Fowler, the venerable phrenologist, will arrive in Atlanta to day, and will be at Concordia hall tomorrow night. See his announcement elsewhere.

HAS HE KILLED HIM?

GRAVE FEARS THAT FINDLEY HAS KILLED KIRKLEY.

Nothing Heard from Deputy Marshal Kirkley Since Findley's Leap for Liberty from the Train—Both Men True Blue, and Bloody News Momentarily Expected of Them.

Nothing has been heard at the marshal's office from Deputy Marshal Kirkly, who had James Findley in charge when he escaped by jumping from the car.

It is believed that the deputy marshal is in pursuit of Findley and will not return until he catches him. Chief Deputy Mitchell said that it was the duty of Mr. Kirkly to send a report immediately to the marshal, and the fact that nothing has been heard from him since Findley's escape, give rise to the belief that he is NOW IN PURSUIT.

It is hoped that this theory is true, but there is no telling the fate of the United States deputy marshal.

A gentleman who knows Findly intimately said last night.

"If Findley had time to get the hand-cuffs off his hands he will make it warm for Kirkly, if he has not already done so."

"But it would be no easy matter to get the cuffs off," suggested the reporter.

"Fidley is just the kind of man to tear the flesh from his hands to get them off. He knows if he is caught there will be hard times ahead for him, and he would not hesitate a moment to mangle his hands up. He has the nerve to do it, too. I know him. If he gets the cuffs off before he will be arrested. I would not care to tackle him, even if I was well armed, and he didn't have anything. I feel uneasy about Kirkley, knowing Findley as I do."

HE WILL KILL KIRKLEY

"Findley has no pistol?"

"That we do not know. It would not be a hard matter for him to get one."

"How could he?"

"Easy enough. If he stopped at the home of any of those mountaineers and told them that he was being pursued by a deputy marshal and wanted something to defend himself with, they would get him up a whole arsenal. Why, those people hate the very name of deputy marshal, and would help out a friendin distress.

No, sir, Findley, if

HE WANTED A PISTOL,

had no trouble in getting one, and if it comes in his way to use it to prevent being arrested, he will do it. He is a fine shot too."

"Wouldn't the people help him get the cuffs off, too?"

"Would they? Yes, indeed, and he knows them well enough to know they would. If Findly ever got off a short distance from the railroad he found smooth sailing. All he had to do was to tell the people his trouble."

Chief Deputy Mitchell says it may be that Kirkly feels so sore over allowing Findley to escape, that he has neglected to roport to the office; but he is inclined to the belief that he is in pursuit. Mr. Mitchell says Kirkly is good game, and that he does not fear any throuble.

Findley is related to Mr. James A. Findley, of Gainesville, Georgia, who served as deputy marshal for several years, and was known as the officer in the service. He was in more tight places than any deputy, and always came out on top.

The citizens of Hall county, where Findley was raised, do not believe he was in any way connected with the burning of Mr. Steward's barn, for which offense he was arrested, tried and convicted, but made his escape by rushing from the court room with drawn pistol.

SIDEWALK TALKS.

Short Talks with Atlanta People About Various Matters of Public Interest.

A. A. DELOACH.—"While in Bullock county, where I went with my sister with the remains of my brother, I took a birthday dinner on the 18th of March with my grandfather. It was his ninetieth birthday and he is remarkably well preserved."

MR. S. W. GOODE: "I have closed a trade which afforded me much pleasure to make. I have sold the Beck place, on Merritt's avenue, to the great Georgia evangelist, Sam. W. Small, a gentleman whom I have always admired, and one every Georgian will be proud of. Yes, I am glad I had the pleasure of selling him a residence."

MR. FRANK M. POTTS, "I can't tell yet what I will do. If I want to continue in business I guess I will have to leave. I can't stay here and go on with this line. Then there is not a dollar to be made in another line here. I have talked to many business men and they all assure me that they are not making any money. I can't tell yet what I'll do."

MR. W. R. HILL—"No, I am not going to leave Atlant. It is my home and I expect to remain here. But if I were going again, I should go and make a home some where else. It is hard to tell yet what the house will do. If we have much stock on hand when the time for prohibition comes, we will be compelled to open somewhere, probably Chattanooga, to dispose of it. My age alone is what prevents me from going to another home. I will find enough to do in closing up my business.

MR. AUG. FLEISH, of the Atlanta City brewery;—"The brewery will continue to run after July, but I don't think upon as large scale as now, for there will not be so good a market for the beer. Sell it in Atlanta? Yes, I guess so, though it will be necessary to establish a branch office out of the city, and let the orders go through it, and the beer be shipped there and then back to Atlanta. This will, of course, cut off our profits. The business of the brewery is ruined, that is just the long and short of it."

MR. DON BAIN: "We have arranged things so that the ceremonies connected with the unveiling of the Ben Hill monument will not interfere with the parade and drill of the Gate City Guard and the Busch Zouaves, of St. Louis, both of which results take place on the same day. The unveiling ceremonies will occur in the morning and the military celebration in the afternoon. The companies can be present at the unveiling of the statue in the morning and have ample time for their drill in the afternoon."

MAYOR HILLYER: "Atlanta needs a good system of water works more than anything. My resolution does not contemplate the immediate work, however. It instructs the committee on water works to advertise for plans for a new system. I mean this: Should an engineer or any number of engineers see fit to make a survey of the route and submit a plan, we will decide whether or not we will accept the plan. Of course an engineer whose plans are rejected, will get nothing for his work. If there is a successful man he will get $1,000."

MR. L. W. SCOVILLE: "The Kimball fed and took care of during the week that the railroads were crippled by the heavy rains on an average of 475 people a day. On only one occasion were guests turned away, and that was because the people who sought to be entertained could not be furnished with the requisite number of rooms adjoining each other. For several days after the lines were opened some of the more wealthy of the guests retained their rooms, so well pleased were they with the hotel and the people of Atlanta."

MR. JACK HASTITGS: "I've been down in Birmingham, and I am reliably told that a company with $200,000 capital will soon start a morning paper there, which will be to Alabama what THE CONSTITUTION is to Georgia. It is intended to get a press like THE CONSTITUTION'S, and put up a good building and make things buzz. For myself, I don't expect to stay around this country. In about two weeks I will leave for Mexico, to take a position with Mr. H. C. Payne, who is in charge of the supply house of the Mexican National railway.

MR. WILLIAM A. GREGG: "I have just received a letter from the editor of the Manufacturing Record, of Baltimore, which paper has been sounding the sentiment of the manufacturers of the south with a view of getting their opinion as to the advisability of calling a convention of the representatives of these interests at some convenient point in the south. The editor writes me that without exception the feeling is in favor of a convention, and that Atlanta is the point that the manufacturers desire that the convention shall be held. I think that the Atlanta manufacturers should take the matter in hand. Very little work will secure the convention."

The Georgia Midland Certain to Be Built.

A responsible gentleman who talked with Mr. Huidekoper, of the Richmond and Danville road, quotes that gentleman as saying that the Georgia Midland will certainly be built, and that Mr. Jordan now had at his command enough money to carry it to the Georgia railroad and equip it for that distance. The gentleman said further, Mr. Huidekoper stated, that Athens would be the terminus of the Georgia Midland, almost beyond doubt. At the same time he expressed the opinion that the Macon and Covington would not go to Athens, but that it was being built stout at the base, but flexible at the end; that its upper terminus was for the present in the air, wabbling as it were, and that a little coax ng from any anxious town in upper Georgia would attract it.

PET POULTRY.

Meeting of the Georgia Poultry and Pet Stock Union—The National Convention.

The Georgia Poultry and Pet Stock union held an interesting meeting at the department of agriculture yesterday morning, at which there was a fine attendance of the members of the union.

President Wilson presided, with W. G. Whidby, secretary.

C. W. Wells and Mayor Hillyer were elected members of the union.

It was stated that the convention of Poultry Breeders of the United States would number about sixty delegates, and the meeting would be held here on the 15th instant, the object of which was to arrange for a national poultry show to be held here, commencing on the 15th, and closing on the 22d of January, 1887.

The following delegates were elected to the convention of the National Breeders association of the United States which meets on the 15th instant. W. B. Henderson, H. C. Underwood, W. G. Whidby, S. W. Postell, D. U. Sloan, Will Wilson, D. S. Lathrop. J. J. Toon and T. O. Hall.

The meeting elected the following members as an executive committee of the union to serve until the annual meeting to be held on the 1st Wednesday in May: D. N. Sloan, S. W. Postell, H. J. Ambrose, W. N. Sheridan and R. P. Dodge. This committee was requested to invite the poultry breeders of the state to join the union, and lend their influences in the direction of making the organization a success.

Mr. Underwood moved that any member desiring to offer the name of any one as an honorary member of the union must accompany the request with $1 dues for one year, which was agreed to.

The meeting decided that all dues were payable at annual meetings.

The meeting then adjourned.

The delegates to the convention then held a short session for the purpose of organization. W. G. Whidby was elected chairman. It was decided that the delegates meet at the agricultural office on the 15th instant at 10 o'clock, after which the committee adjourned.

The committee of arrangements held a short session immediately upon the adjournment of the meeting of the union. The following members, nearly all of whom were present, constitute the committee: Will Wilson, chairman; D. U. Sloan, G. H. Eddleman, W. G. Whidby, R. L. Jones, W. B. Henderson and T. O. Hall. A sub-committee consisting of W. B. Henderson, W. G. Whidby and Will Wilson, was appointed to call upon Governor McDaniel and Mayor Hillyer, and request them to deliver short addresses of welcome at the convention of the National association of poultry breeders on the 15th inst.

Chairman Wilson was requested to write to R. J. Fisher and learn when the delegates to the convention would arrive in Atlanta, so that the committe of arrangements could meet them at the trains. Mr. Sloan notified Chairman Wilson that as a member of the committee, desiring to do all in his power to make the meeting a success, he would state that the National hotel would entertain all delegates at a rate of $1 per day.

Ribbon badges will be provided for members of the Georgia Poultry and Pet Stock Union, and every member will be expected to do what he can to entertain the visiting delegates.

At a meeting of the sportsmen held at the department of agriculture yesterday the following commiitee was appointed to meet and co-operate with a committee from the Georgia Poultry and Pet Stock union on the 15th inst.: Colonel J. W. Renfroe, Frank R. Logan, Hugh McKelder, John S. Clarke, Captain Dave Wylie, Colonel J. H. Seals, Charles S. Martin, D. Morrison.

The committee will assemble at 9 o'clock Thursday, 15th inst., at National hotel reading room.

Just think of it, shades complete and ready to hang at 40 cents! You will find them at 46 Marietta street. J. T. White, leading wall paper and shade dealer.

From the Land of Goshen.

Duty prompts me to make known a cure of hip disease by Swift's Specific. It was the case of my little boy, and I cheerfully bear this testimony that others suffering in like manner may be relieved.

While a school boy and at play he jumped into a deep gully, bruising and straining himself considerably. He did not complain much for a week or more, but began to fail and lost the power to walk. He never left his bed for twelve months, and could not turn in bed without help. This was thought to be the cause of the disease—the fall in the gully. He suffered intensely for three years. I used all the remedies and instruments at hand to keep his leg extended. The family physician done everything that could be done to bring relief. The boy had as many as nine running sores on his leg at one time. His arms at the joints were fearfully swollen, and it looked as if every bone in his body was affected, as small pieces would come from the running sores. I thought I would have him operated on, but the physicians dissuaded me, and I gave it up. One day the little fellow was reading of wha S. S. S. had done for others, and asked me to let him try it. I did not believe anything would help his case, but consented, and purchased three bottles. After the use of the first bottle, to our surprise he began to improve. He only used the three bottles, and he is now perfectly sound and well. The only defect is that one leg is about six inches shorter than the other. He is now clerking for Mr. Newton Zellars, Goshen, Lincoln county, Ga., and weighs 135 pounds, while two years ago he only weighed 60 pounds. He can be addressed at Goshen, Ga., James E. Sprattin.

ATLANTA STILL LEADS.

A Deserved Compliment to Her Popular Merchant Tailor.

Atlanta's popular merchant tailor, Jerry Lynch, has received a very flattering notice in the American Fashion Review, published by the John J. Mitchell company, New York.

Mr. Lynch sent two suits of clothes to the great exhibition at New York, and not a firm received a more complimentary notice than he, notwithstandin g the fact that goods were exhibited by leading firms of New York, Chicago, Norwich, Conn., Philadeldhia, Minneapolis, Boston, Cincinnati, Syracuse, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and other cities in this country, besides all the leading houses of London, Berlin, Vienna and Paris. The exhibition was the most extensive and representative ever given in this country. Merchant tailoring treads closely upon the heels of art and science, and many years' study is necessary to perfect one in it. The fact of Mr. Lynch having ranked in the very front at the exposition shows that he is thoroughly up in the business. He was the only tailor in the south who had the nerve to face the music and put his work against that of the widest known importers in the world.

AN ART EXHIBITION.

The Exhibition of the Work of the Pupils of Mr. Horace Bradley.

The exhibition of work by the pupils of Mr. Horace Bradley, which was open to the public Friday and Saturday afternoon, has attracted considerable attention, and was inspected by many prominent citizens.

The specimens presented were taken from a class of fifteen, and represented the work done during the past six months. The pupils come not only from the city and parts of the state, but from adjoining states as well. The collection of charcoal drawing from plaster casts were very creditable—showing the beginning of the course in drawing and the benefits derived therefrom.

The special feature of the exhibition was the sketch class work done in charcoal, pencil, and pen and ink. These characteristic little sketches, made direct from life of different models, shows that the pupils have been greatly benefitted in studying the proportions of the figures and the apt and quick method of working from nature. In this class were pen and ink sketches of Miss Mai Waring, Mrs. A. G. Chisolm, Miss Cornelia Orr as being worthy of special notice; two charcoal heads by Miss L. DeGive; pencil sketches by Miss Douglass and Miss Bessie Panchen, and some clever water colors by Mrs. Ida M. Bass, of Nashville, Tenn.

Among the still-life studies in oil, Miss Mai Waring shows considerable ability in the group of ginger jar, peacock feathers and gilt-edged book, the effect of light and shadow being particularly good. The painting of an old blue pitcher, cup and saucer, etc., by Miss Cornelia Orr also attracted attention. In the same department work by Miss Amelia Smith, Miss Peytona Douglass, Miss DeGive should be mentioned.

Three nicely painted flower pieces were shown by Mrs. A. G. Chisolm, and a group of Siberian crab apples, by the same lady, were much admired.

There was quite a nice collection of crayon portraits (which made a good showing) by Miss Holifield, of Alabama, Miss Orr, Master John Maddox, Miss Amelia Smith, Miss Watson, Miss Douglas, James Thomason, and others.

In addition to the regular class-work, charcoal studies made at home, by Miss Waring, and the painting, by Miss Chisolm, should be cited as instances where the pupils have ability to work alone. The course of instruction given by Mr. Bradley has a strong tendency towards making the pupil work independently, and the collection, taken as a whole, shows what material there is among our home pupils; all the studies indicate strong, artistic feeling, and a vigorous and forcible execution.

THE NORMAL CLASS.

An Interesting Meeting of the Public School Teachers.

At nine o'clock yesterday morning the teachers of the public schools of Atlanta met in normal class in the Girls' High school' Professor Slaton presiding. Messrs. Mayer, Blanchard, Lowry and Moran, members of the board of education, were present.

Professor Slaton read an interesting article concerning the history of education, comparing the succeeding epochs which led to the present standard.

Miss Minnie Irwin read most gracefully a historical paper on "Three English Queens," the reigns of Elizabeth, Anne and Victoria furnishing the material. The paper was well received.

Professor Bass read a paper on the necessity of school discipline, avowing himself an advocate of the birch well laid on.

The members of the board of education who were present followed in some remarks which were suggested by the papers read.

As the teachers filed out they were handed their checks for March. This necessitated a procession to Lowry's bank, where the change was speedily made.

The Gate City Stone Filter.

The Gate City stone filter is now manufactured in New York city, and is having the most remarkable success of the period. This is no wonder, for the filter is one of the most remarkable inventions of this age. And yet it can hardly be called an invention—it is a discovery, for the basis of the whole thing is the common sense use of a stone that filters water to perfection. Nothing can surpass the Gate City stone filter, and its success is deserved.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

A Word to the Ladies of Atlanta and Vicinity.

In THE CONSTITUTION today nothing handsomer appears than the advertisement of D. H. Dougherty & Co. They make a general review of their spring attractions, and it is safe to say no finer showing was ever made in the south. The people all know Dougherty & Co., and when they make an announcement, it is accepted simply as a matter of fact. There is nothing like confidence, and as they say elsewhere, an "ounce of confidence is worth a pound of distrust." The ladies of Atlanta will find an unusually fine display at Dougherty's this week, or, as Mr. Dougherty said to THE CONSTITUTION, "Something that will prove a blessing and a joy."

Atlanta, February 9, 1886.—W. J. McDonald, 27½ North Broad street: Dear Sir—It gives us pleasure to testify to the merits of your Roof Paint. The roof of our foundry was in a very bad condition, and during the heavy rains last fall our men were obliged to quit work on account of the leaks. In fact, it was so bad that the manufacturers of other roof paints refused to have anything to do with it, and advised us to put on another roof. But we were advised to try your paint, and we are glad we did, for our roof now is just as tight as new, and it has not leaked one drop in all the heavy rains we have had. And it gives us pleasure to add our testimonial as to the excellent merits of your Roof Paint. We are very truly yours,

Houston, Texas, March 4, 1886.—Messrs. Smith, Pirkle & Co.—Gentlemen: This is to certify that the W. Jay McDonald Fire and Water Proof Cement Paint, that you applied to the roof of my dwelling, No. 121 Congress street, city of Houston, composed of shingles and tin of thirty years' standing, and which has leaked badly, has stood the past late heavy rains; and, to my astonishment, said roof has not leaked a drop. I am well pleased with the work, and recommend those gentlemen, with their Fire and Water Proof Paint, to all desiring work done in their line, beleiving it to be all they claim for it. Nearly a Tragedy.

From the Pensacola Gazette.

Mr. Daniel Bandmann, accompanied by Miss Ida Lewis and two other ladies of his troupe, went out on the bay yesterday, in a small boat, for the purpose of enjoying a sail. By some means, when a considerable distance from the wharf, Miss Lewis fell overboard and would doubtless have been drowned had it not been for the nerve and skill of Mr. Bandmann, who plunged into the water, and bringing her to the surface, managed to keep both heads above water until assistance came from a crew of stevedores on their way home.

Miss Lewis was taken to Dr. Moffat's office, where the doctor gave her stimulants, and she soon recovered sufficiently to be taken to the hotel.

Mr. Bandmann's gallantry has evoked much favorable comment, and it is hoped Miss Lewis will suffer no serious consequences.

The Old Soldiers.

The Ladies' Memorial association solicits the old soldiers of the late war between the states to participate in the exercises on 26th instant. It is greatly desired by them that an interest akin to that of past years should be awakened in the breast of the living, to keep in remembrance the noble deeds and gracious sacrifices of the living of our brothers for the right. Shall we so early forget them? God forbid! A regiment of old soldiers who are not ashamed of their past connection with those whose memories we cherish will be formed, wearing a badge of honor to designate him as one of the participants. Soldiers, fall into line.

Now is the time to invest money in the manutacture of the W. Jay McDonald Combined Fire and Water Proof Cement Roof Paint business, patented May, 1882, and is today the grandest opening for a large business on a little capital that the world affords. I want a copartner in each state or twenty counties. I will sell low, give long time on nearly all to the right parties. I want to reserve an interest, one-quarter at least. I mean business, and I can prove by my own success, without a dollar to begin with, that it is the grandest, best paying business in the states, and that it is still growing and the demand increasing. Also, that to manufacture and be able to sell, on thirty and sixty days' time, would thrible the business in a short while. See me at my office this week, 27½ North Broad street, Atlanta. W. GHOULS AND GOLD.

A WONDERFUL ADVENTURE WITH AN ODD CONCLUSION.

Two Young Soldiers of Courage—An Exciting and Mysterious Episode During the War of the Rebellion—A Ride Through the Cumberland Valley.

[Copyrighted by S. S. McClure.]

I was one of the actors in an exciting and rather mysterious episode during the war of the rebellion, the details of which will never be known unless I record them here.

It will make no difference to the reader what position I held during the war or in what capacity I acted. Suffice it to say that I was honorably employed, and in pursuit of my duties frequently found myself at the front and in places of great danger.

I well remember one night that I was riding up through the Cumberland valley toward the headquarters of the union army. It was the memorable time of the battle of Antietam. The sound of cannonading had been heard all day, and I was on my way through debatable ground to the scene of conflict. With me was a young, bright and handsome officer, engaged on special service. Railway travel had, of course, been stopped, and we were traveling in my own Germantown wagon behind my fleet and trusty horse.

It was lonely traveling as the night wore on. The country bore the desolate appearance which war alone can give. Multitudes of farm houses and cottages were apparently deserted by their occupants. Thick darkness and dreadful silence lay upon the face of nature. The penetrating dampness of night caused us to settle further down into our wrappings, while now and then a sudden lurch of our carriage thoroughly aroused us from any tendency to sleep.

Our revolvers were ready for service, and our eyes were strained and weary from peering into the darkness to guard against surprise from desperate marauders. There was every incentive to keep on the alert, and we fully realized this; but about 3 o'clock a. m. tired nature got the upper hand, and without in the least intending it, we were both sleeping in the most disgracefully careless fashion, while our faithful steed jogged carefully onward.

How long we slept thus we never knew; but suddenly the motion of the carriage ceased, and the very stillness aroused us. In an instant our revolvers were out, for we thought it more than probable that some lurking highwaymen had stopped the horse for the purpose of robbery. On investigation, however, we found that the horse had turned into a friendly barnyard and was rubbing his nose against the stable door. Close by we could discern the outlines of the farmhouse, but neither light nor sign of life was visible about it.

We decided to alight and remain in the house till dawn should enable us to resume our journey more safely. It was but the work of a moment to pry open the stable door and install the horse within, and then we sought the house, forced open the windows, and climbed in. The furniture was there, except such articles as could be easily carried away, and it was evident that the occupants had fled panic-stricken.

We were just composing ourselves for a rest when we heard the rattling wheels of a vehicle without, and hastened to take a guarded observation through the latticed shutters. The vehicle whirled up to the house, and two women and one man quickly alighted and lifted out several bundles. The covered wagon then wheeled about and was driven rapidly away.

Our astonishment was heightened when the man gave three distinct raps upon a flat cellar door next to the house, and it was immediately opened from within. A word was quietly spoken, the trio with their packages disappeared, and the door closed behind them.

Here was a mystery, which took our breath away. If the party were honest inhabitants of the premises, why did they not enter by the house door? How had we discovered no signs of life when we entered, when there were persons concealed there at that very time?

We pondered over these questions for a while without a word. We were not frightened, but thoroughly alive to the situation. We nudged each other to express our tacit determination to solve the mystery.

We kept perfectly quiet for a time, but there were no sounds in the house. It was as if the earth had opened and swallowed up those nocturnal visitors. This puzzled us a little, for even if the strangers were in the cellar, their voices and movements should have been audible in the second floor room where we were.

"Jack, is your revolver ready?" whispered my companion.

"Yes," I replied.

"We must see what this means."

I pressed his arm to indicate assent, and placed my fingers on his lips. Listeners might be close to us at that very moment.

No time was to be lost. Daylight would not only render futile our efforts to unravel the mystery, but might place our own lives or safety in jeopardy.

Taking off our shoes we crept along toward the cellar. Every crack in the worn staircase made our blood run cold with apprehension, but at length we reached and carefully opened the cellar door. To our great surprise, all was darkness and silence there. We groped our way down with revolvers ready for instant service. After listening intently awhile I hazarded the lighting of a match, expecting nothing less than that it would precipitate a deperate encounter. No one was there. The match went out, and we were in total darkness again.

In silence we commenced a careful exploration, feeling our way inch by inch, to discover the secret door or partition which must be there somewhere, but we could detect no break in the continuity of the wall. At length, after listening intently, we were satisfied that we heard movements near the wall where we supposed the cellar door to be; at the same time I discovered a crevice in the jagged wall extending perpendicularly from floor to ceiling. Searching again, we found a similar crevice parallel with the other, about three feet away. This was evidently the doorway which had been filled up to match the wall as nearly as possible. Eureka! Here was progress, but how to utilize it was the next question. The chinks were all carefully filled up so that nothing could be seen or heard through them. Harold placed his foot in my hand, and I raised him up so that he could see if there were any forgotten chinks above.

Leaning heavily against the wall we suddenly felt it give way, and we were precipitated into the very place we had been looking for.

At the same instant a shriek arose, followed by the moaning of a woman. A light was extinguished and there was a sound of hurrying feet, and then all was still.

Fortunately we were uninjured by our fall, nor did we for an instant lose our presence of mind. Springing to our feet, we discharged our revolvers in quick succession, and the flashes of light from them showed us that there was no enemy to contend with.

It was a strange looking den, and evidently its habitues had provided a way of escape in time of danger, for at the end of the small, square cellar there was an open passageway through which they had fled.

Harold, with admirable quickness, found the stairway leading to the door above, and threw it open. This gave some light within, and enabled him to detect any movement without. It was important for us to know whether they were really gone, or were still lurking in the subteranean passage.

"Confound the villians!" shouted he; "they are off like the wind, and with our horse and wagon, too. No use to follow them," he continued, as I sprang up the stairs. "They are lost in the darkness already. "Come back, and let us explore the den."

"Well, I suppose it is the only thing to be done; but I hate to think of losing Brutus and—"

"Hush! What was that?" interrupted Harold.

A groan came from below, which very seriously disturbed our equanimity.

Striking a match and making a torch of a newspaper I had in my pocket, I said: "Follow me," and jumped down into the cellar. Harold followed, and we stood ready to do battle. But there was no battle to be fought. Almost at our very feet lay a young woman in a swoon, and from her position we judged that she had been struck by the falling wall, and left behind by the others in their scramble to escape. "You guard the woman while I explore this passageway. We must know we are safe from attack before anything else, though I think there is no one else here," and suiting the action to the word, Harold seized the torch and disappeared. In a few moments he appeared at the door above, and exclaimed:

"All right. The passage leads to the stable and is clear. Now for quick work, or the scoundrels will be back with reinforcements."

"First let us carry this woman up into the house, where we can have a little light," said I.

We lifted her unconscious form and carefully carried her into a room above, where water soon revived her; but she only opened her eyes to close them again wearily.

She was a woman of remarkable beauty. To find such a woman with a classical, refined face and superb form in a place like this, and in such company, was, to say the least, exceedingly strange.

But we had no time to waste in speculation, and rummaging the closets until we discovered candles enough for our purpose, we hastily returned to the underground apartment to explore further.

Imagine our astonishment when, overturning a long bench that stood against the wall, our eyes were dazzled by the sight of a mass of glittering jewels in sufficient quantity to be measured by the bushel. It was in a large box and it comprised watches, rings, chains, lockets and every description of finely wrought gold ornaments. All had apparently been in use, and the most of them were valuable. Many were set with precious stones. At the bottom of the box our delighted eyes rested upon gold coin to the amount of several hundred dollars. This, without compunction, we secured about our persons, so that, come what might, we would be provided with the sinews of war. It was clear that this was the plunder of persons who had robbed the dead and dying on the battlefield or pilfered from the living in the camps of the armies.

There was thousands of dollars' worth of booty here, but it was out of our power to remove it to a place of safety. After a moment's consultation we decided to bury the treasure in an unfrequented spot near by and risk its remaining undisturbed until we should have a better opportunity to remove it. It was not yet daylight, though so much had been compressed into the last hour that it seemed an age to us, and we found an old shovel and pick in the barn with which we prepared a place and deposited the box without being interrupted.

We made a careful memorandum of the distance and direction from the house to the spot, and then hurried into the house, where we joined our fair prisoner, conscious but helpless. She was a beautiful creature, whom to see once was to remember forever. Her face wore a startled though resolute look.

"Who are you and how came I here?" she demanded.

"We found you in the cellar," I replied, "and would like very much to know who you are and how you came there."

"Madame," said Harold, trying to smooth over my brusqeness, "we are law-abiding and honorable men and you are perfectly safe with us, but we wish to know who were with you in the cellar and why they were there. They have fled, leaving everything behind them. Their plunder has been removed to a place of safety."

"Thank heaven for that! I shall rest better now," she exclaimed fervently. "But, gentlemen, if you value your lives, get away from this place without a moment's delay. They will be back with a strong party, and if you are here nothing will save you. Go!" she continued vehemently. "I have seen others die at their hands; I implore you to escape."

"But," said Harold, "we certainly cannot go and leave you here unprotected."

"Do not mind me, I pray you; but go," she entreated. "Come back if you can, with twenty men. You cannot help me now, and every moment you linger is at the risk of your lives. Run, run, until you are safe with friends. I have passed through a thousand deaths already. Don't mind me!"

There was sincerity in the woman's face, and undoubtedly her view of the situation was the correct one. The sympathetic side of Harold's nature, however, was deeply wrought upon by her apparent heroic self-sacrifice. He drew me aside and said:

"You may go, but leave me here."

"Don't be a fool, Harold," I impatiently replied. Have you forgotten your duty as an officer? Can't you see that she may be playing upon your sympathies for the purpose of entrapping you?"

"I'll stake my reputation on that!" he interrupted.

"No, no," I rejoined, "don't be too quick to stake your reputation. Besides, if you stayed here you couldn't be of any service to her, and you certainly would be at the mercy of a gang of cut throats. If you really want to serve the woman she has pointed out the only way to do it. Get away at once and gather a party to return with the certainty of saving her and the treasure."

"Perhaps you are right," said he, thoughtfully.

"Now let us be off," continued I, without giving his decision time to cool. Then turning to the woman, I said, kindly: "We have decided to do as you suggest."

"Oh, thank you, sir," said she, beaming on me most eloquently with her beautiful eyes.

After setting a jug of water at her side we turned to go, and, throwing open the door, were confronted with the muzzle of a rifle and a stern command to "halt!"

Men accustomed to prompt action, who have been tutored in the school of danger, can grasp the elements of a critical situation with a lightning-like rapidity, which to other minds would be inconceivable. In the twinkling of an eye we saw (1) that this was a "Johnny Reb;" (2) that the country to the east of us appeared to be clear; (3) that there was thus a fighting chance to escape. In another instant his gun barrel was knocked upward and a blow was planted between his eyes, which caused him to lose all interest in subsequent proceedings. And the best of it was that it was a noiseless operation calculated to raise no alarm.

Our advantages of wind and limb now came admirably into play. The annals of pedestrianism must forever remain incomplete, because circumstances over which we had no control made it inconvenient for us to keep a record of our running time on that occasion. We sought the most difficult and hidden course, and made considerable headway before pursuit commenced.

It will seem incredible to you, reader, but not nearly so incredible as it seemed to us that, as we ran through a deep wood, a turn brought us face to face with my own horse and wagon. By their side on the ground sat a villainous-looking man. We were taking all risks then; nothing venture, nothing win. I sent a bullet into the fellow, he rolled in the dust and a moment later we were being borne over that narrow wagon track by the fleetest horse in the valley. We escaped.

The shifting scenes of the war and our duties elsewhere made it impossible for us to fulfill our promise to the beautiful woman, but it was not many days before me went over the grounds again. The farmhouse and barn were in ruins, by whom destroyed or under what circumstances we never learned.

Harold and I at the first opportunity covertly visited the hiding place of our buried treasure. The box was there, but its golden contents were gone. Wrapped up carefully [illegible] lay a photograph of the beautiful unk[illegible] On the back of it was written in pencil in [illegible] feminine hand: "I shall never forg[illegible] kindness. God bless you."

The war over, I settled down to the practice of my profession in a western city. Harold and I had long before drifted apart, and I knew nothing of his whereabouts.

One morning in 1870 I received a large white envelope postmarked Paris. It contained a rather worn photograph, which I instantly recognized as that of the beautiful woman of this story. Beneath the picture was written the name "Louise Farquier," and on the back were faintly visible the words, "I shall never forget your kindness. God bless you!"

I was so much absorbed in thinking of this that it was some time before I looked at the other contents of the envelope. When I did so I discovered a neat, plain wedding announcement which astounded me. It was that of Harold Mayne to Louise Farquier. On the fly-leaf was written:

Jack: She is the noblest woman alive.

HAROLD.

I have never seen either of thom since, nor have I ever unraveled the mystery of that night, though of one thing I am sure, that Louise Farquier was as innocent as she was lovely, or she never could have become the wife of Harold Wayne.

W. CHANNING NEVIN.

SHOUTING SALVATIONISTS.

They Follow the Two Sams and Attack Chicago Strongholds of Sin.

From the Chicago Herald.

Two hundred men wearing red jerseys and blue caps with patent leather visors and nearly two score women in black dresses and shaker bonnets marched into the main entrance of the Chicago avenue church at eight o'clock last evening. They were blood-washed warriors—soldiers in the Salvation army—and they sang, rattled tambourines and spanked their hands as they marched. A pale-faced man, with white hair, walked in advance of the procession. An American flag was wrapped around his neck. In his right hand he held the emblem of the army—a blue and red flag with a yellow center. The staff was surmounted by a golden eagle with outstretched wings and a capacious mouth. The warriors marched down the left aisle of the church and then upon the platform, where several battle songs, set to rollicking music, were sung to the accompaniment of a dozen chattering tambourines. At 8:15 the aged color-bearer dropped his banner and a young woman with a union jack tied around her neck ran her fingers over the six strings of a guitar and in a sweet, birdlike voice sang "When We Ride Up in the Chariot in the Morn." Before she had finished the third verse Marshal Barrington Booth, of Australia, son of the famous general of the salvation army, and Commissioner Frank Smith, commanding the forces in the United States, ran up the steps of the platform amid a hurricane of hallelujahs and amens from the soldiers. The two chieftains fell upon their knees near the Bible stand and prayed aloud. During the supplication amens and hallelujahs chased each other around the auditorium and darted into the balcony. Marshal Booth then sat upon a stool and played a piano as he sang "Jesus, We'll Carry You Through." When he arose from the instrument Commissioner Smith read the twenty-third psalm. When he reached the line, "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures," the reader paused a moment and then said: "The devil makes you lie down in the gutter, but God makes you lie down in green pastures among the hallelujah buttercups and daisies."

After Commander Smith had finished reading Marshal Booth called for testimonies. The pale-faced man with the flag stood up and in a trembling voice declared that, although he had been a drunkard fifty years, he had been saved by the Salvation army. A hymn, set to the music of "Tink! Tink! That's the Way the Bell Goes," was then sung, after which a man with gray mustache and imperial informed the fifteen hundred people present that he had been a very bad man in his day. He said that he had been trained for a prize-fighter by Heenan; that he had run for alderman and county commissioner, and that he was intimately associated with Paddy Ryan. "But, glory to God," he cried, as his right hand hit the banner with the yellow center, "the salvation army has made my home a paradise and saved me from hell." Captain Dean, who, in an evil hour many years ago attempted to drown his wife in the canal and fed his family on liver in order that he might have money to buy whisky, told how the salvation army had brought him to the feet of Jesus.

Marshal Booth then stepped forward and spoke at great length on the progress of the work in Australia. He said that he could not tell why people became frightened when they saw a salvation soldier. The warriors were preaching the doctrine of Wesley and Calvin, and surely there was nothing in that fact to alarm anybody. He declared that the salvation army was the implacable foe of strong drink and tobacco. His soldiers were not satisfied with chopping off the branches, but they brought the sharp edge of the gospel ax to bear on the roots of sin. The salvation soldiers were sweeping on with a mighty hand, dipped in the blood of Jesus Christ, and he declared that they would continue to sweep on until sin was swept off the face of the earth. The story that the salvation army was going down was false. It was going up. He represented 347 officers in the colonies, seating accommodation for 156,000 people, and a newspaper with a circulation of 325,000. He was also glad to say that he represented 177 stations and 199 outposts, and that his work in the colonies had been indorsed by all the governors, premiers and most of the chief secretaries. To show the nature of the work the army was performing in Australia Mr. Booth said that 2,532 criminals had been met at the gates of the colonial prisons and cared for by the prison brigades. Of this number all had secured employment through the agency of the army. Thirty per cent were doing extraordinarily well, and 70 per cent were remaining firm. The female rescue brigades had walked through the streets during the devil's noonday rescuing fallen women from dens of vice. One thousand and three hundred poor creatures had been cared for or returned to their parents. The drunkards' brigades had rescued 4,000 men, 500 of whom were confirmed and chronic drinkers. A corps had been formed in New South Wales with a Chinese captain and seven or eight Chinese soldiers. "It would make tears start from your eyes," said the marshal, "were you to hear this little band of Chinamen singing:

'We ying you ylang
Tin Lung Bung Twang.'"

The work in the United States was described as being phenomenal. One hundred and sixty-five stations and thirty outposts had been organized within two years, and the number of soldiers actively engaged was estimated at 10,000. In conclusion Mr. Booth said that the flag of the salvation army waved in thirteen countries, and that the officers wearing the blue and the red spoke sixteen different languages.

Then and Now.

BY MAUD ANNULET ANDREWS.

Last year, perhaps, I might have penned
  An ode to meditative cows;
  Or sheep that in the meadows browse,
And through the spring-tide gloaming wend

Their homeward way. Or told of rills
  That through the grasses crept along,
  And sang a light, love-freighted song
Unto the flaunting daffodils.

Of apple blooms I might have gushed,
  And cherry trees in snowy gowns,
  Of oaks that changed their russet browns,
And peach trees pink that bloomed and blushed.

Indeed, of love I might have sung—
  A subject unto all quite new—
  Or told of roses wet with dew,
That o'er the stone wall lightly swung.

But time doth many changes bring;
  Last spring pain was unknown to me,
  I sailed upon a healthful sea,
Nor conned the word called suffering.

And thus this want of knowledge might
  Have made me publish gushing lays;
  I might have sought for public praise,
Regardless quite of wrong or right.

But now I've lived so long with pain.
  And know it well I could not find
  The strength to pain my fellow kind,
So, from spring poems I refrain.

No one has ever been disappointed in using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for a cold.

Why Mr. Cleveland Will Not Marry.

From the Cleveland Leader.

Old friends of Cleveland whisper emphatically that the president will never marry. They say that the only woman that the president ever really loved has been in her grave for more than twenty-five years. He met her, they say, when he was a school teacher in a little town of New York, when the down had just begun to come upon his lip, and she was sweet sixteen. They loved, but were too poor to marry. Cleveland had decided to go west to make a fortune, when his sweetheart became sick and, within a few days, died. James Buchanan's love jilted him when he was a young man, and he never courted another. Filmore had much the same experience of Cleveland, in that he was too poor to marry when he first fell in love. He went off and spent three years at Buffalo without seeing his sweetheart, because he was too poor to pay the travelling expenses of 150 miles which lay between them.

Born With the Town.

LUMBERTON, N. C., April 9.—This place was founded in 1786. The same year Moses Wood, colored, was born here. He has just died at the age of one hundred.

According to Hoyle.

A gentleman who is fond of whist says that he never enjoyed a rubber so much as when he had rheumatism, and his wife cured it by rubbing him with St. Jacobs Oil. Then when he had a severe cough a few doses of Red Star Cough Cure effected a complete cure.

DE-LEC-TA-LAVE.

Cleanliness is Next to Godliness.

USE DELECTALAVE!

And Be Clean.

Dr. Calhoun Recommends Delectalave to the Public.

Dr. C. T. Brockett—My Dear Sir: It affords me pleasure, after a careful examination of the formula of your Delectalave, to bear testimony to its value, and to state that its curative qualities are beyond question. I regard it as the name implies a delightful wash, and can confidently recommend it to the public. Yours truly,

A. W. CALHOUN, M D.

Fully Up to What It Claims.

ATLANTA, Ga., October 20, 1885.—Having tested Brockett's Delectalave, both personally and in my family, I am pleased to be able to say that it has come fully up to the purpose for which it is recommended. It combines as a mouth or tooth wash pleasantness and efficiency. There is nothing in the ingredients (which have been submitted to me by Dr. Brockett) calculated in the remotest degree to prove injurious to the teeth. On the contrary, I think it would prove an excellent adjuvant in the treatment of ulcerations, aphthous exudations, etc., about the mouth, throat and fauces.

CHARLES PINCKNEY, M. D.

An Agreeable Antiseptic Dentifrice.

ATLANTA, Ga., October 15, 1885.—My knowledge of the composition of Delectalave, manufactured by C. T. Brockett, D. D. S., of this city, and a practical acquaintance of its use, enables me to bear cheerful testimony to its entire freedom from injurious effects upon the teeth, and to its positive value as an agreeable, cleansing, antiseptic dentifrice.

JAMES B. BAIRD, M. D.

Used With Great Satisfaction.

ATLANTA, January 10, 1886.—I have used with great satisfaction Brockett's mouth wash, Delectalave, and think it an article with great range of effect and withal very pleasant to the taste.

To Dr. Brockett. GEORGE W. HARRIS, D. D. S.

Recommended for All It Claims.

ATLANTA, Ga., September 16, 1885.—Dr. C. T. Brockett, Atlanta, Ga.—My Dear Sir: I take pleasure in stating to you that I have examined the formula of your Delectalave or mouth wash, and that I regard it a most excellent dentifrice, and from personal experience in its use I can confidently recommend it for all that it claims.

V. H. TALIAFERRO, M. D.

A Pleasant, Healthy and Stimulating Mouth Wash.

Dr. C. T. Brockett—Dear Sir: I have used Delectalave for some time, and can truly testify to its efficacy. There is nothing in it composition that is the least injurious to the teeth or gums. On the contrary, it is a pleasant, healthy and stimulating mouth wash.

Atlanta, Ga. W. S. ELKIN, M. D.

Free from Objectionable Chemicals.

ATLANTA, Ga., December 12, 1885.—Dear Dr. Brockett: Having examined and used your admirable dentifrice, I take pleasure in testifying to its excellence. Being free from the objectionable chemicals not unfrequently found in many preparations upon the market, it may be used daily without fear of those irritating and injurious effects upon the teeth and gums incident to the class mentioned. It is not only a most agreeable preparation, but unites with its cleansing effects upon the teeth the intrinsic merits of a good mouth wash. Yours very truly,

JOHN C. OLMSTEAD, M. D.

I Give It My Unqualified Indorsement.

ATLANTA, Ga. January 3, 1886.—Dr. C. T. Brockett—My Dear Sir: After a thorough examination of your formula for Delectalave, I am satisfied it will do all you claim for it. I regard it as a most delightful cleansing wash, and for the mouth and teeth its antiseptic qualities must recommend it to the public. I therefore take pleasure in testifying to its curative qualities, and give it my unqualified indorsement.

N. O. HARRIS, M. D.

Most Efficient in Preventing Decay.

ATLANTA, Ga., October 16, 1885.—I have carefully examined the formula for the preparation known as Delectalaev, originated by Dr. C. T. Brockett, and find it to be composed of ingredients well known as the most efficient in preventing decomposition and decay, and possessing qualities that act most beneficially upon the mucous membrane of the mouth and gums. There is nothing in the preparation that could in any way prove harmful to the most delicate structures. The combination produces an article far surpassing in elegance any tooth wash that has come under my notice, and having personally used Delectalave, I feel sure that any one who once experiences its delightful effects will ever continue its constant use. I don't hesitate to give it my emphatic and unqualified endorsement, and to recommend it confidently to those seeking an elegant, pleasant and refreshing tooth wash. Respectfully,

WM. PERRIN NICOLSON, M. D.

WHAT IT WILL DO AND HOW IT IS DONE!

A Few Important Questions Asked and Answered:

The appended certificates of some of the leading Physicians and Dentists of Atlanta who have carefully examined the formula for Delectalave and have tested its value will be a sufficient guarantee for the correctness of the answers to the following questions about the use of Delectalave:

1st. What will whiten my teeth? Delectalave.
2nd. What will cleanse my mouth? Delectalave.
3rd. What will harden and beautify my gums? Delectalave.
4th. What will purify my breath? Delectalave.
5th. What will aid me in preserving my teeth? Delectalave.
6th. What will prevent the formation of tartar? Delectalave.
7th. What will neutralize any acidity of the saliva? Delectalave.
8th. What will cure tender and bleeding gums? Delectalave.

How does Delectalave perform these wonders, above mentioned?

1st. Delectalave whitens teeth by thoroughly cleansing them, and not by any action upon the tooth structure, as that would injure the enamel.
2nd. Delectalave will cleanse the mouth by thoroughly washing it. Being saponaceous and of such a penetrating character as to enter all the interstices between the teeth and destroy any particles of food or other extraneous matter which would by fermentation pollute the secretions and render the mouth unclean and unhealthy.
3rd. Delectalave will harden the gums by its astringent qualities and by stimulating the mucous membrane to a healthy action.
4th. Delectaleve will purify the breath by destroying all foreign matter which if allowed to remain in the mouth would ferment and generate noxious gasses, also, by imparting its fragrance to the breath.
5th. Delectalave will prevent decay. 1st. By thoroughly cleansing the teeth. 2nd. By its antiseptic qualities. 3rd. By its stimulating effect upon the mucous membrane.
6th. Delectalave will prevent the formation of tartar by dissolving and removing such deposits as would form tartar if allowed to remain.
7th. Delectalave will neutralize acid secretions by its alkalin reaction.
8th. Delectalave will cure tender and bleeding gums, by stimulating the mucous membrane by its astringent qualities.

We claim that Delectalave is the best Dentifrice and Mouth Wash ever offered to the American people. We go further, and prove what we assert, by certificates such as were never before seen in the public prints. We have no doubting doctor, nor do we have a secret formula. But we have a formula which we are not afraid to show to any reputable physician or dentist who desires to see it, and we have a preparation which no doctor would refuse to indorse after once seeing our formula. It is the result of twelve years of experiment, and has been thoroughly tested before it was offered to the public.

Try one bottle, and you will be so much pleased that you will continue its use.

Teeth of pearl-like whiteness,
Gums of ruby hue,
Breath with fragrance ladened,
This Delectalave will do.

Cleanlinessis Next to Godliness.

Use Delectalave and be Clean.

Cured Dr. Lipscomb's Mouth and Gums.

WEE WILLIE COTTAGE, Athens, Ga., March 8, 1886.—Dear Dr. Brockett: For two weeks before I began using your "Delectalave," I had been suffering a good deal from my gums, tongue and roof of my mouth, a thing unusual with me. I tried several remedies but with no avail. Then I resorted to your new preparation and found speedy relief. The state of my throat was also improved. Judging by my own experience, I think this mouth wash very valuable, and I most heartily and confidentially commend it to public attention and and general use. I beg to remain most truly yours,

ANDREW A. LIPSCOMB, D. D.

Sore Mouth of Three Years' Standing Cured in Six Days.

To Dr. C. T. Brockett: I have suffered for three years with a sore mouth and tongue, and had began to fear it was malignant. Dr. Brockett gave me a bottle of his Delectalave six days ago, and I have used it five days and my mouth is now well. I do not hesitate to advise the use of it for all the purposes for which it is recommended.

Pleasant Toilet and Curative Wash.

From R. A. Holliday, publisher of the Southern Dental Journal: Atlanta Dental Depot, ATLANTA, Ga., March 13, 1886. Dr. C. T. Brockett: Dear Sir—After examning the formula of Delectalave, I can recommend it as a pleasant toilet and curative wash. It does not contain anything injurious to the teeth. Respectfully, R. A. HOLLIDAY, D. D. S.

Nothing Injurious to the Teeth.

ATLANTA, Ga., December 10, 1885. Having been made acquainted with the ingredients of Brockett's Delectalave, I know it does not contain anything injurious to the teeth. I have also used it, and must say it is well named, being indeed a delightful wash.

J. S. TODD, M. D.

Prefers It to Any Other Dentifrice.

To Dr. Brockett: After a careful examination o the formula of Brockett's Delectalave, I can without hesitation recommend it, feeling assured that it contains nothing but what is beneficial to the teeth and gums, and I prefer it to any other dentifrice I have ever seen.

Yours truly, JAS. F. ALEXANDER, M. D.

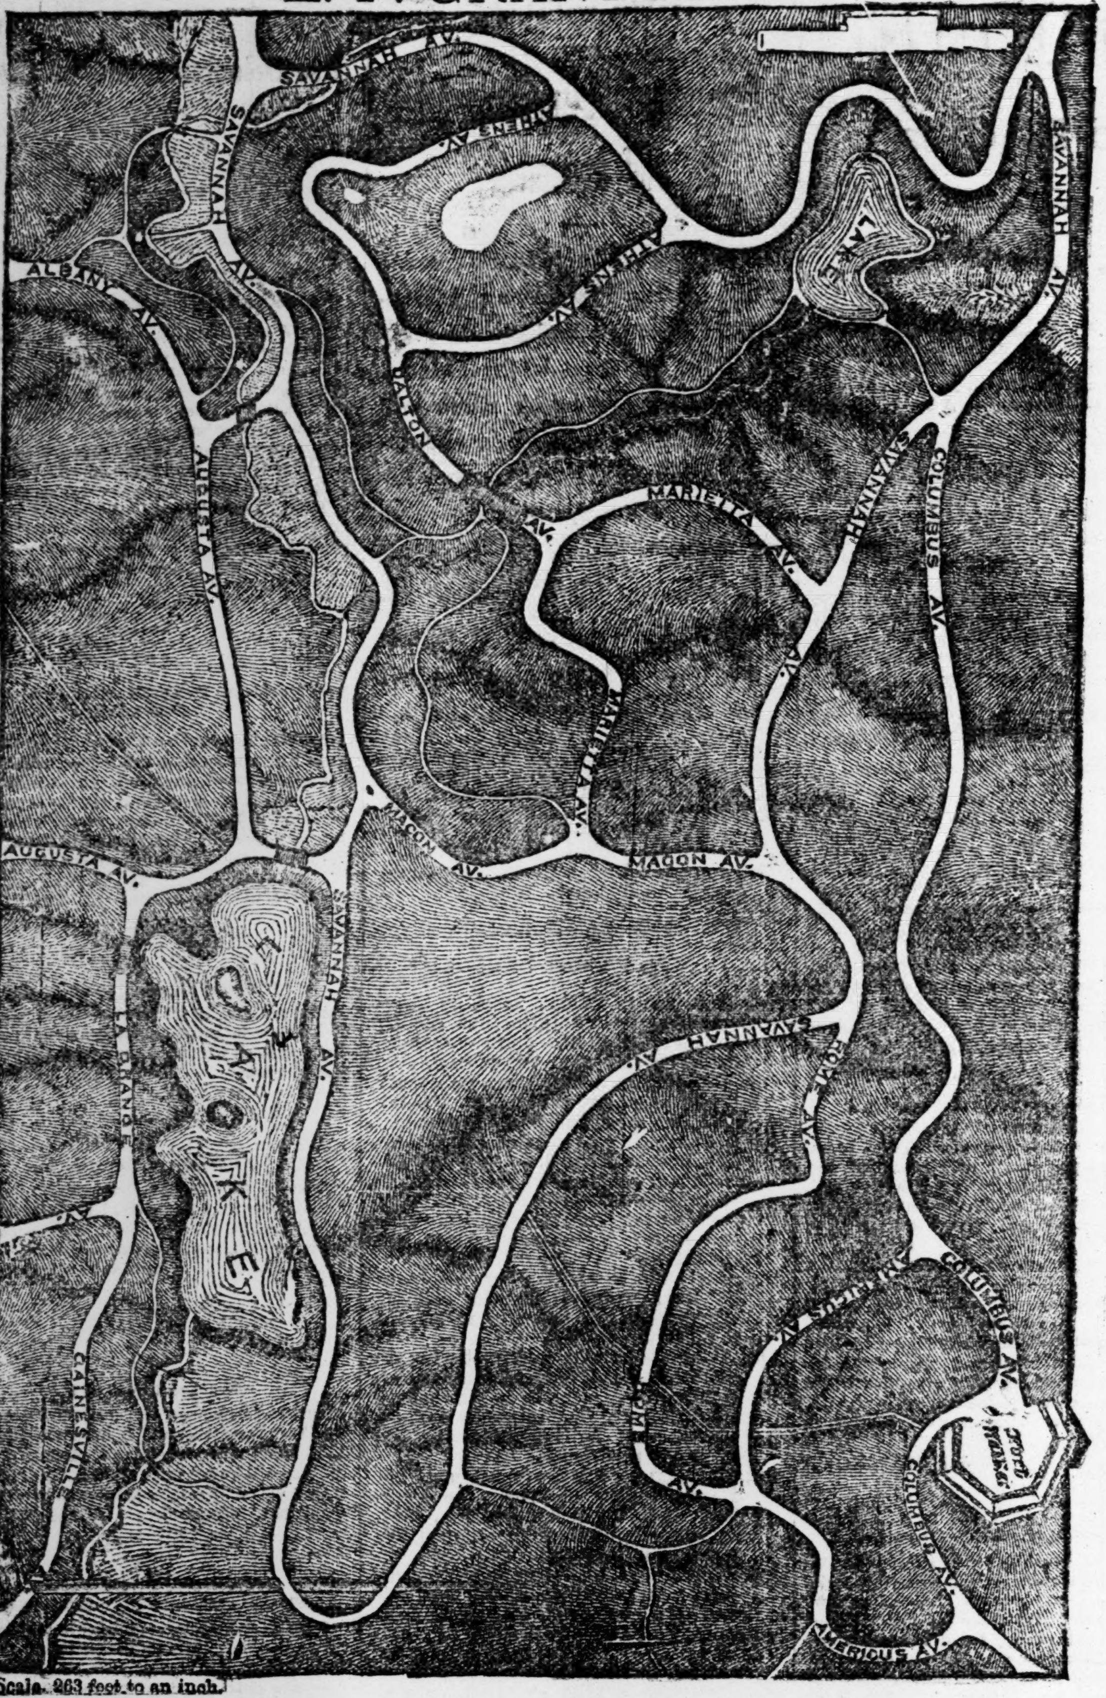
L. P. GRANT PARK.



Scale. 263 feet to an inch.

The only public park in Atlanta, containing 100 acres, and lying on the southeast edge of the corporation limits, is named for the munificent donor of the land—Colonel L. P. Grant, who gave it to the city in trust for park purposes. In a direct line it is about one mile and a quarter from the Central Passenger railroad station (the center of the city), but the street cars run probably a mile and a half distant from the depot.

The deed to the land was executed May 17th, 1883, and after preliminary surveys, active work was commenced with a moderate force on June 14th, and continued three or four months each year in the summer time. As parks require steady work for an indefinite time, the commission is still improving and beautifying the Grant park, and will continue to do so as rapidly as the appropriations from the city will permit.

The land is singularly well adapted for landscape purposes, covered with a superb native flora, with a varied and picturesque topography, abounding in fine springs (one of which has valuable mineral qualities) and clear running water. A line of heavy confederate breastworks runs diagonally across the south side of the park, starting from a strong, four gun battery (now known as Fort Walker) on the southeast corner—not far from where General Walker and General McPherson were killed in the great battle of July 22, 1864. With the limited appropriations, a great deal of work has been done since 1883. About four miles of fine drives have been graded and are in good order. These (as it is desired to make the place a park for the state as well as for the city) have been named for Georgia's principal cities—as Savannah, Augusta, Macon, Columbus, Rome, Brunswick, Griffin, Madison, etc. Between two and three miles of walks have been constructed, and others are on the way. The trees have been thinned out and grouped, lawns cleaned up and seeded, six rustic bridges built, about 3,000 feet of drain pipe laid, a fine pavillion, carriage shelter, spring house, a gentleman and ladies' closet built, a large bronze drinking fountain for horses set in the concourse, and a small one for ladies in the spring house. Fifty-two iron seats are on the grounds and many others will soon be provided, twelve iron hitching posts have been set, and a considerable quantity of shrubbery planted.

In its present rather crude condition the park is a really beautiful place. There is hardly a spot in the country where, in the spring, so fine a display of wild flowers can be seen—as azalias, hawholly, dogwood, catalpias, crabapple, etc. The commission is ambitious, and will press the work, intelligently and economically, until the park will become one of the most beautiful and wholesome resorts in the south. The rules of the commission are rigid. No one is permitted to pick the wild flowers or break the shrubbery or foliage. No shooting, no profane or impure language or conduct, intemperance, etc., will be allowed. This is provided for by the laws of the state and city, as the commission hope to make this pleasure ground a safe, free and pleasant resort for the people. Now, then, how to get there at present, a good driveway is via Hunter, Hill and Milledge streets. Anderson street will soon be open from Washington street and Capitol avenue, and the park Boulevard will probably be opened and graded from the northeast corner of the park to connect with the Boulevard to Ponce de Leon and Augier springs, and thence to Peachtree street and Peters park.

The street cars start near the Kimball house and the central passenger station, on the south side of the railroad tracks—one line running out Washington street and the other via Hunter street (by the capitol), Fair street by Oakland cemetery to Grant park, near the pavilion, in front of which runs "Serpentine walk." Walking westward from the pavilion Serpentine walk leads to the main carriage entrance, from which "Emerald walk" starts southward along "Willow brook," the border of the proposed Lake Abana, and up to Cherokee hill. The visitor, walking eastward from the pavilion, passes the sun dial, probably the finest in the world, and comes to the northeast entrance from which the "Long walk" runs in a direct line to Fort Walker, a heavy confederate earthwork, now reconstructed as it was during the war. A costly pedestal, presented by the Hallowell Granite company, stands in the center of the batteries, upon which it is hoped soon to place a statue of peace. In a few weeks two bronze lions will be mounted at the fort.

Directly in front of the pavilion a walk leads across Savannah and Athens avenues, connecting on the left with "Ladies walk" in Glen Mary, and by a bridge over "Fairy water" to the ladies' closet. On the right a walk runs near Athens avenue to the mineral spring on Savannah avenue.

A bronze figure, representing the angel at the pool of Bethesda, will soon be set near the spring at the head of Glen Mary.

All respectable people are cordially invited to visit the park, and it is hoped that they will find the place so agreeable that they will aid the commission, not only in preserving order, preventing depredation and defacement, but help in beautifying the place which belongs to them.

HE TALKS OF RAILROADS AND THINGS IN GENERAL.

The Building of the Road from Atlanta to the Sea Coast and the Benefits to be Derived Therefrom—Some Good Advice to the Knights of Labor—Other Interesting Topics.

There seems to be quite a commotion in the commercial elements. Our Georgia cities are waking up to their own dangers and seem determined to do something. Atlanta lost the Georgia Midland and has just discovered she can't control the railroads that center there, and now she is hunting for deep water of her own. Well, she does need deep water mighty bad and maybe it is better to take it at long taw than not have it at all. She will get her own shops if she gets nothing else, and the farmers along the line will be accommodated and maybe Darien will be revived or Hawkinsville get on a boom or some point on the Savannah river be built up. Railroads do help the country and I wish there was a depot within a hundred yards of my house. Atlanta is mad because Chattanooga ships plows and other things to Washington, in Wilkes county, for the same figures she ships them to Atlanta. There is some good reason for that, I reckon—and the reason is competing lines. St. Louis ships flour to Savannah for four cents less a barrel than she ships it to Atlanta and yet it goes right through Atlanta to get there. Competition from Baltimore by deep water does that. So it is competition that we all want—competition and no pooling. The big towns have gobbled up the little ones long enough. I am glad that the good old town of Washington can sell plows to her farmers as cheap as they could buy them in Atlanta. We want railroads everywhere. Augusta is going to build one to Chattanooga that will help the country and help Augusta, too, and then Washington will get her plows cheaper still. Athens seems likely to be boycotted, which is a pity, for she has worked hard to make herself a commercial center. Americus is hunting deep water, too, and expects to find it at Brunswick, and this makes Brunswick happy. To a man up a tree it is curious to note these visionary calculations. Some years ago Rome got up a boom to have the Coosa river opened to Mobile, and Mobile was equally excited, and it so happened that a big meeting was held in each town on the same day. The mayor of Rome made a speech, in which he said that corn was forty cents a bushel at Rome, and with an open river could be shipped to Mobile at ten cents a bushel, and then he read from a Mobile paper the price current of corn, and it was one dollar and a quarter a bushel. "There is seventy five cents a bushel profit on our corn," said he. The mayor of Mobile was making his speech, and told his people "they could go to Rome and buy corn at forty cents a bushel, and lay it down at home at a cost of fifty cents, including freight." But still both towns would be benefited and all the people along the line. We want all the railroads we can get, and we ought to encourage the men of money and enterprise to build them. Railroads have contributed more to the advancement of our state than all other causes combined. Some have made reasonable profits for their stockholders, and some have made nothing. There is not a prosperous merchant who has not made twice as much off his capital as any railroad in the state. When I remember all that the Central and the Georgia railroad and the West Point have done for us in the last forty years, it mortifies me to hear any man of position or influence denounce them as grinding monopolies who oppress the people. Lawyers encourage suits against them, and prejudice the jurymen with inflamatory speeches, and nothing but the supreme court prevents their utter bankruptcy from outrageous verdicts. If a brick fall off a building and kills a man, it is the act of God, and is called an accident and nobody is responsible; but if a car jumps a broken rail there is five, ten, or twenty thousand dollars to pay. It is a hard bargain, and it is a wonder that capitalists will build railroads. Here is a freshet that has damaged them immensely, and nobody cares except those who are delayed in freight or passage.

There is the little Rome road, that is just nineteen miles and 476 yards and two feet and six inches and a half long, that made Rome just what she is, and during this last freshet she had eleven hundred miles of her track under water. At least they say that her president said eleven or eleven hundred, they were not certain which. That road has been the best friend that Rome ever had or ever will have, and she has long since quit declaring dividends, for it takes all her earnings to keep up with the freshets, and yet there are malignant people to be found in Rome who will talk venomously about the oppressive freights of that monopoly. When the Central reaches out for more territory she is doing no more than our cities are doing. Sagacity, far-seeing sagacity is what builds up any enterprise or any town. Charleston has deep water, and imagined she needed nothing else. The truth is that commercial centers have no security of being perpetual if they rely on railways or deep water alone. Both together will not suffice, but it is manufactures that cities want. Atlanta is about taking one hundred thousand dollars in a wagon factory. Ten similar enterprises will be worth more to her permanent prosperity than any one railroad. Railroad centers are very lively, but they are not secure. Other centers loom up and cut off trade. Chattanooga has seven railroads and more deep water than she wants, but she made no progress until she became a great manufacturing center. Anniston is a way station, but her manufacturers have built her up the model city of the south, just so with Birmingham. Columbus, without her manufactories would hardly keep a postoffice. I wonder why our people don't give more attention to small enterprises of this kind? They all seem to make money when well managed. That chair factory at Marietta has made Mr. Brumby rich. Colonel Jones, of our town, has made lots of money competing with northern buggies and wagons. Railroads do nothing but carry. They produce nothing, manufacture nothing. What the south wants is manufactures of all kinds, little ones and big ones.

But if these Knights of Labor, these trade unions, or whatever they are, don't hold up a little and come to reason and common sense, there won't be any money put in anything, for the capitalists won't risk it. They would rather invest in state or national bonds, even at two per cent interest. I see that Ohio has recently placed some bonds at three and a half, and the reason given is the insecurity of money in ventures controlled by labor. The world is on the side of labor, but not to the extent that labor is now demanding. They have a right to quit and strike for higher wager and shorter time, but when they go to boycotting it is time to stop. We see that 3,000 shoemakers in Lynn, Massachusetts, have not only struck for higher wages, but will not let a manufacturer buy his family supplies in that town, and they have had to move away or starve. Now, suppose the negroes all around me were to dictate to me who I should hire and who I should not hire to work on my farm, or should make my hirelings quit work when the crop was in the grass, and, if I did not come to their terms, should stop my team on the road to town and turn it back empty. What is the difference between that and the present strikes? What is this country coming to when capital has to submit to such exactions? This is what I call the beginning of anarchy, and I rejoice that it has not begun here. I have consideration for labor and its societies, for corporation and protection, but not for defiance of law and wilful destruction of their employers' property. It is not an American idea, and I can't believe that Americans are at the bottom of it. I rejoice that this part of the south has not succeeded in inducing immigration from Castle Garden. "Set a beggar on horseback, and he will ride to the devil;" just so there are thousands of miserable people from all countries landing on our shores who fear not God nor regard man, and they are giving trouble at the north. The north and the west wanted them. Jay Gould wanted them. Now, let them keep them.

I had a long letter the other day from a man in Chattanooga, abusing me for reflecting on these strikes, and he wound up with a bitter denunciation of Joe Brown as the tyrant and bloodsucker, etc. And the same day I received one from Mississippi abusing me for saying that it was almost an impossibility for a man to make a million dollars in his lifetime and make it honestly. So I am between two fires, and reckon I am about right. There is no necessity for labor and capital to be at war and when they are both are to blame in most cases. Some capitalists can get along with laborers and have not only their respect, but love. But capital is generally hard-hearted and would enslave men if it could. One extreme provokes another, and so the innocent and unoffending must suffer with the lawless and desperate. There is a middle ground somewhere. Jay Gould never earned his two hundred millions fairly. Most every dollar he has got was earned by labor—earned and lost There are one hundred men in New York who are worth one thousand millions, and they never produced it. There are millions of toilers who are producing every day, and are worth nothing—no home of their own, no comforts, no security for old age or sickness, or fire or flood, or epidemic—no, nothing but a scanty living from day to day, and a despairing hope for the future. Who does not pity them? We can almost hear them sing:

> "Still one of Adam's heirs,
> Though doomed by chance of birth
> To dress so mean and eat the lean,
> Instead of the fat of the earth;
> To make such humble meals
> As honest labor can.
> A bone and a crust, with grace to God,
> And little thanks to man."

And who does not feel a bitter contempt for the inhumanity and selfishness of those > "Who every weekly score

> Docks labor's little mite;
> Bestows on the poor at the temple door,
> But robs them over night."

But labor will not accomplish any good by her present methods. The laws of the land must be respected. Then where is the remedy, and how shall labor secure its just reward? Ask the wisdom of the nation now assembled in Washington. They wrangle over the tariff, and commerce, and education, and appointments to office, and a thousand things, but they do nothing to pacify or encourage the toilers whose sweat is mingled with every fabric, every edifice, every industry in all this broad land. It looks like the members of congress are under the dominion of capital, and yet they fear the power of labor and will coquette with both as long as they can. I hear that they whisper to each other and shake their heads ominously and say: "Those poor fellows can vote and we have got to go slow."

Well, let them vote. Let them organize everywhere for protection according to law. Let them have a Parnell in every district and elect him; but let them respect persons and property all the time, and they will get aid and sympathy from thousands who will otherwise withhold it.

An Affectionate Sheep.

From the Greenesboro, Ga., Herald.

Mr. Henry Thompson owns a quartette of fine oxen, and during the past few weeks has had a sheep penned up with them. A few days ago the oxen were taken and driven for wood. No notice was taken of the sheep, which followed behind. It went with the wagon and returned. The next trip it got ahead of the oxen, and for three days now every trip that has been made, we have noticed the sheep walking along beside the oxen and seeming to be thoroughly cognizant of what was being done and deeply wrapped up in the work. Ordinarily sheep are very wild, but this one seems to be dead in love with the oxen.

"Take Us the Foxes That Spoil the Vines."

The wise man was right. Men never become bad at a jump. Not all at once do they fall into the pit of vice, but by degrees and from small beginnings. First, the little sins, the tender vines, are eaten by the little foxes, and after the little sins—the tender vines—are mastered, the hideous big, gnarly trunks, the lusty sins are easy work. The law of morals is the law of health; all things being created double, one over against the other; and so, men rarely lose their health at a stroke. Usually it is the little neglect, the slight indisposition, that ends in organic disease which becomes confirmed by the use of drugs. It is the slight cold, repeated and neglected, that ends in consumption or pneumonia; the gastric disturbance and billiousness that ends in confirmed dyspepsia and diseased liver; the continued malaria, dosed with quinine, that ends in enlarged and diseased spleen; the frequent recurring rheumatic twinges that end in diseased kidneys, and etc. The rule of wisdom is the rule of safety. Take the little foxes, the beginning of little diseases, with Humphrey's Homeopathic Specifics and while you cure them, the big ones never come, and your health is perfect.—Exchange.

Mr. Isaac C. Chapman, Druggist, Newburg, N. Y., writes us: "I have for the past years sold several gross of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I can say of it what I cannot say of any other medicine. I have never heard a customer speak of it but to praise its virtues in the highest manner. I have recommended it in a great many cases of Whooping Cough, with the happiest effects I have used it in my own family for many years; in fact, always have a bottle in the medicine closet ready for use."

NOT MUCH COFFEE.

THE BLOOD--ITS DISEASES--HOW CURED.

The most wonderful blood poison remedy ever compounded is B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm,) the healing qualities of which are truly phenomenal. Scientific research has failed so far to produce its equal. There is no claim that the ingredients of this great remedy are new; on the contrary, its component parts are all and favorably known to the medical world in their separate uses, but the combination of these ingredients were never attempted until the formula of B. B. B. was made. For Scrofula, Blood Poison, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Kidney Troubles, Female Complaints, etc., it is simply unapproachable, and as a true tonic it is unequaled. We do not expect the reader to believe all we say as to the unprecedented merits of this remedy, for there are so many able, yet unscrupulous advertisers that it would not be safe to regard everything said in an advertisement as true. Some of those column, double-column and whole page ad's remind us of a long-ago friend who traveled a great deal; that was before there were many railroads; and as all travelers those days had to do so he had to put up at night wherever night caught him. Consequently, sometimes he had to stop at places where the accommodations were not of the very best. He was a great lover of coffee, and coffee he would have; but, said he, in a very solemn tone, I have sometimes to drink a gallon of water to get a taste of coffee. In an ad page there is usually about as much genuine truth as coffee in our friend's gallon of hot water. For our part we would take the grain of coffee in the small French cup and have it well creamed. Give us quality and not quantity, and not over-much sweetened, especially with sorghum syrup (the productions of a prolific, morbid brain). Who can find a needle in a haystack? much less truth in some page ads! Wonderful times these; broad acres of the Sahara without an oasis. Give us the acre that will produce three bales, or a hundred and forty bushels of wheat instead. Yet this does not prove that every remedy is not as represented.

We only ask a trial before a doubting public, feeling confident that one bottle will establish its intrinsic value as a blood-purifier. We can only present a few certificates within this limited space, but in our "Book of Wonders" will be found more than enough to convince the most skeptical, and if then not satisfied we can show the original certificates, and also an unlimited number of persons who have been cured of some of the most noted cases of blood poison, etc., on record, by the use of B. B. B. Wherever this remedy is known it takes the lead.

A Doctor's Woes.

CRAWFORDVILLE, Ga., June 11, 1885.—For ten years have been suffering with muscular rheumatism. Patent medicines and physicians' prescriptions failed to give relief. Last summer I commenced the use of B. B. B., and experienced partial relief before using one bottle. I continued its use and gladly confess that it is the best and quickest medicine for rheumatism I have ever tried and I cheerfully recommend it to the public.

Texan Tattle.

* * * One of our customers left his bed for the first time in six months, after using only one bottle of B. B. B. He had scrofula of a terrible form, that had resisted all other treatment. B. B. B. now takes the lead in this section.

A Scarred Veteran.

Robert Ward, who lives near Maxey's, Ga., for ten or twelve years was almost a solid sore from head to foot.

For three years his appearance being so horribly repulsive he refused to let any one see him. The disease, after eating his flesh, commenced on his skull bones. He tried all doctors and medicines without benefit, and no one thought he could possibly recover. At last he began the use of B. B. B. and after using six bottles his sores were all healed and he was a sound man.

He looks just like a man who had been burned to death and then restored to life. The best men of the country know of this case, and several doctors and merchants have spoken of it as a most wonderful case.

She is Not Dead.

It has been reported that I was dead—but I am not.

For four years I have been afflicted with a severe case of blood poison, rheumatism and neuralgia. My flesh shrank away, my muscles seemed to dry up and form into little knots, joints were swollen and painful, and all concluded I must die. I have used five bottles of B. B. B., and I have gained 40 pounds of flesh, and am now as sound as any woman.

The Man and the Monkey.

"What ails you?" asked the man; "I see you are a sufferer, and can scarcely get along."

"Oh, you see," replied the monkey, "my madder she had what you call scrofula, very much scrofula. My farder he had heap sores, some big, some little sores; long time. They both took much medicine, and died; the sores was all they left me."

"Yes, yes," replied the man. "I see how it is. Your mother inherited her disease, scrofula, and your father caught his on the wing, and you inherited or was born with both complaints. But why pine away and die away when you can be cured?"

"I been done used over sixty bottles one drug store medicine. and it no good. Money all gone and sores here yet. Some doctors charge heap money, but no good."

"But my friend," said the man, "you got hold of the wrong medicine. Go to the drug store and get one bottle of B. B. B., and before using all of it you will feel better. It is a quick cure. It will cure all sorts of sores, scrofula, blood poison caught on the wing, itching humors, catarrh, blood and skin diseases and kidney troubles."

"I be so thankful for your kindness, and will go get B. B. B. today," replied the monkey.

A Kiss By Moonlight.

From time immemorial no one will pretend deny the fact that kisses have been held in high repute by both sexes—whether active or passive. It has been decided that a LEGAL KISS implies action on both parties: but when a lady simply consents to be kissed without action of her lips, it constitutes only a PASSIVE kiss—a sweet deprived of its nectar.

Snugly ensconced within a moss embowered and vine-clad verandah, and almost hid from view amid sweet-scented honeysuckles, was seated a fair Atlanta nymph, whose beautiful dark eyes and alabaster complexion and volumptous contour, seemed to DAZE the young gent by her side, who ever and anon, while circumnavigating her slender waist, gave her a BUSS and then a RE-BUSS, to the amazement of a pedestrian who happened to be passin that beautiful moonlight night. At that moment the lover was heard to ask: "My dear darling Sarah Jane, you are becoming more beautiful every day your eyes sparkle with more brilliancy; your once pale cheeks have been painted by the roseate hues of nature, and you seem to have entirely regained your health. Will you tell me the cause of the change?"

"I have simply used that wonderfully effective blood remedy known as B. B. B."

HE FLOOD GATES AJAR.

NCIDENTS PICKED UP FROM THE RECENT DELUGE.

he Beleaguered Cities—Animals Sailing Down the River—Strange Articles Unearthed—A Whole Family Drowned—One County Loses $1,000,000—On the Alabama River.

The recent floods in the Georgia and Alabama rivers were fruitful in incidents, while happily free from the great loss of life which it was at first feared, would result. In point of material damage, Rome and West Point suffered the most, the first city sustaining a loss of $300,000 and the latter $250,000. In West Point the waters invaded the whole town, submerging many buildings, and for a couple of days was presented the singular scene of steamboats plowing their way up and down the thoroughfares of the city. The isolation of Rome for three days from rail and telegraphic communication aroused fears of great disaster, but finally, when THE CONSTITUTION'S intrepid messenger had pushed his way through, he found that besides the incident loss to property, though heavy, no lives had been lost.

WASHING UP TOKENS OF THE PAST.

The flood was peculiarly fruitful in the revelations which it left behind it. Dr. S. M. Harp, of Cherokee county, in attempting to cross the Etowah river, at Steele's bridge, while the water was running over the road some distance from the bridge, rode into a deep hole, and in swimming out lost his "pill-bags." He and others went back to look for his medicine case, a few days later, and found the skeleton of a man. None knew who it could be, nor how or when it came there.

On Captain McAfee's Etowah river plantation, several mounds of black earth had been washed to view by the recent rains. They were dug down into a short distance and pieces of bones and ancient pieces of nicely carved pottery, etc., were unearthed. Among the bones were a human skull, pieces resembling animal bones, a deer's horn, etc. The entire upper portion of Captain McAfee's farm is almost covered with ancient pottery, Indian pipes and other things characteristic of the Indians. There was an Indian settlement near the place, years ago, and it is quite likely that many valuables have been buried with their dead. His loss by the recent freshet will amount to not less than two thousand dollars.

A singular circumstance occurred at Mrs. M. A. Mason's mill, in DeKalb county. A violent rain and hail storm occurred there in 1871. At that time Mr. Patrick Ray was at the mill grinding for Mr. Mason. Just before the rain and hail storm came on, Mrs. Ray placed in the spring branch a jar of butter, securely covered. The rain washed the jar and butter into the mill pond, where it has lain in the mud all these years that have intervened since then. The recent rains washed everything out of the pond except the bottom by breaking the rock portion of the dam, and the stone jar of butter was washed out and broken. Mr. William Ray being at the mill, remembered the circumstances of his mother having put the jar of butter in the spring branch and its having been washed in the pond. The butter was perfectly preserved.

A large flat boat was washed up at Cromer's mill, in Franklin county. It appears to be in a good state of preservation, and is the size of an ordinary ferry boat. The oldest inhabitant never heard of such a boat having been used on the pond.

The greatest variety of objects were unearthed, however, in Tumlin's mounds. These mounds are located on the north side of the Etowah river, in Bartow county, being three in number. The largest mound is some sixty-five feet high and measures around its base some eleven hundred feet. The others are each smaller—not more than one-fifth as as the largest. Many rious relics have been gathered om and around them for many years past. mong them are images of several kinds, supposed to be idols before which the makers owed down and rendered rites; pipes of various models, carved from stone and made of clay; various specimens of pottery, and many other curious things. These images are rather remarkable pieces of statuary, showing considerable skill in carving stone. The pipes used there are much on the same pattern as the modern smoker uses. The thin pottery shows much skill and evidences some knowledge of dyes. Near there have been found quantities of human bones, and in one place was exposed a vault from which the eyeless sockets of a grinning ghastly skeleton looked forth upon the world of two centuries of rest. There were also discs varying in size from a dime to a dollar, though somewhat thicker. These are scattered all over the ground. In one of the vaults was found a small piece of matting made of cane and exactly similar to a closely woven chair bottom. Upon this matting were small pieces of copper as long as a man's finger and almost as wide, upon which the skull of the dead rested. The mound is well worth seeing.

FLOATING DOWN THE RIVER.

Pigs, chickens, ducks and other small animals and birds were Wednesday and Thursday seen floating on small rafts around Rome. On many of these rafts were placed feed, which denoted the tender care of some who placed these unfortunates on the life-saving rafts. On Howard street a reporter saw two large hogs floating in this style contentedly basking in the sunshine, and as his boat neared the raft, they lazily raised their heads and saluted him with good natured grunts.

There is an island in the Ocmulgee river near Key's ferry, in Jasper county, where a large number of cows are pastured. During the freshet, the island overflowed, swept them all away, and a cow and young calf were found a half a mile below, on land unhurt.

A rabbit went floating down the Chattahoochee river, on a lot of trash last Friday evening. He sat serenely through the number of shots fired at him as he passed Fort Gaines, looking firmly ahead as if he intended to emigrate.

A WIFE'S REPLY.

The Rome Bulletin quotes a gentleman thus: "I have lost everything. I said to my wife at breakfast time, when you married me I was worth three or four thousand dollars. Now it is all gone.' 'Well,' said she, 'we have four boys, and we have good health. That's all we need."

Clark Sullivan spent a very pleasant night at Erin mills, in Shelby county, during the recent freshet. With a couple of negro boatmen he went over during the evening to the mill, which was about six feet under water. Here he got out and was standing on the miller's bed, in the office, over which the water was flowing to the depth of about two feet, when by some mistake or misadventure the negroes floated off and left him. The depth of the water prevented him from finding more comfortable quarters in the upper story, and he spent the night in that situation, with the rats around him and the hourly expectation that the waters might rise and carry the mill off.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

The Sparta Ishmaelite tells of the narrow escape of a passenger train from destruction: When the train neared the trestle at Carr's station, Engineer Lee looked out to see if everything was right The water was running high up on the trestle, but it was in position and he pulled on it. When the engine struck the frame he felt it give way. There was no help for it but to put on steam and hasten across. He did this, and when the last car was safely over the trestle rose up and floated away. The structure had been undermined by the water and was held together only by the iron and upper timber.

Dan Pope, a colored man, living in Jasper county, at Goodman's ferry, lost his wife and four children. The house they were occupying was situated on the bank of the Ocmulgee river, and some time during Tuesday night they discovered that the house was surrounded by water, and tried to make their escape in a small boat. It ran against a stump, capsizing it and all of them were drowned except Dan. None of the bodies have been recovered.

ONE COUNTY LOSES A MILLION DOLLARS.

The Cherokee Advance claims that that county was damaged to the extent of one million dollars. The waters were two feet higher than ever before known. Captain McAfee and W. M. McCandless about $2,000 each; M. A. and Allen Keith's places about $3,000; Tilman Chamblee $2,500; N. J. Perkins $1,000; Samuel Pasco Newton, Darby J. M. and J. C. Richards $1,000 each; Benj. Purcell $600; B. F. Holcombe and Murphy Bishop $300 each; A. W. Roberts, in Forsyth county, $1,000; M. M. Donald, William Hogan, J. R. Biddy and V. B. Hill $500 each.

Bottom and uplands are damaged twenty-five per cent and upwards in Cross Roads district. The Franklin and McDonald gold mines were not greatly damaged, as the company was prepared for the flood. The water, however, came within seven feet of the top of the working shaft. W. S. Epperson, T. M. White and Captain J. B. Richards' lands are damaged about $250 each; J. D. Howell, S. L. Coker, R. W. Green, R. R. Frieze, $500 each; L. J. Green, $1,000; Z. Nix is thought to be benefited $600. The lands on Shoal Creek and its tributaries were greatly damaged, especially those of C. M. Keeter, John K. Moore, Mrs. Hannah Timmons, B. E. Payne, J. M. and T. J. White, J. A. and D. P. Lusk, and Z. T. Timmons from "Dan to Beersheba," in sums of from $500 to $1,000. The lands in the Salacoa valley are all damaged more or less, except W. F. Keith's, which is thought to be benefited. Col. Hutcherson's and Jos. Barron's loss about $2,000 each. Mr. Hightower, T. A. Young, G. W. Jefferson, Mr. Richardson, S. Cooley, B. Thompson, A. G. Collins are injured $50 to $500 each. Dr. Speir is thought to be damaged $5,000. The damage to the farms of Col. Fields, R. C. and C. S. Conner is estimated at from $500 to $1,500 each. The Brewster farm $2,500, Eli Lovinggood $6,000. Gov. Brown's place is damaged $3,000.

The washing away of bridges will cost Gwinnett county $18,000. Many other counties are in proportion.

SOME PEOPLE BENEFITED.

The Cartersville Courant holds up the bright side of the picture by showing that many persons have been benefited, especially those who own river bottoms. The same may be said of most of the creek bottoms. On Colonel Tom Milner's river farm, there is deposited a sediment that is as rich as manure. The same is true of Dr. Baker's and General Young's river farms. There are similar accounts of others. On Pettit's creek, Colonel Howard's beautiful meadows are increased in value from $2 to $5 per acre. Dick Clayton's land, nearly all of which was under water, is benefited greatly. Billy Hood's is similarly helped. These are instances. There are many others in the same condition.

SOME ALABAMA INCIDENTS.

Three young men, Flemming, Felder and Smith, chartered, or rather cabbaged two skiffs and proceeded across the surging deep to rescue rabbits from the drift wood and tree tops. They were successful in the rabbit business, capturing a dozen or more, all of which were dead or in the last stages. While the hunters were in the midst of the exhilirating fun of picking up dead rabbits, Smith's boat sprung a leak, threw the occupant in the wet up to the chin and sunk in a minute. Fleming and Felder mistrusted their own craft, made a stroke or two and reached the friendly tree which holds the high water board with the suggestive words, "New Home," in big letters. By the aid of this board they scrambled up the tree, and for two hours there they stayed, giving a free show to all beholders on the banks, looking like strayed monkeys. Smith managed to reach a tree some distance away from his companion, and there they remained until two gentlemen went out and brought them safely to the old home, the "new home," in the language of Fleming, being too "monotonous."

The trip of the Florence T. on the river from Montgomery to Selma was thrilling. An account says:

At the Turner place we heard loud cries, and sent off a boat to a knoll a few hundred yards distant, where were found eighteen negroes without shelter or food. The cold, driving rain necessitated the removal of one woman with a child a few days old. We took all aboard for more secure places.

At the Cox place we next saw people on the piazza ringing their farm bell. A boat went ashore over fearful breakers, and found two negroes in the house, where the water was two feet deep. Eight children were in Pratt's large barn, with no rations and almost no clothes. The telephone wires there were down.

The First Sign

Of failing health, whether in the form of Night Sweats and Nervousness, or in a sense of General Weariness and Loss of Appetite, should suggest the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is most effective for giving tone and strength to the enfeebled system, promoting the digestion and assimilation of food, restoring the nervous forces to their normal condition, and for purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood.

Failing Health.

Ten years ago my health began to fail. I was troubled with a distressing Cough, Night Sweats, Weakness, and Nervousness. I tried various remedies prescribed by different physicians, but became so weak that I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. My friends recommended me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which I did, and I am now as healthy and strong as ever.—Mrs. E. L. Williams, Alexandria, Minn.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, that it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease. I have also prescribed it as a tonic, as well as an alterative, and must say that I honestly believe it to be the best blood medicine ever compounded.—W. F. Fowler, D. D. S., M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

Dyspepsia Cured.

It would be impossible for me to describe what I suffered from Indigestion and Headache up to the time I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was under the care of various physicians and tried a great many kinds of medicines, but never obtained more than temporary relief. After taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for a short time, my headache disappeared, and my stomach performed its duties more perfectly. To-day my health is completely restored.—Mary Harley, Springfield, Mass.

I have been greatly benefited by the prompt use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It tones and invigorates the system, regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, and vitalizes the blood. It is, without doubt, the most reliable blood purifier yet discovered.—H. D. Johnson, 383 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

RELIEF

Forty Years a Sufferer from

CATARRH.

Wonderful to Relate.

"For FORTY YEARS I have been a victim to CATARRH—three-fourths of the time a sufferer from EXCRUCIATING PAINS ACROSS MY FOREHEAD and MY NOSTRILS. The discharges were so offensive that I hesitate to mention it, except for the good it may do some other sufferer. I have spent a young fortune from my hard earnings during my forty years of suffering to obtain relief from the doctors. I have tried patent medicines----every one I could learn of—from the four corners of the earth, with no relief. And AT LAST (57 years of age) have met with a remedy that has cured me entirely—made me a new man. I weighed 128 pounds and now weigh 146. I used thirteen bottles of the medicine, and the only regret I have is that being in the humble walks of life, I may not have influence to prevail on all catarrh sufferers to use what has cured me—GUINN'S PIONEER BLOOD RENEWER.

IT CURED HIS COUGH.

And it Will Cure Anybody's Cough.

Read the following testimonial of a prominent South Carolinian about Taylor's Sweet Gum and Mullein:

WEDFIELD, S.C., March 4.—Dr. Walter A. Taylor, Dear Sir: I was attacked during the month of November with a severe cold and cough. After using everything without success, I was recommended a bottle of your Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein. After using one bottle and a half of the same I am almost entirely cured; and I should advise any one laboring under "the cough" to use it at once. Thanking you for this remedy, I remain very respectfully, J. H. DARBY.

TAYLOR'S
CHEROKEE REMEDY

Of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

The sweet gum, as gathered from a tree of the same name, growing along the small streams in the Southern States, contains a stimulating expectorant principle that loosens the phlegm producing the early morning cough, and stimulates the child to throw off the false membrane in croup and whooping-cough. When combined with the healing mucilaginous principle in the Mullein plant of the fields, presents in TAYLOR'S CHEROKEE REMEDY OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN the finest known remedy for Coughs, Croup, Whooping-Cough and Consumption; and so palatable any child is pleased to take it.

Ask your druggist for it. 25c and $1.00 sizes. If he does not keep it, we will pay, for one time only, express charges on large size bottle to any part of the U. S. on receipt of $1.00.

PHILAD'A., Dec. 6, 1884.

DEAR SIRS.—I have used Johann Hoff's Malt Extract for the past five years in my private practice, and have found it to be the best health-restoring beverage and tonic nutritive known. I have found it especially good in persons convalescing from fever, in cases of dyspepsia, for mother's nursing, and in cases of weakly children and also in lung troubles. My attention was drawn by the immense importation semi-monthly, and about a million of bottles imported by you have passed my inspection in the Custom House satisfactorily for the past five years. Yours respectfully, W. W. LAMB, M. D.,
Chief Drug Inspector U. S. Port Philadelphia.

THE FORGED WILL.

THE STORY OF MRS. MARIE P. EVANS.

Accused of Forging the Will of Mrs. Myra Clarke Gaines—Born in Luxury, Reared in Affluence, Married in Royal Style, and Finally Reduced to Pinching Poverty.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 10.—The arrest of Mrs. Marie P. Evans, and her incarceration in prison under a bond of $20,000, has caused a sensation in the aristocratic circle of which she was a member. The charge upon which she was arrested was that of forging the will, which purported to convey all the property of the late Maria Clark Gaines to herself. It will be remembered that when Mrs. Gaines died two wills were presented for proof. By one of these wills she disposed of her property to her lawful heirs, her grandchildren, creating her son-in-law and W. H. Wilder, her long-time attorney and agent, the executors of her will. This was a nuncupative will, drawn by a notary public and attested by the regular number of witnesses. It was essentially defective in form and could not be admitted in probate. So it was decided by Judge Houston, of the civil district court, and affirmed by the supreme court of the state. Another will was offered for probate, in the olographic form, purporting to be signed by the deceased on the day before her decease. That will bequeathed the bulk of her estate to Mrs. Marie Evans, with a large legacy to her mother, Mrs. Perkins. This was pronounced by the opposing parties a forgery. The case has been decided adverse to Mrs. Evans, but is now under appeal.

A STORY OF OLD LOUISIANA LIFE.

Mary Perkins Linton Evans was thirty years ago, the greatly admired and much courted daughter of Dr. Jehu Perkins, who, with his twin brother—also a Dr. Perkins—cultivated the largest sugar plantation in East Baton Rouge, and were greatly esteemed through the Florida parishes for the princely hospitality which they dispensed, as well as for their great enterprise, intelligence and success in the first successful experiment to cultivate cane on a large scale on the highlands. On their plantation—Richland it was called—they employed about one hundred and fifty slaves, and their sugar mill was one of the most costly structures, in which had been collected all the modern improvements in machinery for the refining of sugar.

The brothers Perkins were natives of Indiana; had emigrated fifty years ago to Louisiana; settled in Bayou Sara, and practiced medicine with great success. Having accumulated some means, they purchased the Richland place, with a large stock of slaves, and prosecuted the culture of the plantation with great success, establishing a large credit and wide reputation for their energy and skill. So great was the esteem in which they were held by the parishioners that the brothers were frequently called upon to serve in high positions of public trust and of political responsibility and duty. Dr. John Perkins marrying Miss Leake, of West Feliciana, of a leading family in that parish, became the father of Marie. She was their only child, and was fondled and reared amid unbounded luxury and indulgence by the twin brothers. As she stated in her testimony, her wishes were always anticipated, and she emerged into womanhood without ever experiencing a care or unsatisfied aspiration. With a bright intellect, and through the instruction and training of the best instructors money could command, she became an accomplished young lady, especially in music and the languages. Regarded as a rich heiress, she commanded the devotion of a large train of suitors and admirers. Her sagacious and prudent parents and guardians were very careful and observant of her relations to her numerous suitors lest she might make a mesalliance. Finally, however, a young gentleman was found in the rich cotton section of the northern part of the state, of one of the famous artistocracy of Natchez, upon whom both parents and the young lady fixed their choice as suitable mate.

THE LOVER FOUND.

This was young Duncan Linton, the heir of a very wealthy planter, who had retired from this city, after a very successful career as a merchant. There was a brilliant wedding, and the young couple departed for Paris, with letters of credit for unlimited amounts. Here they set up in splendid apartments, and led a gay, luxurious and expensive life, mingling in the best society, the lady giving much study to the culture of music and the society of great operatic artists. The husband, however, cultivated other tastes, frequented the clubs, the race grounds, and participated largely and deeply in all the amusements and dissipations of wealthy young men in Paris. His income exceeded thirty or forty thousand dollars a year, which he and his wife expended with a lavish hand. When the cloud of civil war lowered in the horizon the Lintons adopted the counsel of their friends and returned to Louisiana to look after their large interests, bringing with them the equipment of a large establishment, which they set up on Royal street, and kept open house, Mrs. Linton giving numerous balls, musical soirees and other entertainments. Her husband in the meantime had repaired to his plantations in the northern part of the state, collecting his cotton and slaves in a locality as far removed as possible from the apprehended seat of war. With this burden of care and labor the health of Linton broke down, and he again retired to his old haunts in Paris. Here his ailment developed into a fatal form, and after a lingering sickness he departed this life.

DISTURBED BY WAR.

The enterprising wife, however, remained in this city until the crash of the Federal approach and occupation, when she boxed up her costly furniture, ornaments, library and other equipment of her household, and conveyed them to a friend's establishment at Tangipahoa, on the Jackson railroad. The cotton of her husband had been transported to what was believed to be a safe place in the interior, where it did not, however, escape the general ravage of the state by the cotton thieves, who, following the federal army, or profiting by their protection, managed to devastate the whole cotton region of the south.

It was the seizure and robbery of this cotton upon which the widow of Linton based her claim against a bank of this city and the federal government, which she has been engaged for several years in prosecuting with great zeal and persistency, spending much time in Washington, where she formed a close intimacy with Mrs. Gaines, whose qualities of persistency and indomitable will in the pursuit of what she believed to be her just rights, won her sympathy. This intimacy became very cordial and confidential, much to the annoyance and apprehension of Mrs. Gaines's natural heirs. It continued until shortly before Mrs. Gaines's death. Not long before that event there were written proofs that this intimacy was disturbed by very capricious ebulitions on the part of Mrs. Gaines in letters to Mrs. Linton and her mother, expressing the most sincere affection for and confidence in them, and of the same date writing to her lawful heirs and attorneys that she had lost all confidence in them. Her second husband is visiting France to look after her husband's effects. Mrs. Linton returned to the United States, and while sojourning in Philadelphia accepted the hand of a young gentleman named Evans, of a very respectable family, and was married to him. Purchasing a small farm in Jefferson parish, they began housekeeping in a modest and frugal way, the husband obtaining employment as a clerk or bookkeper in a mercantile house in this city. A few years ago they moved to Mobile, where they were again established in a suburban farm, and the husband as a clerk in the city. This marriage proved to be a happy and congenial and a remarkably productive one, as the lady has been the happy mother of several twins and even triplets.

The cares of household and family could never withdraw Mrs. Evans from the zealous prosecution of her claims against the bank and the government or from every effort to realize the hopes which Mrs Gaines had so oftrn excited of participating in the large fortune which would result from the success of her long litigation.

GRAND OPENING

—OF—

SPRING MILLINERY

—AT—

REGENSTEIN'S MILLINERY EMPORIUM,

(SURPRISE STORE)

MONDAY, TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12, 13, 14.

ALL ARE CORDIALLY INVITED.

TO MY PATRONS.

I desire to inform my friends, patrons and the public generally, that I have issued NO INVITATION CARDS this season, and adopt this method of cordially invitating ALL to attend this my

GRAND OPENING.

Which, in every respect, will be the real opening of the season.

BY WAY OF EXPLANATION.

I wish to say to the many ladies who visited my stores during the past week and requested to see my Imported Hats and Bonnets, that, as much as I disliked to refuse their requests as I did, in every instance, yet I COULD NOT consistently do otherwise.

You all will readily understand that the expense connected with the Importation of these real

FRENCH IMPORTED HATS

Is VERY LARGE, besides our Mme. GROSKORTHE spent nearly a month in the "World's Fashion Headquarters" hunting for the Elegant and Artistic in Millinery, and all this necessitates us to GUARD these Pearls of

ART IN MILLINERY

Against the eager gaze of would-be competitors until NOW, OUR OPENING, when I invite all to come and see and judge for themselves whether these Gems are not by far the BRIGHTEST, the RICHEST, and yet the least costly of any in our city.

A RARE TREAT

For those ladies who appreciate and enjoy that which is really artistic in Millinery, the skillful blending of colors, of harmonizing effects, besides the mechanical accuracy of the master hand, this, my

GRAND OPENING

Will be a RARE TREAT. I have spared no money, no time or pains to show to Atlanta's fair maids and matrons Millinery which they can well compare with that of any city, north, south, east or west!

Among my patterns will be found the work of Eugenie Pariset, Mmes. Virot, Gemeau and several other Millinery lights of Paris, besides the unrivalled work of our own Mme. Grosskorth, modiste and designer, assisted by a corps of twenty superior Milliners.

GRAND DISPLAYS.

French Flowers and Pompons. Embroidered Crepes and Mulls, Imported and Domestic Ribbons, Silks, Satins and Laces, Velvets. Ruching and Veilings, Parasols, Hankerchiefs, etc., etc.

FOR THREE NIGHTS ONLY.

I will have my stores open on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next until nine o'clock.

All vistors will be presented with a souvenir on the Opening Days.

ANY SLAVE OF THE MINE

May Find the Rough Gem, but it is the Cutting that Reveals its Heart of fire. It is the setting that Makes it

A Jewel to Hang at the Ear of Time.

There are stores and stores. Some are dingy, uninviting and lifeless; the goods are old, unsightly, feeble; the prices high—can't be otherwise where everything is so dead. It is our aim to be the reverse of all this. It is so much more satisfactory where you can buy with everything clean and attractive. We have everything in fine order and this should have its weight.

Although the weather was unfavorable several days last week, still our business was away above what we expected and it warrants us in saying that we have opened up the right course to attract trade, by offering to the public superior goods at extremely low prices. Confidence is a big thing with the buyer, and the public knows us like a book.

We don't mean that we will create bargains at your command, but we do say we have created them ourselves. We ask a careful consideration of what we have here today. There are bargains we are offering never heard of in Atlanta. Then we treat everybody alike. There are no class distinctions with us. Poet, prince or peasant are accorded the same welcome within our doors.

THE LADIES OF ATLANTA AND VICINITY

Are given an opportunity this week of seeing an unusual display of beautiful frabrics adapted for Spring and Summer costumes. The exhibition has been pronounced by everybody of good judgment to be one of extraoadinary merit, not only on account of the excellent taste evident in its selection, which was personally made by the head of the firm, but also on account of the wonderful variety of combinations in rare Novelty goods, many oriental, and original effects being confined exclusively to us. It is impossible to clearly describe fine goods in an advertisement where there are many kinds, each one almost unlimited in quantity. A personal examination is far more satisfactory. It is a pleasure to show our goods to all, and in mentioning this it is our pleasure to invite you to what we are proud to say is the finest exhibition of Dress Goods ever made in Atlanta.

DAVID H. DOUGHERTY & CO.

AN IMPORTANT ITEM:

Customers who are accustomed to trade with us regularly, as well as strangers, are reminded that we are NEVER undersold. We KNOW our prices oftentimes lower than any house in the south.

AT THE HEAD!

TEN CENTS

For a White Plaid Dress Goods. This is the biggest drive ever offered by a Georgia house. They were bought in a job lot, or we could not sell them for less than fifteen cents. We stand right at the head in White Goods both in variety and prices.

ONLY 10 CENTS

For a beautiful White Plaid Bookfolded Nainsook, selling by others at 15 cents. Such bargains as this keep us crowded, but read and see what else we offer.

CORDED PIQUES

At 25 to 35 cents—goods 20 per cent higher elsewhere, and the same goods we sold last season for more money.

A DECIDED HIT.

In Victoria Lawns, pretty enough for a queen, at 8½ and 10 cents per yard. At the same price we sell White and Colored Soft Mulls, Persian Lawns, white and colored, dotted, figured and Swiss in most desirable patterns.
